U. S. Intervention Held 'Last Hope' In G. M. C. Strike

C.I.O. Predicts Walkout in 69 Factories of Company.

Situation Worries Michigan Governor

By the United Press.

Detroit, Jan. 5.—Government mediation tonight appeared to be the only line of action that can prevent open warfare between the United Automobile Workers of America and the General Motors Corporation, greatest automotive concern in the world.

As President Roosevelt conferred on the labor situation with Secretary Frances Perkins, U. A. W. A. President Homer Martin met with his "board of strategy" and announced that more and more strikes would be called as long as General Motors refused to recognize the union.

And in New York the Herald Tribune reported that Alfred P. Sloan, jr., President of General Motors, who left there tonight for Detroit, said as he departed:

"Let them pull the workers out. That's the only way I know to find out how strong the union is."

He was further quoted as saying: "Nobody knows how many of our employes belong to the union. We don't know. They don't know. Nobody knows."

Already 13 of the corporation's 69 plants were closed and nearly 45,000 of its employes were out of work. The latest plant to be closed by sit-down strikes were those of the Fisher Body Corporation and Chevrolet at Janesville, Wis., which shut down late today.

A general strike in the entire General Motors automotive empire, scattered over 14 States, was predicted a "virtual certainty" by an official of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization after a conference on the situation at Washington.

Gov. Murphy Worried.

President Roosevelt evaded questions and said his conference with Secretary Perkins was only on general questions, but Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan indicated increasing concern by frequent telephone conversations with General Motors and union leaders.

The U. A. W. A. "board of strategy" was in almost constant session, but as yet had announced no definite answer to a statement yesterday by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., General Motors president, flatly refusing the union's demands for "national" collective bargaining and denouncing the U. A. W. A. as a "group of labor politicians."

At Flint, Mich., where a conference of 300 delegates from 10 cities, in which the U.A.W.A. has organized local unions in General Motors plants, met Sunday and conferred unlimited power on the "board of strategy," strikers in two Fisher body plants were quiet and awaited action on a Circuit Court injunction designed to oust them.

While the paralysis of strikes in General Motors continued to spread it was learned that strikes of 14,500 workers in glass factories had begun to affect other major producers through shortage of safety glass.

Cram's Automotive Reporting Agency said the Ford Motor Co. already had been forced to curtail production because of glass shortage and that Chrysler would be affected soon. General Motors, the agency said, had about an 18-day supply of glass on hand.

May Unite.

As the situation throughout the automobile industry neared a showdown, reports grew more persistent that all the "big three" manufacturers might join a general anti-union battle which might lead to a widespread lockout. These reports, however, could not be confirmed, although it was known that representatives of the three—General

Dewey Will Ask G. M. C. to Meet Union Leaders

Miss Perkins Attacks Sloan, Lewis for Exchange of Letters.

By William V. Nessly.

Government proposals for a conference of General Motors executives and officials of the United Automobile Workers of America will be put before William S. Knudsen, vice president of the huge automobile corporation, in Detroit today by James F. Dewey, Labor Department conciliator, it was learned here yesterday after the impending general strike in the automobile industry had been a subject of discussion at a Cabinet meeting and in conferences of President Roosevelt and his advisers.

Accumulated evidence of Federal interest in averting a general strike in the industry followed a report that Knudsen had agreed to meet the labor leaders. Secretary of Labor Perkins, after hailing the agreement to confer as a hopeful sign, later said the announcement had been based on erroneous transmission of a report to her from Dewey.

After Miss Perkins had conferred during the morning with the President on the spreading walkout, it was a topic of general discussion at the regular weekly meeting of the Cabinet in the afternoon. She added that Dewey will urge Knudsen today to agree to such a meeting.

Dewey already has obtained the consent of union officials to meet Knudsen.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which is backing the auto workers' union, was in close touch with the developments, but declined to make any statement. He was receiving regular reports from Homer Martin, president of the union, on the developments but would not discuss them.

The labor secretary took occasion to criticize an exchange of public statements by Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, and Lewis. Sloan had defied attempts to unionize his plants, declaring he would not recognize any one organization as the sole bargaining agency for all employes, and Lewis had reiterated demands of the workers for unionization.

"The exchange of letters in a family quarrel seldom does any good," the secretary said to newspapermen, "even if there is a cer-

Ashurst Asks U. S. Control Of Hours, Pay

Would Cover Commerce, Agriculture and Industry.

By Robert C. Albright.

A general movement for a constitutional amendment to bridge the gap in Federal and State control over wages and hours left by the Supreme Court's New York decision crystallized yesterday at the Capitol with apparent labor support.

The constitutional route to control over working conditions, coupled with extension of Federal authority in the fields of agriculture, commerce and industry, will be proposed in a joint resolution introduced in the Senate today by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The development came as labor and farm legislation dominated a landslide of 2,500 new bills introduced in the House as the Congressional legislative mill began to grind. The Senate's grist will not begin to flow until noon today, when Ashurst's resolution will be followed by a flood of labor and farm legislation, including a bill to extend to products of child labor and employes working more than 30 hours a week, provisions imposed by the prison-made goods law upheld Monday by the Supreme Court.

Schwellenback Sponsor.

The child labor and 30-hour week measure will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Lewis B. Schwellenback (Democrat), of Washington. On the other side of the Capitol, Chairman William P. Connery, of the House Labor Committee, said he will press for enactment of a 30-hour week bill, with provisions licensing interstate business and a measure to tax industrial electric power.

Meantime, the long-awaited farm tenant bill made its bow in the House, sponsored by Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, and providing for a Farmers' Home Corporation to administer aid to farm tenants, financed by annual appropriations of $50,000,000 for the next ten years.

Senator Ashurst's announcement he will seek to give the Federal Government a green light in the field of wages and hours regulation followed earlier statements by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson and by Speaker William B. Bankhead advocating such a course, as against any attempt to curb the power of the court.

Lewis to Make Fight.

Coincidentally, it was learned President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, will make a personal fight for a wages and hours amendment. As the United Mine Workers were whipping into final form their legislative program, including a substitute for the invalidated Guffey coal law, Labor's Non-Partisan League, with which Lewis is affiliated, was reported organizing a legislative bureau to participate actively in the swelling labor lobby.

The movement for a wages and hours amendment took on Administration color as Senator Ashurst, who remained quiet last year during the independent drive to curtail the power of the Supreme Court by legislative enactments, struck out yesterday in opposition to any such "indirect" method of establishing Federal control.

"Some eight or nine propositions or approaches have been advanced in various parts of the country, looking toward attempting to do by circumlocution and indirection what my amendment directly proposes, but it would be unsatisfactory to the American people and contrary to our form of government for Congress to attempt to add to its powers, otherwise than by amendment to the Constitution," said Ashurst.

Up to States.

"Any attempt to amend the Constitution by an act of Congress is a vain gesture, a brutum fulmen, an 'empty noise,' and would do nothing more than generate protracted litigation," added the colorful Senate Judiciary chairman. "Frankness and manliness would seem to suggest that we employ the direct method of submitting to the States,

Congress Set To Hear Talk By President

Both Houses Organize; Roosevelt to Read Message Today.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Organizing their respective bodies yesterday in an atmosphere of general harmony and good spirit—with minor exceptions — members of House and Senate today will meet in joint session to canvass the Presidential electoral vote and an hour later hear President Roosevelt deliver his message on the state of the Union.

The appearance of the President before the overwhelmingly Democratic Congress at about 2 p. m., the first since his triumphant re-election in November, is expected to be greeted with a loud outburst of cheers. This would be in contrast with the quiet and order which prevailed during the opening day's session. Indeed, the meeting of the House—usually a boisterous group—was remarkably orderly and quiet.

The highlights of the Presidential message remained a secret last night, but it was generally believed Mr. Roosevelt in his appearance before Congress this year would avoid the acrimonious and politically fighting tone which he used on the same occasion a year ago.

Message Held Secret.

Anything said about this message in advance of its delivery must be speculative. Nevertheless, the view prevailed Mr. Roosevelt would devote a goodly part of the address to a discussion of foreign affairs, saving for his Inaugural Address on January 20 an outline of his program in domestic matters.

The President's message will be comparatively short, approximately 2,000 words, and will not take more than 20 minutes to deliver. Fiscal recommendations for the remainder of this fiscal year and the 12 months starting July 1 will be contained in the President's Budget Message, which will go to Congress on Friday.

Mr. Roosevelt revealed yesterday he will send a special message to Congress next week on reorganization and business management of the Federal Government. He is expected to deal with other specific proposals from time to time during the session in similar special messages, as his been his custom.

The view that the President would emphasize the ominous war clouds hanging over the world was based in part on the anxiety of Mr. Roosevelt and State Department officials to assure the invulnerability of American neutrality. The President conferred late yesterday with Acting Secretary of State R. Walton Moore and Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Key Pittman regarding quick action on a resolution forbidding arms shipments to Spain. This matter became increasingly urgent when a few minutes later it was revealed that the Robert Cuse shipment of airplanes already was being loaded aboard a Spanish ship and that new licenses for $4,507,000 of armaments for Spain had just been issued to another exporter.

May Seek Quick Action.

As a result of these developments it is possible that an effort may be made before or after the President speaks today to get final Congressional action, under a suspension of the rules, on the resolution forbidding arms shipments to Spain. But whether the final action is taken today or later in the week, amending the neutrality act by embargoing arms shipments to Spain will be the first order of Congressional business.

This matter will be disposed of before Congress even turns to look at the more than 2,000 bills introduced on the opening day, proposals for dealing with the abolition of child labor and other abuses in industry; farm tenancy; appropriations and the score or so other major subjects which will hold the attention of Congress for the next six or seven months.

Convening of the Seventy-fifth Congress yesterday marked the first time in history a Congress has assembled and organized prior to Inauguration of the President whose first two years of tenure is concurrent. Aside from that, only one other feature distinguished yesterday's opening session from similar

In anticipation of Congressional action, exportation of planes and armaments to war-torn Spain was being expedited along the Brooklyn waterfront yesterday. Five crated planes (indicated by arrow) on lighters, awaiting transfer to Spanish freighter Mar Cantabrico, were identified as those recently sold to the Spanish government. Richard L. Dineley (left), who was licensed by State Department yesterday, was pictured at a Washington Hotel, busy with the telephone, after being granted permission to ship airplanes, rifles, machine guns and ammunition valued in excess of $4,500,000 to Valencia, Spain, a loyalist-controlled port.

House Is Given Bill for 5-Day Federal Week

Measure Plans 35 Hours in District; Appeal Board for Workers Asked.

With the aim of making the Federal Government an example for industry, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, yesterday introduced a bill to provide a five-day week for Federal and District employes.

The measure was introduced late in the last session and referred to the House Civil Service Committee, but no opportunity was afforded for public hearings. This year the author will press for action.

Should the bill become a law, the executive branch of the Government would, in effect, close down for Saturday and Sunday. It provides:

"That no officer or employe of the executive branch of the Government, the Government Printing Office, the Botanic Garden, the Library of Congress, or the District of Columbia shall be required or permitted to perform official work on Saturday or Sunday."

Exempt from the two-day holiday would be: (a) Officers appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate; (b) commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, or the Public Health Service when not engaged in departmental duty in the District; (c) officers and employes of the postal service; and officers and employes specifically designated by executive orders.

The measure protects Government workers from reductions in pay or increase in the number of hours of work in any day or week. It would consequently authorize a 35-hour week or a 7-hour day.

Another measure of interest to Government employes was introduced by Representative Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the House District Committee.

It would set up a civil service board of appeals, which would have authority to conciliate differences between employes and department heads.

The major aim of the legislation, according to its author, is to discourage political influence in appointments and promotions in the Government service.

Britain Demands Italy, Reich Act on Flow of Troops to Spain

Governments Promise Replies of 'Conciliatory' Nature; Tension Grows as England Holds 17 Men-of-War Ready Near Spanish Waters.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 5.—Great Britain tonight demanded Italy and Germany speed their decisions whether to agree to force a halt to enlistment of foreign volunteers in the Spanish civil war while a series of diplomatic maneuvers heightened tension throughout Europe.

As Britain thus sought to bring to a climax one of the paramount problems of keeping the civil conflict confined to local dispute, there were these pertinent developments:

Germany ordered the Spanish Socialist government to give up the sequestered cargo and passenger of the freighter Palos by 8 a. m. Friday, or lose to Fascists two Spanish ships seized in reprisal. The Spanish government rejected the ultimatum and warned against further incidents. Berlin indicated that there would be no new reprisals and that the incident would be considered closed.

The British government demanded that Germany and Italy answer not later than Saturday, the Anglo-French proposal of December 23 on banning foreign volunteers.

Germany and Italy indicated their replies would be "conciliatory", and that they would be forthcoming Friday.

"Legitimate" Seizure.

The Spanish Socialist Ambassador at London handed British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden a note in which his Valencia government held seizure of the Palos cargo was "a perfectly legitimate act"—because it allegedly was composed of war materials.

The commander of the British destroyer Grafton informed London he had been given "satisfactory" promises from Spanish Fascist patrol ships that British shipping rights around the Strait

6 Flown to Vera Cruz Are Dismantled for Trip on Spanish Ship.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—Six American-made airplanes flown here from the United States tonight were dismantled at Tejeria Airport preparatory to being loaded aboard the Spanish steamer Motomar for shipment to the loyalist government of Spain.

A pronounced movement of second-hand planes, all of heavy carrying capacity, into Central American countries during the past six months was revealed last night in a check on Department of Commerce records. Twenty-five have gone to Atlantic seaboard nations in the past six months, none to West Coast countries.

The State Department denied that the ships were for transshipment to European countries at war or arming for war. The department

Neutrality's Status.

Robert Cuse, Jersey City arms exporter, hurriedly loaded $2,777,000 of airplanes and plane motors on a Spanish ship in New York harbor in a race against passage by Congress today of a resolution forbidding arms shipments to Spain.

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said such a resolution will be adopted by both Houses of Congress today.

Check of Commerce Department records showed heavy increase within six months in sale of American planes to East Coast Central American governments, but the State Department denied they were for trans-shipment to war zones.

Decision by Germany and Italy on Great Britain's demand they end enlistment of their nationals in the Spanish civil war was requested by the last named country by Friday as the Spanish government rejected a German ultimatum demanding satisfaction for seizure of the Palos' cargo.

By Sidney Olson.

The Government's efforts to prevent shipment of arms to Spain jammed last night on two new obstacles as the State Department revealed it had been forced to grant Richard L. Dineley, of San Francisco, licenses to ship $4,507,050 of arms to Valencia, Spain, while Robert Cuse, licensee No. 1, was rushing crated airplanes aboard a Spanish steamer to beat Congressional neutrality action.

In New York harbor, a gang of stevedores stopped work suddenly at midnight in their race against time and the Congress of the United States. They had been struggling to load the Spanish ship Mar Cantabrico, with Cuse's $2,777,000 worth of airplanes and engines, and to get the boat past the 3-mile limit before Congress can pass a resolution barring all shipments to Spain and revoking previously issued licenses. Their reason for stopping was not given.

Meanwhile, Congress, faced with a calendar loaded with the President's message on the state of the Union and the official electoral college vote count, may be unable to pass a resolution today before Cuse's shipment gets out on the high seas.

Dineley, of 420 Market street, San Francisco, reluctantly was granted 19 licenses to ship 47 airplanes, 7,000 rifles, 1,050 machine guns, and 41,700,000 cartridges.

The consignee for the Dineley shipments is Felix Gordon-Ordaz, Spanish Ambassador to Mexico City, now on his way to Washington to close the deal with Dineley. Ordaz was grounded at New Orleans on his flight here last night.

$9,000,000 Total Value.

Dineley told a reporter $9,000,000 was the total value of the shipments to be shipped to Spain by way of Vera Cruz, Mexico. The other $4,500,000 involved is for war helmets, gas masks and other war materials for which licenses are not necessary.

The $9,000,000 is here in a Washington bank, Dineley said regretfully, adding, "I'll never see that dough. After we've been working on this deal for months, the President starts shooting off and the thing gets all screwed up."

The New York race between stevedores hired by Robert Cuse, Jersey City arms exporter who received the first license to ship airplanes and airplane parts directly to Spain, and Congress, appeared to be a dead heat.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and R. Walton Moore, Acting Secretary of State, conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday. Pittman told reporters a resolution banning further arms shipments to Spain and annulling all present licenses (those

Pope Pius' Illness Causes Cardinals To Stay in Rome

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Jan. 5.—Cardinals heading congregations or executive departments of the Roman Catholic Church have been asked not to leave Rome or Vatican City because of Pope Pius' illness, a reliable source said tonight.

The 79-year-old pontiff was raised almost to a sitting position in his bed in an effort by his physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, to overcome some of the difficulty he experienced in breathing because of asthma, one of the ailments from which he suffers.

He was given an injection to stimulate his kidney action, and Dr. Milani ordered that this be repeated every four days. A reliable source said Dr. Milani was consulting specialists concerning the Pope's condition.

It also was understood Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, who visited the pontiff today as usual, had informed President Roosevelt of the status of the Pope's illness at the request of the United States Executive, made to the apostolic delegate in Washington.

Starlings Don't Give a Hoot for Zoo's Owls, Brought to District Building to Scare Them

Hoot and Toot proved quite definitely last night that, as starling frighteners, they are just a couple of owls interested only in minding their own business.

Their debut was a disappointment, to put it mildly, to Clifford R. Lanham, District superintendent of trees and parking, and the fellow who has been trying to get starlings out of his hair for four years or more.

Placed on two separate window ledges on the fourth floor of the District Building and held captive by cord tied around their legs, Hoot and Toot sat complacently by while the nuisance birds flew all around them in utter disregard of the owl's reputation as a bogey man. None seemed to give a hoot for Toot, or even Hoot. Time and again an especially audacious starling would add insult to injuries by perching for a few moments on the same ledge with Hoot, or perhaps Toot.

"I can't understand it," moaned Lanham. "I heard that owls had been used successfully to rid the Army War College of starlings."

But last night's experiment was anything but a (h)owling success. Better luck attended the labors of 15 workmen in Lanham's trees and parking division who

First Colored Man Since Civil War Sits On Arlington Jury

J. J. Carpenter, 60-year-old colored carpenter, yesterday became the first of his race to serve on a trial jury in Arlington County, Va., since reconstruction days following the Civil War.

The jury, on which Carpenter, who is a native of the county, sat, heard the case of Carrie Branch, colored, charged with an assault upon Elmer Fleet, also colored. The case was before Judge Walter T. McCarthy in the County Circuit Court. The defendant was convicted and sentenced to serve a year in the county jail.

Several months ago a colored man served as member of the county grand jury. He was the first since the reconstruction period.

200 Women Pray for Slayers Before Home of N. Y. Governor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Six men, with less than two days of life before them, tonight prepared to die in Sing Sing Prison while their mothers prayed in the street before Gov. Lehman's Park avenue home.

The district attorney who sent them to death cells hurried a special report on their case to the Governor, who is at Albany.

"Save the boys! Have pity on their mothers!" moaned an estimated 200 women—mothers, relatives and friends—as they knelt in the avenue before the Governor's home.

Puzzled police kept quiet guard but did not disturb the vigil.

At Ossining, William F. X. Geoghan, district attorney for Kings County, in which the six men killed a subway collector for an estimated $30 each last September 2, talked long to the men and then departed "to submit a report to the Governor at Albany before midnight."

Unless he recommends clemency, and unless the Governor accepts the recommendation, the six—Samuel Kimmel, 22; Dominick Zizzo, 27; Eugene Bruno, 23; Joseph Bologna, 24; Theodore Didonne, 30, and Salvatore Scata, 19—will be executed Thursday night.

The New York City demonstration started at the Venezia Theater where Clemente Giglio, radio commentator, and other speakers declared environment responsible for the plight of the women's sons.

"They are not really morally responsible for their acts," Giglio said. "They were compelled to live in squalid tenements, in bad environment, because the authorities have failed to do their duty in slum clearance."

Worked to high emotional pitch by one speaker after another, the women marched to the Governors home. Although police told the women the Governor was at Albany, the prayers went on. Mrs. Lehman was away on a shopping tour.

Congress' Cost To Nation Set At 21 Millions

Salaries of Solons, Clerks Major Item; Printing Office Gets 4½ Million.

By the Associated Press.

Operation of Congress will cost taxpayers about $21,000,000 during the fiscal year ending next July 1.

Besides salaries of the 531 Senators and Representatives—who draw $10,000 each—Congress appropriated $4,650,000 to run the Government Printing Office and $110,680 for salaries of the Capitol police force.

Another $2,500,000 went toward air conditioning the Capitol and the three Congressional office buildings.

Salaries of the army of clerks and maintenance of the grounds and buildings account for a sizable percentage of the balance.

Two Senators—Guy V. Howard (Republican), Minnesota, and William Hill (Democrat), Florida—heard their credentials read today, although neither will ever take his seat. Filling vacancies caused by deaths, their terms expired today.

The cause he intends to propagate is that of the Irish potato.

"I can't fill his (Huey's) shoes," he said, "as there was but one Huey Long, and they come but one in a billion, but I intend to make the same fight for the common people that he did."

New Faces in Congress
'First Ward Boys' See Light, Finally Elect Sacks to House

Waited Long Time for Victory in Rock-Ribbed 'Vareville.'

By James J. Cullinane.

The Hon. Leon Sacks, Democratic Representative from the First Congressional District of Philadelphia, doesn't learn things very easily.

He showed a lot of promise when he came out of the University of Pennsylvania in 1926 with an A. B. in economics and an LL. B. and a lot of others letters to show he was one of the best football tackles and basketball forwards the school had ever produced.

And then he proved he hadn't learned a thing by registering as a Democrat in the First Ward—"Vareville" they call it in Philadelphia. They didn't think much of Democrats in Vareville when they thought of them at all.

But "Boss" Vare was a tolerant man and Sacks and 300 other registered Democrats were tolerated. Two years later, Sacks was still plugging along and refused to learn anything when "Boss" Vare called out 28,000 Republican votes to put the 700 Democrats in their places.

Couldn't Be Convinced.

Sacks couldn't be convinced that the First Philadelphia District would never, never go Democratic and some of the old "First Ward Boys" began to look at him pityingly.

"I just looked over the Republican leadership and found the average age was 67 while the average age of the Democratic leadership was 34, and I knew it wouldn't be long," said Sacks.

In suite 1420 of the New House Office Building yesterday was a huge wreath of red rose and white carnations. Sacks beamed at a card on the wreath just before he went over to take the seat Republican Harry C. Ransley had held for 18 years. The card said: "Congratulations — From the First Ward Boys."

"Boss" Vare is dead and a new king rules in Vareville.

And now the "boys" think Sacks is a very bright boy.

Sacks was born in First Ward in October, 1902, of Jewish parents in a neighborhood predominantly Irish and Italian. He learned to fight before he learned to run. Graduated from the public schools and received his degree in economics from Wharton

Didn't Learn Easily.

"I never was an honor student though. I didn't learn very easily," Sacks said.

Started practicing law when he was 26 and was appointed deputy attorney general of Pennsylvania last February. Is a member of the Democratic State committee and rolled up a 37,000 plurality over Ransley. He was surprised. Thought it would be only 20,000.

Weighed 180 pounds when he played football and was hard as nails. Weighs 200 now and has a flat tire around his middle. Is 5 feet 11 inches tall. Hopes he will find time to work out in House gymnasium. Likes steak, rare, medium or well done. Smokes cigarettes, likes a highball and novels. Thomas Hardy is his favorite author. Benson Urges Curb On Supreme Court

St. Paul, Jan. 5 (AP).—Gov. Elmer A. Benson described the Government today as "the great guarantor of social and economic justice and security" in an inaugural address advocating a constitutional amendment limiting the power of the Supreme Court to invalidate social measures.

"I recommend," he told the Legislature, outlining his broad social and economic program, "that you petition Congress to submit a constitutional amendment which would remove from the Supreme Court its assumed power to declare unconstitutional laws passed by Congress pertaining to child labor, regulating working conditions in industry and agricultural and industrial production, providing security against old age, unemployment and sickness and social legislation generally.

"Progressive America stands helpless to enact needed social and economic reforms while a reactionary Supreme Court has usurped autocratic powers never intended by the framers of the Constitution."

10 Millions Sought For Air Laboratory

Bureau of air commerce officials reported yesterday they are considering expanding present facilities to give the Government one of the most modern, completely equipped civil aeronautical laboratories in the world.

Seeking an extra $10,000,000 from Congress to broaden operations during the next two years, officials said part of this fund might be used to double or treble present outlays for technical research.

In the wake of four major air crashes in December, the department called a conference of government experts and airline operators to formulate a broad co-operative safety program. It probably will be held early in February.

Senator Copeland, (Democrat), New York said officials of aviation companies which have figured in the crashes would be called before the Senate's safety committee soon.

Norman Challenges Validity of Measure in Suit Filed in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Norman C. Norman, New York manufacturing jeweler who unsuccessfully challenged in the United States Supreme Court the Roosevelt Administrations devaulation of the dollar, late today filed an action attacking the social security act.

Specifically, he filed suit in Federal court to enjoin the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc., in which he is a common stockholder, and its 14 trustees from compliance with provisions of the act.

His attacks upon Administration measures also have included avowed refusal to pay a $100 assessment for maintenance of the Precious Jewelry Code Authority during NRA.

In today's suit Norman declared the social security act invalid insofar as the company and its management are concerned.

The act, he contended, was violative of the fifth and tenth amendments to the Constitution in that it deprived the company of property without due process and without just compensation.

Tax Appeal Heard.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 5 (AP).—The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals took under advisement today action of the White Packing Co., of Salisbury, seeking an injunction against the Federal "windfall." tax.

The company appealed from a district court ruling by Judge Johnson J. Hayes that the court was without jurisdiction on the ground the company had an adequate remedy at law should it pay a tax which later might be declared unconstitutional.

Today's arguments, by Richard B. Barker, of Washington, representing the packing company, and F. E. Youngman, of Washington, special assistant to the Attorney General, centered around the matter of jurisdiction.

Aid Rushed to 200 Marooned in Snow

Kingman, Ariz., Jan. 5 (AP).—Rescue parties pushed through deep snowdrifts today to the aid of approximately 200 snowbound persons in northern Arizona as the United States Weather Bureau warned of additional snow tonight.

Those marooned included a Civilian Conservation Corps camp of 157 Oklahoma and Texas youths in the Hualapai Mountains near here.

Lieut. William K. Ringold, commander of the camp, made his way to Kingman to report there had been no suffering and that the food supply was sufficient. CCC headquarters grew anxious regarding the welfare of the camp when the new storm warning was reported.

Others cut off by snows included 23 members of a surveying party in the House Rock Valley, south of the Utah line. Fifteen others, including several lumbermen and a rancher, were marooned at Stoneman Lake, south of Flagstaff.

Farmers Accept Terms.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 5 (AP).—A group of farmers who had "taken over" the Shawnee County Courthouse demanding relief, late today accepted an offer by the county commissioners of work relief and $5 grocery orders and disbanded. Speakers for the group of approximately 100 men said they had been cut off WPA projects and were in dire need.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Greet NYA Capital Parley

High Officials Also Scheduled to Address Youth Meetings.

The three-day national conference on problems of the Negro and Negro youth, which begins here today, will have among its speakers Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and high Administration officials it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the Division of Negro affairs for the National Youth Administration, which is sponsoring the meeting.

Having as its objective the formulation of concrete proposals for racial advancement to be submitted for consideration during the coming year, the conference is expected to draw between 50 and 60 outstanding educators and laymen in the Negro race from many sections.

Sessions will be held in the auditorium of the Department of Labor, beginning at 10 a. m. Mrs. Bethune will serve as temporary chairman at the opening session until a permanent leader is selected.

Time Not Announced.

The time of Mrs. Roosevelt's address has not yet been announced. Among other prominent speakers scheduled to appear during the three-day conference are Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche; Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace. Others who will be on the program include Will W. Alexander, assistant administrator of the Resettlement Administration; Robert Fechner, director of the Emergency Conservation Work; Aubrey Williams, executive director of the NYA, and Richard R. Brown, deputy executive director of the NYA.

Three items on the conference agenda are "increased opportunity for employment and economic security;" "adequate educational and recreation opportunity," and "improved health and housing conditions."

Commenting on the purpose of the conference, Mrs. Bethune said: "We will seek principally to evaluate the benefits of the Negro from the operation of the various Federal programs and to plan possible improvements and extensions.

Negro Program Needed.

"The conference is sponsored by the NYA in the hope that it will point out the need for greater attention to the preparation of Negro youth for vocations and for a national placement program that will mitigate, at least, some of the artificial barriers to employment that Negroes now face.

"The eagerness and sincerity with which leaders of both races have embraced the idea of this conference leads me to hope that results of far-reaching importance may be achieved."

Discussion group leaders that have been named by Mrs. Bethune will include T. Arnold Hill, director of the Department of Industrial Relations of the Urban League; Johan W. Davis, president of the West Virginia State College; Dr. M. O. Bousfield, associate director of the Medical Service of the Julius Rosenwald Fund; and Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Delaware Gets Job Bill.

Dover, Del., Jan. 5 (AP).—Unemployment insurance legislation, on which Delaware's Legislature failed to agree at last week's special session, remained as business at hand today as legislators returned for the opening of the 106th General As-

Laws to Prevent Industrial Coercion of Employes Likely

By the Associated Press.

Stronger laws to prevent industrial coercion of voters probably will be recommended to the Senate by its committee which investigated election spending and irregularities.

The expected proposal results from discovery there is no Federal law to cover charges the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Co., of Webster County, W. Va., coerced employes.

Committee investigators reported Monday they found evidence of "intimidation, coercion and discharge of employes" for political reason by the firm.

This action, together with dismissal of charges of politics in Pennsylvania's WPA Administration, virtually completed the committee's inquiry.

The committee probably also will recommend:

A clearer definition of campaign contributions, possibly to include receipts from sale of advertising in party books.

In a final report to the clerk of the House, the Republican National Committee, disclosed yesterday it spent $8,065,524 in the 1936 campaign.

Contributions totaled $7,693,855.

The Democratic National Committee reported campaign expenditures of $5,030,848 and contributions of $5,205,868.

Unpaid obligations incurred by the Democratic Committee were $820,269 on December 31. The Union Party reported expenditures of $65,818 and receipts of $62,884.

Siege of City Hall Over, Mayor Home

Daytona Beach, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP).—Mayor Irene Armstrong went back to her neglected housework today after the calming political situation allowed police to quit their five-day tour of guard duty at City Hall.

Announcing the City Hall would be open tomorrow, the grandmother mayor administered a parting verbal slap to Dave Sholtz, whose term as Florida's Governor ended today.

"Now David Sholtz no longer is Governor, we have nothing to fear of further attempts to invade the City Hall," Mayor Armstrong said. Sholtz ordered Mrs. Armstrong and three companion city commissioners ousted on charges of overspending the city's 1936 budget, incompetency and lack "of sound judgment." The incoming chief executive, Fred P. Cone, has said he will let the courts decide the rival claim of Mrs. Armstrong and Harry Wilcox, designated by Sholtz to replace her.

Assembly May Get Glenn Frank Case

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5 (AP).—Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, goes before the university regents tomorrow to defend himself against a demand for dismissal on charges of inefficiency.

The regents completed preparations today for an open hearing of charges against the president, and one State senator promised to take the case before the State Legislature, convening next week.

"I shall have something to say on the Senate floor concerning Mr. Wilkie and his actions as soon as the Legislature convenes," Senator Joseph Clancy, a Democrat, stated.

Harold M. Wilkie, chairman of the board of regents, is leader of a bloc which seeks removal of Frank on charges that the dapper, $15,000-a-year president lacks both business and educational ability.

Senator's Child Accident Victim

Josephine, 3-year-old daughter of Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, was reported fully recovered yesterday from the effects of an odd automobile accident that occurred on their way to Washington.

Mrs. Black said that the child fell to the highway when the back door of the car in which the Blacks were riding to Washington came open. The accident occurred two days ago.

Allen that the various State societies take care of their visiting dignitaries the night of the Inauguration, Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, announced last night that the Missouri State Society had leased large and small ballrooms of the Willard Hotel.

A ball and reception will be held in honor of Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri, Mrs. Stark and members of the Governor's staff, including 56 colonels and their wives.

Bolshevism in China Held Threat to Japan

Tokyo, Jan. 5 (AP).—Japan is "seriously threatened by China's tendency toward Bolshevism, "which may even excite China to declare war against Japan." Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita declared tonight in a nation-wide radio address.

Arita's speech was almost entirely devoted to defense of the anti-Communist pact signed in November by Japan and Germany, which has been severely criticized by nearly all anti-Fascist and anti-Militarist elements in the country. For a time it appeared this criticism might even compel resignation of the cabinet.

2 Out on Bond, Held in $2,055 Pay Roll Theft

Out on $2,000 bail each for attempted housebreaking, two men arrested Saturday yesterday were charged with the $2,055 pay roll robbery of Joseph Lozupone, plastering contractor, June 16.

The men, James R. Steele, 34, of 25 Kennedy street northeast, and Carleton G. Williams, 30, of 705 Fourth street northwest, were arrested in the 1000 block of H street northwest by Detective Lieut. Clement Cox and Detective Sergts. Howard Ogle and Paul Ambrose.

Police said Lozupone identified Steele as the man who robbed him of the money while he was leaving the American Security Bank branch at Eighth and H streets northeast. The man, Lozupone, said, made him drive to Seventh street and Maryland avenue northeast, where the money was taken.

The robber, wearing smoked glasses, escaped in an automobile parked nearby, the contractor said.

Lieut. Cox said Williams is believed to have been in the gateway car, although not the driver. The third man still is being sought.

Williams and Steele both were arrested October 25 last year allegedly while they were attempting to break into a Sanitary Grocery store in the 2800 block Georgia avenue northwest. They were discovered by George Maynard, colored, 35, of 632 Gresham place northwest, who notified police. Maynard dropped dead of a heart attack brought on by the excitement shortly after the arrival of police.

At the Tenth Precinct, a quantity of burglars tools, and a .45 caliber automatic were found in the men's possession. They were charged and indicted and released on bond before the arresting detectives received information that led to the second arrest.

Both men were released on $5,000 bond to appear in Police Court this morning.

'Love Abduction' Victim Defends Her 'Captor,' 32

Newark, Ohio, Jan. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Onie Wheeler, 18-year-old "love abduction" victim, returned home today and told Police Chief Curtis Berry she disappeared voluntarily with Arthur Spence, 32-year-old boilermaker.

Mrs. Wheeler arrived from Columbus, where she said she had been with Spence since Saturday night.

Newark police sought to learn from her the whereabouts of Spence, charged with abducting the woman by her husband, Wesley, a stove factory worker.

Wheeler filed the charge after Mr. and Mrs. Richard Shaffer, friends of the woman, reported that Spence forced Mrs. Wheeler into his car Saturday night.

Trotzky Arrival Seen Signal for Soviet Trial

Moscow, Jan. 5 (AP).—Arrival of Leon Trotzky in Mexico may be the signal for Moscow's announcement of a second trial of former Soviet leaders on charges of having plotted with the famous exile for overthrow of the present regime, it was indicated in authoritative circles tonight.

Two Hospital Employes Held on Murder Charge

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 5 (AP).—Pulaski County authorities jailed two State hospital attendants on murder charges today in the death of a patient, M. L. Edmondson, 50, of Harrison. Detectives docketed the attendants as Floyd Hinkson, 37, and C. H. McCrary, 32.

Coroner Howard A. Dishongh said examinations disclosed the patient received internal injuries and indications were that he had been "severely beaten and kicked" before his death Sunday. Edmondson collapsed in the dining hall. He was received at the institution in January of 1935.

Radio Makes Cows Give More and Eat Less, Farmer Finds

Greenfield, Ind., Jan. 5 (AP).—Almon Wickard installed a radio in his cowshed a week ago so he could listen to his favorite programs while milking.

It didn't occur to him, he said today, that the cows would pay any attention to the contraption. But it had some surprising results, he said.

Before the installation a 3-gallon bucket would hold all the milk his two cows gave, Wickard said, but now their lacteal output shows a daily increase of 2 gallons.

And the farmer finds that while turning away from the feed box to listen to the radio the cows eat only about half as much as they used to.

Attempted Holdup Of Ice Company Is Foiled by Clerk

Two bandits, their faces hidden by handkerchiefs, attempted to rob the Colonial Ice Co., Canal and E streets southeast, early last night.

They were foiled when Russell C. Snapp, employe of the firm, darted behind a high counter in the office in which he was at work, through an open refrigerator and out the back way and called police.

Snapp, who is 39 and lives at 505 Park road northwest, said one of the robbers pointed his pistol through the locked glass door to his office and ordered him to open it.

Responding to a general alarm, eight scout cars and detectives and policemen from the Fourth and Fifth precincts surrounded the plant, but the robbers had made their escape. Snapp made his call from the home of one of the company's officials, C. T. Boswell, around the corner from the plant.

Quacks Reap a Golden Harvest 'Curing' China's Narcotic Slaves

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, Jan. 5.—Scores of self-advertised doctors today were "cashing in" on fears of thousands of uncured narcotics addicts in North China cities that the government soon would begin to enforce its decree of death for them.

One so-called anti-narcotics hospital advertised: "Barring exceptional cases we will cure anyone from addiction in seven hours." This place was doing a "landoffice business."

Columns of the Chinese newspapers blossomed with advertisements offering rapid cures, and self-styled physicians were reaping a golden harvest from panic-stricken narcotics users grasping at any chance to rid themselves of the habit before the executioneers' guns begin to bark.

Authorities continued to debate when and with what severity they would enforce the government's December order: "Be cured by New Year's or die!"

The stalemate was evident in Peiping and Tientsin as well as in Nanking and Shanghai. There was no indication of early abandonment of the present inaction. Some authorities believed a three months' period of grace would be given, although in Peiping it was indicated a few addicts might be shot for the moral effect.

Tientsin authorities were more active against narcotics "hospitals" than against users. One such institution which treated 15,000 addicts in 1936 was ordered closed.

At the same time police estimated 400 dens dispensing narcotics still were operating in Tientsin.

Path Is Cleared For Ransoming Of Mattson Boy

Ad Assures Abductors Police Won't Interfere in Transactions.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 5.—The family of kidnaped Charles Mattson cleared a path again today for dealings with his abductor, and indicated it was expecting momentarily a development—possibly payment of the $28,000 ransom or release of the 10-year-old boy.

The Government's carefully concealed army of manhunters apparently continued to keep its hands off the case in accordance with the plea of the father, Dr. W. W. Mattson.

A personal advertisement offered the abductor assurance the family had received his messages and that "channels are entirely clear."

The message, again inserted in the "personal" column of a Seattle newspaper read: "Mable—We have received your communications. Police have not intercepted them. Channels are etnirely clear. We are ready.—Ann."

Definitely known to have been published on behalf of Dr. Mattson, it was assumed by observers to be a notice the ransom would be paid soon.

Friends mentioned as possible intermediaries made several visits to the Mattson home last night and today. Among them were Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Gus Appelman, Paul Sceva and others.

Schools Feel Virginia Shift In Population

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5.—The Virginia State planning board cited today an exchange of population between cities and counties of the State as of major significance in relation to the demand for white and colored school accommodations.

In a report on mobility and changes in population covering the period from 1930-36, the board said 11 cities and 42 counties lost in the number of white children in their schools, while 9 cities and 65 counties lost in the number of colored persons.

Cities lost heavily in white children and gained, as a rule, the board said, even more heavily in colored children.

The board noted a trend for those receiving higher incomes to move outside the cities and those of lower income groups to return to the cities proper.

"Thus, the cities are attracting those whose former experience has been in rural areas," the report said, "and the counties near the cities are getting in exchange residents who demand the highest type of service."

The planning authorities said the result might be a near cessation of demands for white school accommodations in the larger cities with a corresponding increase in the need for additional colored facilities.

"Where it is not possible to change the race-use of existing school facilities from white to colored, this will mean additional drain on the treasuries of the localities," the report stated.

The planning group said cities where population lossses were indicated by school census figures included Richmond, South Norfolk, Petersburg, Williamsburg, Charlottesville, Roanoke, Fredericksburg, Staunton and Clifton Forge.

Russian Savants Lose Citizenship

Moscow, Jan. 5 (AP).—The presidium of the central executive committee by special decree tonight deprived the scientists Prof Vladimir N. Ipatieff and Alexis Chichibabin of their citizenship.

The decree forbade the scientists ever to return to the Soviet Union.

The action was taken for their "having refused to fulfill their duty to the Fatherland."

The scientists were expelled from the Russian Academy of Science December 30 on charges of violating the new Russian constitution by refusing to return to Russia to continue their scientific work.

Prof. Ipatieff is director of chemical research at the Universal Oil Products Co. in Chicago and is also on the staff of Northwestern University.

He stated December 30 he intended to remain in the United States.

Prof. Ipatieff went to the United States in 1927.

Chichibabin, an expert on oils, acids and alkaloids, is in Paris and had demanded guarantees of scientific freedom before returning.

Strike of Lumberjacks Brings Logging Threat

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 5 (AP).—A strike of lumberjacks in northern Minnesota timber camps threatened today seriously to retard logging operations.

Members of the Timber Workers' Union claimed 3,000 men were on strike in camps around Gheen, in the Vermilion Lake area, and in the Superior National Forest area north of Two Harbors. They demanded $4 a day, an 8-hour day, union recognition and improved working conditions. They ask also that no more than $1 a day be charged for board. Logging operations are almost at the seasonal peak.

New Rochester Mayor Continues as Cobbler

Rochester, N. H., Jan. 5 (AP).—John F. Conrad, 50 of whose 63 years have been spent as a shoe worker, hung up his apron beside his heeling machine in a shoe factory tonight and told the boss he would be late for work tomorrow.

When he slips on the work-stained apron again he will be Mayor of Rochester. But the first laboring man to win the mayoralty in the 45 years that Rochester has been a city intends to keep right on with his job in the shoe factory.

Tonight Conrad attended a meeting of the city council, completing 15 years as Democratic councilor from Ward Two. Simple inauguration ceremonies will make him mayor in the morning.

Canadian Miracle Shrine Guardian Is Believed Dying

Montreal, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Brother Andre, "Miracle Man of Montreal," and guardian of the New World's most revered shrine, where thousands believe they have received divine cures, lay near death tonight.

Hospital attendants said that the founder of St. Joseph's oratory was growing steadily weaker and was not expected to live through the night.

This 91-year-old man—son of a humble wheelwright—approached the end of life just when workmen were finishing a $4,000,000 basilica which will be the most costly church edifice in Canada. It was built because of the fame of Brother Andre, and nowhere else in the world, save in the Grotto of Lourdes, in France, is there a structure in which the lame and the blind have more faith.

At times there have been 500,000 persons, covering a solid mile, kneeling on the hill that leads up to the shrine where Brother Andre worked and prayed. Whatever cures he may have performed were attributed to Saint Joseph, patron saint of Canada.

Blast Death Figure Gets 40-Year Term

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 5 (AP).—Harry Reeves, 36, who confessed he saw his gang wipe out one of its members with 5 tons of dynamite, was sentenced today to 40 years in prison for robbery, 16 hours after his capture.

Search for Reeves, William Nesbeth, Sioux City bartender, and Lee Bradley, former South Dakota convict and bank robber, started New Year's Eve after Mrs. Helen Sieler, 25, of Sioux City, wounded by eight bullets, gasped out a story of a gangland powderhouse execution near Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Nesbeth and Bradley are fugitives.

Sheriff William R. Tice and a deputy captured Reeves last night at the nearby farm of William Rice.

Meanwhile counsel for the consumers Anti-sales Tax Association filed a test case in Montgomery Circuit Court against the 1½ per cent gross receipts tax already enacted.

The test suit asked for an injunction against collection of the tax and a declaratory judgment holding the act unconstitutional. A hearing was set for January 10.

Conductor Spurns Nazi Song At Fete for Princess Juliana

By the Associated Press.

The Hague, the Netherlands, Jan. 5.—The conductor refused to conduct, but the band played the Nazi "Horst Wessel" anyway tonight at a gala festival celebrating the wedding Thursday of the Crown Princess Juliana.

The Nazi marching song and the German anthem "Deutschland Uber Alles," got a place on the program to soothe the German resentment over failure to display the Nazi swastika in honor of the German Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld, the bridegroom-to-be.

But Dr. Van Anrooy, well known orchestra leader, flatly refused to direct the performance before 1,500 guests in the Hall of the Society of Arts and Sciences.

The difficulty was solved when Capt. Boer, conductor of the Royal Military Band, volunteered to direct the two selections. Dr. Van Anrooy consented to lead the remainder of the program.

The two pieces had been added to the list only after Germany's protest against their having been left off.

The Netherlands government itself had been irked at what it called delay by Germany in furnishing passports to the bridegroom's relatives. It sent a sharp note to Berlin yesterday.

Because the German anthems were played tonight, Jewish authorities at The Hague remained away in protest against Nazi anti-Jewish activities.

Few swastika flags were on display tonight. Only one was flown prominently—over the German legation—and it was guarded day and night to prevent any repetition of the pulling down of a German flag last Saturday.

Sub-Zero Weather Grips Prairie Area; Capital Still Mild

As intense cold, ranging down to below zero in Minnesota, harassed the prairie States, Washington experienced another comparatively mild winter day yesterday, with prospects of a cold spell remote.

Today will be cloudy, probably followed by occasional rain toward evening, and no change in temperature. Yesterday's high was 39, recorded at 4 p. m.

But out in the Middle West, where sub-zero readings were reported in nine States, some schools were closed when roads were blocked by snow. Cold States were the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Nebraska.

U. S. Extends Time For Pay Roll Tax

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—N. B. Early, collector of internal revenue in Virginia, today said it had been decided ot grant an extension until March 1 instead of April 1 for the payment of the Federal portion of the unemployment insurance pay-roll tax by Virginia employers.

Although empowered to grant the 60-day extension, Early said that no need appeared for prolonging the dead line beyond March 1 and that the 30-day extension also would prevent interference with the routine of collecting income taxes due March 15.

Frank P. Evans, chairman of the Virginia Employment Compensation Commission, said members were awaiting official notice of the internal revenue collector's action before taking whatever action is necessary to extend the payment date on the State's portion of he jobless aid levy.

It was the first murder case in ten years in this little college town. The 40-year-old unemployed Pulchosky denied the charge. Pulchosky's wife, Anna, 37, near collapse, told police her husband had been drinking.

Reunion Failure, Sailor Runs Amok And Kills Woman

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 5 (AP).—Enranged by failure of a reconciliation conference with his wife, police reported, a sailor went berserk in a lawyer's office today, killing one woman, shooting another and wounding himself.

He spared his wife, who had sued for divorce, telling her just before he turned the pistol on himself:

"I haven't the nerve to shoot you, honey."

Detective Lieut. Joe Williamson gave this version of the shooting:

Paul McClelland, 27, the sailor, his estranged wife, Pauline; Miss Virginia Davidson, 21, Mrs. McClelland's sister, and Mrs. Jean Jenkins, 25, were in the office of Clifford Hicks, lawyer. No agreement was reached and the sailor left the office.

McClelland returned in a few minutes, ordered the women and Hicks to line up against the wall and said, "I'll show you what it means to die."

He shot Miss Davidson through the heart. She ran into the hall screaming and fell dead. The sailor then shot Mrs. Jenkins, spoke to his wife and turned the gun on himself. Physicians held little hope for the recovery of either Mrs. Jenkins or the sailor.

Five Are Injured In Shooting Affray

Thomas Nailer, 27-year-old colored man, was shot in the head, probably fatally, and four other colored persons suffered minor wounds in a free-for-all shotgun fight at Martinsburg, Md., last night.

Others injured in the shooting were Christine Dorsey, 16, and Vernon Dorsey, 27. The latter was kept in the hospital for treatment. All involved live in Martinsburg.

Soviet Census Reveals Great Religious Revival

Moscow, Jan. 5 (AP).—Masses of Russian citizens are professing fresh interest in religion, authoritative sources reported today, on the basis of indications shown during the first days of the national census.

"Do you believe in God?" is one of the questions census-takers ask each citizen in the gigantic canvass of the Soviet Union.

Teacher Cites Dionnes; Fights 2-Year Leave

By the Associated Press.

The Dionne quintuplets were cited to the Supreme Court yesterday as evidence school teachers who become mothers should not be compelled to take a 2-year leave of absence.

Mrs. Anthony Kabatt, school teacher of Elmira, N. Y., informed the court that when she applied for a 7-month leave of absence in 1934 to become a mother, the Board of Education insisted she take two years without pay.

A. A. A. Official Cites Need for Men to Enforce Traffic Laws.

Despite the decrease in motor fatalities and injuries in Washington during 1936, there were 1,400 more accidents than in 1935, the District Division of the American Automobile Association pointed out yesterday.

This, the association held, indicates "the need for adequate personnel to assure more rigid enforcement of motor laws throughout the District."

"Responsibility for this condition," said Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia Motor Club, "rests with Congress, which has consistently ignored the need for adequate traffic personnel.

"It is certainly no credit to the Capital that while there are 20,000 more vehicles on the streets than five years ago, there are actually 28 fewer men assigned to motorcycle duty. Much of the traffic confusion results from inadequacy of enforcement.

"Congress should consider the safety of its own members, who have figured in motor accidents, even if it continue to ignore the needs of protecting the life and property of voteless Washington."

Pointing out that 99 persons were fatally injured during 1936 as compared to 113 in 1935 and 135 in 1934, the A. A. A. club manager asserted this improvement represented a definite gain, achieved "in the face of an increase in vehicles both in the number of motor vehicles and highway use."

New Ocean Route Is Plotted by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

A Commerce Department official plotted on a map of the Pacific Ocean yesterday a tentative route between San Francisco and Melbourne, Australia, for giant seaplanes of the future.

Pan-American Airways already is taking steps to extend its Hongkong route southward, the official said, to link Hawaii with the Australian seaport. Three government agencies are co-operating.

Postal officials are interested in the proposed route, he asserted, because it would expedite American-Australian mail deliveries; the Commerce Department, because of its responsibility for air bases and airlanes used by mail planes, and the Interior Department because of its jurisdiction over some South Sea Islands.

No date has been set for commencing operations, but Government officials said yesterday they understood Pan-American was contemplating test flights for the near future.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents Alton Jones in a piano recital in Rankin Chapel Tuesday night. Program: Adagietto and Fugatto (Padre Rafael Angles), Sonata in C major, Op. 2, No. 3 (Beethoven), Danse Fantastique, Op. 1, No. 1 (Shostakovich), Canzona, Op. 12, No. 2 (Shebalin), Scherzo, Op. 33, No. 6 (Aleksandrov), L'Isle Joyeuse and La Soiree dans Grenade (Debussy), Prelude in B flat major, Op. 23, No. 2 (Rakhmaninov).

That intellectual quality which has been evident in the playing of Alton Jones since he joined the ranks of concert pianists a few years ago is now manifesting itself in the building of such unconventional and interesting programs as the one he offered last evening. There was a radical departure from the recital formula in his selection of compositions, and the resulting variety was a refreshment as well as a stimulation. It is to be hoped that his example will be followed by many another pianist.

For the opening of his program he chose a composer whom I have never yet seen thus signalized, Padre Rafael Angles, who was born two years before Haydn and survived him by seven years. The Adagietto and Fugatto of this Spanish musician are in what may be called the international style of the eighteenth century, although they contain idiomatic peculiarities, certain quaintnesses of expression, which are intriguing.

The Beethoven sonata is one of the three with which Ludwig began the long series that was to end with inscrutable masterpieces. They were dedicated to Haydn, and that genial man must have shaken his head over them sadly. For Beethoven began his piano works upon the topmost stone that his predecessors had builded. It is difficult for us now to realize what an innovator he was, even though we can compare the scores.

The C major sonata is extremely brilliant and approximates the showiness of a concerto; witness the cadenza before the coda of the first movement. The adagio already shows the characteristic meditative manner of Beethoven, and the scherzo is more sardonic than humorous. The finale is formidably difficult for its period, with such arduous passages as the string of rapid stacatto chords of the sixth in the right hand. No wonder that Beethoven was looked at askance by his rivals.

In his second group, Mr. Jones brought together three Russian composers of our own day. The youngest of them, Dmitri Shostakovich, is only 30, and the "Danse Fantastique" is from his first published pieces. It has the audacity and pertness which are the sign manual of the boy who was hailed by enthusiastic compatriots as the Mozart of Russia. But Shostakovich is a Mozart only in his precocity, and has not yet proved himself a genius.

Vesarion Shebalin is 34 and a pupil of Myaskovski. In his "Canzona" one notes a combination of Russian tunefulness with impressionistic harmonies. Anatoli Alekandrew was born in 1889, and his music follows the middle way between conservatism and radicalism. His "Scherzo" reminds one of both Rakhmaninov and Medtner; the structure is graceful and the content somewhat dry.

The closing group contrasted the iridescence of Debussy with the stalwart and melancholic romanticism of Rakhmaninov. Mr. Jones played with a forthright clarity and excellent technical competence. It may have been the voicing of the piano or the accoustics of the hall but his tone seemed harder than it was the last time he was heard in Washington.

5,532 Now on Roster of Bureau; Annual Cost Put at $12,051,708.

At the close of the fiscal year 1936 there were 5,532 employes on the rolls of the Government Printing Office, an increase of 191 over the previous fiscal year, Public Printer A. E. Giegengack announced yesterday.

In 1935, he pointed out in his annual report, the roster totaled 5,341. The present pay roll of the organization is $12,051,708, the report pointed out.

There were 780 appointments to the service during the past year, 589 separations, 74 retirements and 31 deaths.

In his report, Giegengack stated that the increased number of men and women on the roster was due, to some extent, to the desire to do away with as much overtime as possible, and spread employment.

The single metal formula adopted a year ago for use on all type and slug casting machines has proven successful, simplifying work and saving funds and effort, according to the report.

It also was reported by Giegengack that receipts from the sale of publications during the past fiscal year totaled $680,725, as compared to $637,414 for 1935.

There was an enormus increase in the distribution of publications and other printed material for the several executive departments and independent Government establishments.

Coal Operators Hold Lewis Charge 'False'

Bituminous coal operators yesterday declared "there is not a particle of truth" in charges by John L. Lewis, in a New Year's Eve radio talk, that the wage contract between operators and workers had been broken by the operators.

Following a meeting here, the operators' negotiating committee issued a statement saying that operators, in advance of next month's conference to negotiate a new contract, had offered Lewis "certain proposals" respecting a new two-year contract. "To assert," the statement said, "as did Mr. Lewis, that this action constitutes a violation of the present contract . . . is utterly preposterous."

It added that "apparently Mr. Lewis . . . is manufacturing a pretext for shutting down the coal mines . . . that furnish two-thirds of the Nation's bituminous coal supply."

Treasury Reports Tax Forms Ready

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials yesterday reported income tax forms for returns on 1936 incomes were available from internal revenue collectors throughout the country.

Several major changes in the income tax law apply to 1936 incomes.

One increased the graduated scale of surtax rates on individual surtax net incomes over $50,000, raising the maximum top bracket rate from 59 per cent—which formerly applied to all such incomes over $1,000,000—to 75 per cent on those over $5,000,000.

Another subjected dividends received to the normal 4 per cent income tax.

On 1936 corporation incomes, the controversial levy on undisputed profits is applicable.

Shooing starlings from a Pennsylvania avenue sycamore.

Owls Imported to Scare Them, But Starlings Don't Give Hoot

The collision of their palms was not in applause over their assignment—it was mighty chilly out last night and, besides, clinging to a branch 15 to 35 feet above the street is somewhat dangerous—but merely an expedient to discourage starlings from roosting.

The coming Inaugural was directly responsible for Generalissimo Lanham's latest offensive against his arch-enemies. A few days ago he was named to membership on the housing and hospitality committee and he figured that one of the best hospitality gestures would be to destarlingize the downtown section.

Last year Lanham did not interfere with the winged pests, who winter by the thousands in the Capital, because no abatement funds were available. But during the two or three seasons previously he and his minions went after the starlings with Roman candles balloons, pebble-filled cans, sticks and fire hose.

Possibly due to his crusading, the starling problem last fall and winter was less acute than formerly, but this year they are back in greater numbers than ever before.

Seizing his responsibility as a member of the Inaugural committee on housing and hospitality, Lanham arranged with the zoo a few days ago for the loan of Hoot and Toot. Late yesterday the owls arrived and were duly installed, one each outside the office of Surveyor Edward A. Dent and L. P. Robertson, street engineer.

After deploying his clap-hands crew in the avenue below, Commander-in-chief Lanham returned to the building to watch his owls scare starlings out of their wits. What he saw was a couple of bored, flat-faced creatures squatting forlornly on their ledges while the birds they were supposed to terrify chirped and maneuvered disdainfully for roosts within a few feet of the "guards."

"I'm not giving up yet," Field Marshal Lanham announced last night. "The owls are going to be given another chance to make good."

He went on to say that the 1937 starling war will be carried forward right up to and including Inauguration Day, whether Hoot and Toot awaken to their responsibilities or not. If they don't snap out of it, or rather, if the starlings don't get hep to the fact they are supposed to flee from the very shadow of an owl, Lanham may revive his balloon ballet or once more call upon the fire department for assistance.

Officials Prevent Flu Increase Here

Influenza and pneumonia cases, which have shown alarming increases the last few days in Chicago, New York, Milwaukee, Denver and certain other cities, were held yesterday to be well under control in Washington.

Although 50 deaths from the two respiratory diseases were reported here in the last two weeks, this figure is not above the average for the Capital at this time of year, it was said at the Health Department.

As in the cities facing major epidemics, local officials expressed hope for clear, cold weather. Rain and unseasonable warmness are conducive to respiratory ailments.

Delay in Selecting Airport Site Seen

The Washington Airport Commission will hold another meeting this morning in the office of Senator William H. King chairman.

Senator King said he did not expect the committee to complete its task of selecting an airport site and drafting its report to Congress until several more sessions are held.

Following the last meeting in early December, members of the commission privately predicted that Washington will have a municipal airport within six months.

40% of Federal Archives Held Liable to Loss

Survey Shows They Are in Danger From Fire and Other Hazards.

Federal archives stored in Washington are endangered by such hazards as fire, dirt, weather, dampness, insecurity, insects and vermin, according to the second annual report of Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist of the United States, which he submitted to Congress yesterday.

Thomas M. Owen, jr., chief of accessions, stated in his divisional report that 40 per cent of the 2,247,323 cubic feet of records surveyed to date is imperiled by fire. The survey was made in 4,047 rooms located in 235 buildings owned or rented by the Federal Government in the District.

"Many Government buildings are vulnerable," said Owen, "either through danger of spread of fire from adjacent structures, faulty construction, defective wiring, proximity of hot pipes to inflammable material, ocupancy hazards, careless handling of matches and lighted cigarettes or cigars, accumulations of rubbish and litter of a highly inflammable character, incendiarism or lightning.

"The fire hazards that have been noted in reports on depositories have been an important consideration in making recommendations for the transfer of records to the National Archives."

The annual report points out that 44 per cent of the documents surveyed was exposed to or covered by dirt. Five per cent was found to have been damaged by insects or vermin.

Searchers assigned by the archives establishment discovered other instances of neglect, ranging from overcrowded depositories to complete inaccessibility.

Toward Higher Local Taxes.

Tax increases are never pleasant to contemplate. In Washington especially there is always a tendency to substitute for this disagreeable prospect the hope that the Federal contribution will be enlarged. The current study of fiscal relations has notably stimulated that trend of optimism. But as the hard facts of our budgetary situation begin to appear with the opening of Congress, higher taxes become a strong probability.

There is ground for expecting that the President's special committee will provide a formula for an equitable division of the Capital City's expenses. If its survey has been thorough and its view of the problem comprehensive, the report may be expected to call for an increase in the present Federal allowance. But few anticipate a sufficient adjustment to balance the District's budget.

At the close of the fiscal year 1930 the District had an unappropriated surplus of nearly $9,500,000. But in recent years revenues have been sharply cut, chiefly through deduction of $4,500,000 from the Federal "lump sum," and many expenses have increased. Moreover, the District has been operating on a subsistence basis, and needs for capital improvements and expansion of community services have rapidly accumulated. When a city grows as fast as Washington has done in the last decade increased revenue from some source becomes imperative.

In preparing their 1938 budget the Commissioners stripped all expenditures to a minimum. Still the estimated outlays exceed prospective revenue (including a $5,000,000 Federal payment) by more than $3,000,000. When the Commissioner's supplementary budget is included, the deficit forecast mounts to nearly $7,500,000. These latter estimates would provide a few capital improvements, personnel increases for the Police and Fire Departments, additional funds for public health, and certain similar outlays.

It should be noted that even the larger budget would leave the city without funds for many urgent projects. The schools are in dire need of more buildings and teachers. The municipal playgrounds and library system are in a state of neglect. A committee which recently studied improvements that should be made without further delay submitted to the Commissioners a list of projects that would cost approximately $75,000,000. And this did not include the municipal center, the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the proposed municipal airport and many similar items. To finance these needed improvements would require at least $8,000,000 per year for a decade.

When the fiscal adjustment has been made, new sources of revenue to finance some of these requirements will become the District's most immediate problem. Funds can be obtained from a number of sources without increasing the real estate tax. Before definite proposals are submitted to Congress the Commissioners will doubtless complete the tax study begun a year and a half ago. With that study as a basis, there will be an excellent opportunity to press for an overhauling of the entire local tax system.

The Nebraska Experiment.

The Seventy-fifth Congress, now in session, is the first since the lame-duck amendment became the law of the land. But the man who more than any other was responsible for that reform is absent from Washington. Senator George W. Norris preferred to remain, for the time being, in Nebraska to witness the fruition of another reform he long advocated—the establishment of the first unicameral State legislature in American history.

The bicameral system has been traditional in the United States. But from the viewpoint of logic there is much to recommend the simpler single-chamber form. It is certainly bound to be more economical. In Nebraska's case the change involves a reduction in the number of legislators from 133 (including those who sat in the now abolished Senate) to 43. It may also lead to the elimination of much duplication of effort. But these are only two of the many interesting aspects of the experiment. In the new Nebraska Legislature, for instance, the members have no party labels, having been elected on a non-partisan ballot.

For a State as homogeneous as is Nebraska, which has no sharp cleavages between urban and rural, between industrial and agricultural, between native and foreign-born, the unicameral system may well prove desirable. But whether it does or not, the experiment is to be applauded. It emphasizes again the cogency of Mr. Justice Brandeis' observations that: "It is one of the happy incidents of the Federal system that a single courageous State may, if its citizens chose, serve as a laboratory and try social and economic experiments without risk to the rest of the country."

On Lashing The Rudder.

The problem of neutrality has so far been discussed too much from the viewpoint of what would be ideally desirable for the American people. That can be very simply stated. We would like to be completely immunized from any involvement in wars originating beyond our borders. And we would like to achieve that condition without making any sacrifices except those which could be exacted from munition makers, international bankers, and people who travel abroad.

Evidently there is a striking analogy between certain current neutrality proposals and the Townsend pension plan. Both assume that a comfortable haven can be attained merely by legislating us into it. Both assume that this end insures benefit for the many and only penalizes the few. Both ignore the incalculable and disruptive consequences of legislation which has no stronger base than emotional wish fulfillment.

If unexpected results far more disastrous than those which followed our mandatory prohibition amendment are to be averted, Congress must consider certain factors underlying neutrality before, rather than after, it legislates on the subject. Of these perhaps the most important is the fact that the United States cannot possibly be neutral in the sense that many of our people wish it to be.

This unfortunate fact follows inevitably from the wealth, the power and the influence of the United States. Whatever position our Government assumes toward a foreign quarrel, even if we assume no position at all, that attitude is going to be instrumental in determining the outcome. Of course, this need not keep us from maintaining a technical neutrality between belligerents. But it does mean that we cannot escape taking sides, though perhaps without realizing that we are doing so.

As an illustration, it now seems simple to amend the present law by making it specifically applicable to the Spanish civil war. To do so would undoubtedly prevent further episodes like the airplane sales arranged by Mr. Cuse. But the effects of our action would not stop there. Germany, and to a lesser extent Italy, are now actively participating in the Spanish conflict. When we announce a rigid guarantee that under no circumstances will we draw any distinctions in this dispute we play right into the hands of those who have no such compunctions.

In the Spanish conflict this may be desirable. There is probably no immediate injury to us if, with our tacit connivance and consent, the radical Spanish government is obliterated by an alliance of Nazis, Fascists and Moorish mercenaries. The same might be said in many another case that could be imagined. But it is impossible to argue that it is in our national interest to establish a policy whereby we sell out all our constructive influence in advance and announce to the world that whatever the circumstances we draw no distinction between an aggressor and the victim of his aggression.

Such a policy may be placed on the statute books. But it will never endure. It would not fail because it is clearly in violation of the Kellogg Pact. It would not fail because it makes a mockery of the "good neighbor" attitude. It would fail primarily because such misnamed neutrality would conflict with a whole bundle of national interests which are forced upon us by the occupations of our people and their desire to maintain a decent standard of living in those occupations.

The policy of the United States, like that of any other great power in an anarchic world, must be based on balance-of-power conditions. We must sway our influence this way and that, as we have just been doing in Latin America, in accord with changing world conditions and our developing national needs.

Rigid, mandatory neutrality laws can deny the Executive that flexibility which our foreign policy must have to keep us permanently at peace. They can cramp, restrict and injure the development of a program in accord with fundamental national interests. Their effect, however, would be merely that of lashing the rudder in a stormy sea. Such action certainly deprives an untrustworthy pilot of all discretion. But it is worse than worthless as a means of keeping a vessel off the rocks.

Off With His Head.

We Americans are not the only people with a sublime faith in the efficacy of the written law. There are also the Chinese.

For at least as long as this Nation has been grappling with the problem of intoxicants China has been face to face with the addiction of its people to narcotics. In a typical Chinese fashion, and one somewhat reminiscent of our prohibition amendment, the Nanking government recently decided to eliminate the narcotics evil by fiat. A law was decreed imposing the death penalty on uncured addicts. So certain were the authorities that such a law would solve the problem that free narcotics clinics were ordered abolished. They would no longer be needed, said Nanking officials ominously, "as there will not be any addicts after the execution orders are finished."

Reports regarding the action taken by the authorities after the law went into effect on January 1 are conflicting. According to one dispatch 130 addicts "and other undesirables" were put to the block in a town midway between Tientsin and Pieping. Pieping officials, however, said the victims had been condemned on other counts than drug addiction. In any case those flirting with narcotics have been warned that they are also flirting with death.

From one angle the government's move is as belated as it is potentially drastic. There is one famous addict who, had he been taken into the toils soon enough, might not have been able to cause as much trouble as he did recently. Had summary execution under the new law been enforced some years ago, the "young marshal," Chang Hsueh-liang, would never have had the opportunity of taking Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek prisoner.

Back To Fundamentals.

During the recent campaign, local officials several times took it upon themselves to prohibit or break up meetings held under the auspices of the Communist Party.

In some cases these high-handed acts were justified on the dubious ground that the individuals in question were planning to violate State criminal syndicalist laws. But the absence of such laws did not always of itself restrain authorities determined to prevent the expression of radical opinion. Some took the position that constitutional guarantees of free speech, freedom of the press and peaceful assemblage do not extend to "Reds." They took it upon themselves to differentiate between "liberty" and "license."

In a very striking opinion, the Supreme Court has now declared such actions contrary both to the letter and the spirit of the Constitution. Reversing the stand of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon in the De Jonge case it took occasion to emphasize certain fundamentals of American democracy which have too often been lost to sight.

Oregon, like some other States, has a rigorous criminal syndicalist law which not only bans organizations advocating violent revolutionary changes but even severely penalizes all those in any way connected with such organizations. On this ground a certain Dirk De Jonge, who spoke at a meeting held under the auspices of the Communist Party, was arrested and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. This conviction the Supreme Court has now set aside.

The reasons for this action are illuminating. The rights of States to protect themselves against revolutionary action and against the abuses of the rights of free speech, free press and peaceful assembly are affirmed. But a clear line must be drawn. Chief Justice Hughes pointed out in the unanimous opinion, between such action and the restriction of the individual's constitutional rights. He said:

> The holding of meetings for peaceable political action cannot be proscribed. Those who assist in the conduct of such meetings cannot be branded as criminals on that score. The question, if the rights of free speech and peaceable assembly are to be preserved, is not as to the auspices under which the meeting is held, but to its purpose; not as to the relations of the speakers, but whether their utterances transcend the bounds of the freedom of speech which the Constitution protects.

To this point the Chief Justice returned again and again. Elsewhere individual liberties have been greatly restricted or entirely abolished by totalitarian state and dictatorial regimes. But in the United States such actions have no place. In taking so downright a stand in favor of civil rights the Supreme Court has emphasized its vital function as a palladium of our hard-won liberties.

New Tennis Horizons.

Madison Square Garden is expecting a capacity crowd tonight. Dapper Fred Perry is to make his bow as a professional. Seats have been ticketed as high as $9.90, which means, with a sell-out indicated, that many spectators will pay several times as much to scalpers for admission. To them it may be worth it, to see the man who was the world's leading amateur in his first meeting with the world's leading professional—Ellsworth Vines.

Ourselves, we shall be content to wait until the troupe reaches this vicinity. Amusement prices run lower here, thankfully. Too, it may then be more clear whether the experts are to be trusted—today they are generally certain that Vines will take Perry three times out of four.

Aside from speculation as to Perry's prowess in the professional field, there is another angle to his debut tonight. His leaving the ranks of the amateurs gives the signal for a wholesale scramble among the players left behind. For four years now, Perry has so dominated at Wimbledon and Forest Hills that it has scarcely been worth the effort for anyone else to enter a tournament.

But now the top rung is empty. Germany's Von Cramm and Henkel must feel their fingers itching; and from "Down Under" comes news that Crawford and Quist are playing with renewed interest. As for this country, hope can now revive in Don Budge's breast, to say nothing of Bitsy Grant, Frank Parker and the host of other youngsters coming up on the courts. New horizons have been opened in the world of tennis.

The Maxwell Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "D. A. C." in The Post of January 4 argues for the acquittal of Edith Maxwell because her father was a "drunken brute." No doubt "D. A. C." favored the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the return of the saloon and is in favor of not only legalizing "mercy deaths," but of a son or daughter murdering his or her own father or mother if they get drunk.

The only arguments I have heard or read heretofore in favor of freeing Miss Maxwell have been based either on self-defense or her innocence. Even based on such, I doubt the good taste and propriety of outsiders again trying to finance another trial, since a jury has again found her guilty of striking the blow "that killed (her) father."

It is immaterial whether he would have died a natural death the next hour, day, decade or generation. She had no legal right to hit him a blow that shortened his life one second, any more than one or twenty or thirty years. Not only had she no such legal right, but no one has the right to the "patricide" of even a "drunken brute." A daughter's duty and obligation is to "honor thy father and thy mother," and not to kill them. And of the death of her father two juries of her neighbors and her "peers" have so found, and I think we outsiders better mind our own business, instead of trying to mind and to run the criminal affairs of Wise County, Va., or of any other place, except Washington, D. C. P. A.

Pedestrians And Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of December 28 there is a news item under the heading "U. S. Chamber Asks Regulation of Pedestrians." The last paragraph reads "Ninety-six per cent of the Chamber of Commerce and safety committee heads favor stricter regulation of pedestrians and 79 per cent favor arrests for jaywalkers."

Let it be here stated that only recently the mayor of New York refused to sanction a law to force pedestrians to follow restrictive rules as they walk the streets. The mayor stated it was impossible to execute such a law in the streets of New York City and he spoke wisely. But there is another way to look at the matter, and hitherto it has not been discussed. It is conceded everywhere that the majority rules. Pedestrians are most distinctly in the majority in this and every other city.

The automobile serves the public in many ways, but the price being paid for it is terrible. For 1936 the record of deaths was two weekly in Washington, and 37,450 for the entire country. This is the population of a fair sized town. The consumption of strong drink has something to do with it. About one year back a judge speaking from the bench made this statement, "A man who has taken only one drink of whiskey is not fit to safely control an automobile on crowded streets. The one drink will excite him just enough to produce in him a degree of carelessness which may result in disaster." R. LAPPIN.

Parade Suggestions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here's a suggestion for the inaugural parade; Sandwiched between the bayonets and the big guns, put an occasional float displaying a sentence or two from Mr. Cordell Hull's speech today at Buenos Aires, such as: "War is not an act of God; War is a crime of man," or, "We must destroy war, or war will destroy us."

If Admiral Grayson would like other pertinent phrases in dilution of the militarism of the inaugural display, he might ask the President to lend him the notes of his address at the opening of the Inter-American Peace Conference, now adjourned to the sound of the pacific councils of our Secretary of State. Washington Taxis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The three-point program for improving the operation of taxicabs in the District that the Public Utilities Commission will recommend to Congress would greatly benefit both the public and operators.

I am of the opinion that a mandatory liability law, making violations thereof punishable as a misdemeanor, for operators of motor vehicles for public hire is a long-felt need in order to protect passengers, pedestrians and other motorists. Although conditions are vastly more favorable in New York, there no hackman may get a license without first securing such an insurance policy. For some unaccountable reason Washington, as usual, lags behind.

That there are more than enough cabs in this city is self-evident. I have talked with many drivers during the past two and a half years of residence in the Capital, and they invariably said that fewer operators would allow them to earn a living. They bemoan the fact that installment payments, gas and oil, depreciation and perhaps insurance take a lot of 20 and 30 cent fares, making it impossible to clear over $18 to $20 per week on the average. Phelps' Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: William Lyon Phelps, who wouldn't read "Gone With the Wind" because of its alleged "controversial nature," but who, in summers whiles away his time at the University of Michigan suggesting to Michiganders that "Tobacco Road" is truly representative of the Southern scene, in The Post of January 4 takes issue with the authors of "The American Biography" as to the relative merits of Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. Wilson has long been the bone of contention between the Mayflower group and the Saxon-Scotch people of the South, but Mr. Phelps unintentionally renews the controversy while running away from controversy. Mr. Phelps' modesty in seeking controversy or avoiding the same also may be judged by his banning of Edgar Lee Master's "Lincoln." All in all it may be said that Mr. Phelps' chief success has been in howling "wolf, wolf," whenever anyone doubts values fixed only by iteration. The Mayflower group has fixed values only by iteration.

H. Taine in his criticism of English literature treated same upon the basis of invention, in the arts sciences, philosophies and humanities, in the background of race, surroundings and epoch. Outside the South there has been but one author who adequately meets the test—James Fenimore Cooper. Joel Chandler Harris, Samuel L. Clemens, and Margaret Mitchel also meet the test of Taine; while Edgar Allan Poe is more universal. There are other Southern authors whose works may grow into a greater appreciation, viz: Lanier and McNeill.

Instructors in English literature waste time and effort when they fail to follow the outline of Taine; and similarly they waste time and effort in treating American authors other than Cooper, Harris, Clemens, Mitchell, Poe and, perhaps, Lanier and McNeill. New England may retain the pulpwood business; but in literature it has invented nothing and as imitations of the English its chief art does not measure up.

The reader will note Mr. Phelps' criticism of the authors of "American Biography" runs to the numbers of columns allotted and not to the contents of those columns. Such is not sound criticism, but is illustrative of superficiality.

Signs Of Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With a Government in power that only needs a nudge or two to interpret its "mandate" as an excuse for whatever it sees fit to do, why stir things up with talk about a $5,000,000 memorial to Tom Jeff. They show signs of adhering to their 1932 economy plank. Don't disturb them.

Lower Bracket Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of your paper I read an article concerning some agitation by U. S. Senators for an increase in pay for Government employes in the lower pay brackets. As I am one of the employes in the lower pay brackets I am very much interested in the final outcome of this plan and therefore I submit for your consideration the following suggestions:

A great many of the lower paid Government employes have for many years been in the lowest pay station in a grade, although their efficiency rating has entitled them to advance in pay to the middle or higher pay station. I am in grade 3, C. A. F., and my rate of pay is $1,680. Six years ago I was advanced to this grade and took the position of an employe who was transferred to another branch of the Government. My pay has been the same for six years and the pay of my predecessor was $1,800. I am married and have three small children and have to rent a home. I cannot balance my budget on my present pay.

I believe a petition for our just deserts and a living wage should be circulated throughout the Government departments for signature by the lower paid employes, such petition to set forth grades, rate of pay, employes marital status, number of dependents, etc., would help. Such petition to be addressed to the Congress through the President of the United States.

Congressman's Resolutions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A set of resolutions for a Congressman:

1. I will scrutinize carefully every bill presented to Congress, and act upon them in accordance with my own opinions based on long reflection.

2. I will not use my position to gain unjustified moneys—not by way of stationery or mileage allowances—nor will I arrange for any members of my family to obtain salary for work not actually performed by them, either as members of my staff or otherwise.

3. I will not be a party to a delegation of any legislative power and I will regard my duty to my country as paramount.

4. I will regard loss of patronage as an attempt to swerve me from the path of duty, and take courage from that.

5. I will keep America out of war, unless our shores be threatened.

6. And to myself, I will be true.

Men and Justice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "A bit of Sarcasm" by Charles E. Cross with his reference to "The Intellectual Feminist" and "Sob Sister," who have defended Edith Maxwell through the columns of local newspapers, could only come from a male. Being of this species, and evidently living under the idea that this is a "man's world" and woman's place is in the kitchen and man is master and lord over all he surveys, causes me to state: Thank God there are "Intellectual Feminists" and "Sob Sisters." It would be a much colder and more cruel world if humanity had to depend entirely on men for social justice. HOPE.

A Venereal Patient.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the recent publicity in your columns on venereal disease, might it not be a good idea to publish a list of the places in the District where treatment may be secured free?

I am not asking in the interest of "a dear friend," but for myself. Being without employment, it was necessary to give up treatments; and doubtless there are many others in the same predicament.

Fair Enough

In Jail.

POSTING a thousand-dollar bond on an indictment for contempt of the House of Representatives, Dr. Townsend, proprietor of the Old-Age Pension Plan, is reported to have said that he would rather go to jail than pay a fine because he could use a good rest anyway.

I remember reading that in the Washington Jail when they have to put a man to death for murder they move the electric chair into the dining hall, plug in on a socket and do the unpleasant business there. That would be a distinct drawback to a man of Dr. Townsend's nature, and even if there were no execution during his vacation period it might disturb his rest to visualize when at meals the quick march to the chair, the muttered prayers, the flip of the warden's hand as a signal to the electrician and all the rest of it. True, as a physician, Dr. Townsend has seen men die, but never that way. I don't think he would relax as pleasantly as he anticipates.

Jail would not be so bad if it were not jail. But the best of them have a distinctive smell, the bedding is likely to give more unrest than rest and the company of men just putting in their time yawning, arguing, playing cards for matches and counting the days is depressing. Men in jail are not, for the most part, bad.

One will have taken a slap at his mother-in-law for putting in her 2 cents in every little household dispute, and will be doing 30 days, outwardly indifferent and gay, but inwardly humiliated and determined to make life miserable for the old ostrich in a thousand mean little ways when he gets out. There will be a lot of bound-overs waiting trial and profoundly discussing the law and the evidence. There will be some motor vehicle cases, drunk-and-disorderlies, small thieves and vagrants. The colored boys in the Northern jails where there is no Jim Crow segregation usually huddle together, anyway, and face the future with less show of anxiety, although that may only be an appearance, due to the fact that nobody cares much what happens to them. Even when they are out of jail, what does the future offer them?

There will be occasional little fights to break the monotony, and, as usual, in the group of men there will be one who is just no good and an outcast, even in jail. There will also be a comedian always good for a laugh, and one strong, stand-out character with a noticeable leadership, even though the roster is constantly changing. Dr. Townsend would meet interesting men in jail, and remember some of them very kindly afterward, though he might never see them again.

I interviewed David Lamar, the so-called "Wolf of Wall Street" in a jail at Caldwell, N. J., a few years ago, and found him the social leader of the little community. He was an erudite swindler, and he received visitors with an elaborate bow, saying, "Welcome to my castle; these are my friends." His friends would gather around and listen to his reminiscences, and he seldom had to do any chores, because he usually talked someone into doing his detail. But though he made the best of it, he didn't enjoy jail, and I doubt that Dr. Townsend would. Because, call it a rest cure, an experience or a retreat, jail is just what the word has always meant and always will. That is why we have them.

All Right! All Right!

The Advertiser recently ventured the opinion that the Negro and Banjo tradition was of dubious origin. It said the banjo was something that the stage put in the hands of Negroes, and that there was little basis for the notion that the banjo was now or ever had been associated to any great extent with the Negro. The writer was brought up among Negroes in Alabama. He said he had never seen a banjo in the hands of a Negro except on the stage.

Office-wisecrackers immediately began to pop-off around the head of the writer. Street-corner wags laughed at him. Letters came in from many parts of the State, one from Louisiana yesterday. No less than a half dozen persons assured the writer that they had each seen "a thousand" Negroes playing banjos off the stage—not 920, not 1,100, but 1,000! That's a lot of banjos, thus admitting that the banjo now is not in high favor, but insisting that at one time it was as commonplace as the drinking gourd.

Well, we can take it.

Sunday Battle.

Narragansett tribesmen thought the English settlers were too religious to fight on Sunday. Settlers fooled them. The army of the united colonies chose Sunday to attack the principal encampment of Narragansetts who were carrying on a war against the settlements, the first major war in America. The Narragansett fort was burned, 1,000 Amerindians were killed and captured. The English lost 200. The bloody, two-year war started because Amerindians killed an Amerindian! The settlers executed three Narragansetts for killing a fellow tribesman, and the tribe rose in revolt against the white man's law.

BOOKS

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

Little Old New York

By Mary Phifer

HENRY COLLINS BROWN, a native of New York City, was the founder of the Museum of the City of New York, and is called the "human interest historian." This combination of facts is evident throughout this recent volume he has written about New York City. Only a native could be interested in many of the facts and stories he relates about New York—such as where this or that old stream used to run somewhere through the Borough of Queens and whose house used to be on the bank of the stream, and altogether too many other entirely local geographical trivia that are not of general interest. This content of the book is the only part of it that makes hard reading.

The other two biographical facts about the author are witnessed to in the rest of the book, and are responsible for several delightful anecdotes and reminiscences, and what appears to be an unlimited knowledge of the background and history of various personalities mentioned.

• • • •

THE City of Flushing, in the Borough of Queens, has the place of honor in this volume because it has been chosen as the site for the next world's fair. Prediction is made that it will be the most beautiful world's fair yet, because of a new scheme of lighting that will be used throughout, a light in which filaments in the lamps are done away with and very much brighter illumination is obtained.

The remainder of the book deals, one by one, with each borough that makes up Greater New York—Brooklyn, the Bronx, Manhattan, Queens and Richmond. Following are a few highlights from a mass of facts and stories told about each one:

Brown believes Queens has a brighter future than the other four boroughs because of her enormous water frontage, which will entice more families there to live, and will some day make Queens into an important port of entry.

William Gillette, the actor, studied stenography at one time in his life while living in a Manhattan boarding house, and practiced shorthand every evening by taking down the conversation that took place in the sitting room. "Years later," he told Channing Pollock, "I went over my notebooks, and found that in four months of incessant conversation, no one had said anything that made any difference to anybody."

There were four sisters in the show business playing in Chicago, and they were so terrible that they were a big success. Oscar Hammerstein brought them to New York, and again their success was immediate and tremendous, all because they were bad to the point of absurdity. Hammerstein had to raise a curtain of fish net in front of the stage to catch the over-ripe vegetables and eggs that were by that time an important part of the show.

THE magazine field, headed by Harper's, Century and Scribner's, made New York's name in the literary and artistic world. Until the turn of the century, Boston had been literary capital of the country, and nowhere in America was art acknowledged even to approach the European standard. However, these three magazines soon surpassed anything literary that Boston was producing, and the art work, beautifully reproduced by improved printing processes, rivaled anything Europe could produce. These magazines relied on circulation only for their entire revenue, until Roswell P. Smith of the Century opened the pages of that magazine to advertising. It immediately proved to be a gold mine, and Harper's and Scribner's began to sell space on their pages.

These quality magazines had exclusive enjoyment of this new source of income for only a short time, however, and soon a new type of magazine sprang up, with the sole idea of making money. Samuel S. McClure started the first one of this new type, which were called "ten-centers." It was called "McClure's," naturally enough, and carried stories by Jack London, Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, George Ade, Meredith Nicholson, James Whitcomb Riley, Willa Cather and Ida Tarbell. These now famous authors were unknown at that time, so by paying less for manuscripts and soliciting advertising, McClure could publish a very good magazine for 10 cents.

THE author is very indignant at the slurs that have been cast at Brooklyn, and maintains that it is preferable to the other boroughs in every respect. However, he is fair enough to relate some of the funnier slurs. A bewildered old lady was headed toward a Brooklyn-bound subway, and a guide, thinking she was lost and needed help, asked her if she wanted to go to Brooklyn, and she replied angrily: "No. I have to go."

New Yorkers had only the vaguest notions about the Borough of Richmond until Buffalo Bill decided it would be the right background for his famous Wild West Show. Afterward, they knew a little more about it, but since that brief show of interest have become indifferent again.

The Bronx is described as the most beautiful borough, with several old rambling estates and huge mansions, and as a center of learning. The author predicts that it will become one of the great educational centers of the country.

The illustrations of this rambling, chatty book are especially noteworthy. There are numerous full-page plates of scenes in the five boroughs, as well as dozens of pen-and-ink sketches of intimate recollections. The artists include Edwin A. Abbey, Walter Appleton Clark, Charles Dana Gibson and A. B. Frost.

"FROM ALLEY POND TO ROCKEFELLER CITY," by Henry Collins Brown. (Dutton, $3.50.)

Living in Japan

"LIVING IN JAPAN," by Glenn W. Shaw. (Hokuseido, Tokyo, $2.)

Mr. Shaw lives in Japan and likes it. The general amiability of the people, picturesque surroundings as well as strange manners and customs, unexpected adventures incident to life in Japan are a few of many other attractions. "And if you must die," concludes Mr. Shaw, "well, you will be cremated and buried decently and with all the honor your life has made yours."

The second part of "Living in Japan" is much more interesting to us since under various headings, the author discusses the modern trend in Japan. Prose literature, for example, can be roughly divided into pure, proletarian, mass, and popular literature. According to the most recent authors' yearbook, there are 637 writers, 837 principal periodicals, 11,860 newspapers, and among the large publishing countries of the world, Japan claims second place, putting Soviet Russia first.

"In spite of nationalistic trend," Mr. Shaw writes, "there has been surprisingly little written on the subject by literary men." A few poems to illustrate Japanese characteristics, Japanese literature in English dress, and a brief discussion of Toson Shimazaki and his monumental novel "Before the Dawn," are highly informative and delightful reading. SHIO SAKANISHI.

The All-Nations Prize Novel

Jolan Foldes, of Hungary, Wins Coveted Award in International Book Competition With Story of Exiles Entitled "The Street of the Fishing Cat."

Jolan Foldes of Kenderes, Hungary

Winner of the All-Nations Prize Novel Competition.

By Rae Lewis.

The publication of the winner of the All-Nations Prize Novel Competition has been awaited with, to say the least, curiosity. There was, naturally, dissension over the American contender selected from an entry list of more than 500 by William Soskin, Carl Van Doren and Joseph Wood Krutch. This entry, "Steps Going Down," by John T. McIntyre, was reviewed on this page. Its adherents have been convinced that it couldn't be surpassed by a foreign book. And those who didn't care for it have been torn between their patriotism and their hope that the winner would be a better novel. The lady's clutching arms and the tiger's handsome teeth repel on either side.

This contest was sponsored by Farrar and Rinehart, the Literary Guild, Warner Brothers, and publishers in ten foreign countries. Each of the latter contributed part of the grand prize and, in some instances, a prize of its own. ("Steps Going Down" won $4,000 for McIntyre.) It is interesting to note that, although the Spanish publisher could not fulfill his part, a Spanish novel was submitted and, as a matter of courtesy, considered among the final group. The contest opened in April, 1935, and closed a year later, carrying a prize of about $19,000. No announcement has been received as to whether this is the first of a series.

The value of such competitions, except to sell books for publishers, has always been a moot subject, for it seems quite likely that those who really want to write will go on doing so, without the impetus of either competition or encouragement. At any rate, it can not be said that this one "discovered" Jolan Foldes, for she had won a Hungarian literary prize four years ago with a novel and published another since, in addition to having a degree of success with a play in Budapest.

She was born in Kenderes in Hungary, home village of Admiral Nicholas Horthy. Attendance at Vienna University was followed by the Paris Sorbonne. There, at 19, she ran off with a boy of the same age; however, this did not suit their parents, allowances were stopped, and she started to work. This was followed by her being general factotum of the Hungarian Embassy in Egypt. Subsequently, she obtained a divorce and remarried more happily.

The author must have absorbed from personal experience some of the material in "The Street of The Fishing Cat." After all, she, like the Barabas family, was a Hungarian expatriate in Paris. Like Jani, she studied; like Klari, she loved and wed a student; like Anna, she struggled to earn a livelihood.

Certainly, according to Jolan Foldes, expatriates eventually pass into nothingness. Gyula Barabas took the advice of his friend, M. Brull, that in Paris skilled furriers were in demand. With Boriska and their three children, he moved to the alien city, leaving no foothold. Their lives for the next 15 years, in la Rue du Chat-Qui-Peche, comprise the tale, which is principally occupied with the children's growing-up and the vicissitudes of making a living. Anna, in her early teens, becomes apprenticed to a dressmaker, Jani studies engineering, and Klari, medicine. After a huge forgery, put over by a Hungarian, Anna and her father lost their jobs because of the prejudice against "foreigners." They attempted to make a future for the family in Buenos Aires, but failed and returned. Again, the same fate befell them when the King of Yugoslavia and the French foreign secretary were killed in Marseilles. They then attempted to re-establish themselves in Hungary, but admitted the impossibility and returned again to Paris.

Their companions were from other lands also—Russia, Poland, Spain, Italy, etc.—although most of these are people who have escaped or been exiled. There are Liiv, Lithuanian Socialist; Alvarez, Spanish Anarchist; Cathrina, Russian Communist; Pia Monica, daughter of a former Italian cabinet officer, and many others. They are all alien to one another and yet unbelievably sympathetic and compassionate. As large a group of people, with as much to grieve and anger them, as well as make them rebellious, never existed in such an actionless, acquiescent state.

All of them long to go "home" and refuse, despite years away, to put down roots in the new land. None of the others ever went home; they would probably have learned, like Barabas and his daughter, that "home" is now the strange country.

It is with exceptional perception that this phase is handled, as witness: "Homesickness never goes to sleep. It may subside, grow calm, move down into the lower currents of the soul, but there it ripples and murmurs like an underground stream. Did you ever live near a brook? Did you ever stay in a house where a dynamo is at work? Then you know that your ears get used to the murmur, get used to the house oscillating to the rhythm. You get so hardened to it that in the end you do not hear it at all."

On the other hand, the reality of Paris is absent. It is, in the book, a place of French names inhabited by alien French people. The streets have French names, but it might as well be in Indo-China, except for the twin towers of Notre Dame—which anyone, by the way, could invent from a postcard. Likewise, one does not "see" the characters; it's like knowing friends only over the telephone; some part of the complete mental picture is lacking.

Universality of experience ever charms, however, no matter how bitter it may be. Add to it the adept expression of simply, but usually unvoiced feelings, and it's every man's mixture. While old Bardichinov lay critically ill of pneumonia, his friends were mourning, meanwhile inconsiderately consuming the oxygen of his poor room. "Klari's eyes wander contemptuously from one to the other. She would like to say something about always having to be prepared for life and not for death, but her 13 years do not find the appropriate words."

This is not an exceptionally long book, nor a weighty one. Political angles and propaganda are omitted. There is a scarcity of food for thought, although the whole reads easily and pleasantly enough. Fine fragments are to be found, such as, for example, Anna's feelings on shipboard in spite of the sadness of parting and the fears which beset her: "She is overwhelmed by the radiant charm of the voyage, by the sense of the irresponsibility and the freedom from all care, the adjournment that fate, on these occasions, accords in the petty lawsuits of human life." But that, unfortunately, is just the point—the beauty is occasional and the continually ineffable charm cloys the mind and tangles the feet.

Preservation in translation of the alert quality of the dialogue and the naturalness of the entire scene is greatly to the credit of Elizabeth Jacobi who translated this book from the Hungarian.

"THE STREET OF THE FISHING CAT," by Jolan Foldes. (Farrar and Rinehart, $2.50.)

Gardening

"SOUTH AFRICAN PLANTS FOR AMERICAN GARDENS," by Sarah V. Coombs. (Stokes, $4.50.)

"In South African Plants for American Gardens," Sarah V. Coombs has done a very excellent and thorough piece of work. This book is a valuable addition to garden libraries in that the plants with which it deals are assuming a more important place in American gardens every year. One purpose which motivated the writing of this piece of garden literature was to indicate to gardeners of different sections of the United States which of these plants might be added to their collections for indoor and outdoor culture. The first three chapters tell of the habits and requirements of South African plants; simple planting plans are given as well as lists of plants suited to different localities with full directions for their cultivation.

The second object of this book is to give to people of northern countries an idea of the beauty of plant life which flourishes under the Southern Cross. In order to do this the author has divided the plants into four horticultural classifications: (1) bulbous plants, (2) annuals and herbaceous perennials, (3) succulents and (4) trees and shrubs.

A short, informal discussion is given of each leading genus, and the outstanding species are taken up in a more or less technical manner. The color of the flower, the height of the plant and the character of the foliage are denoted. From these descriptions one gets a suggestion of the beauty of Tritonias, the Ixias, the Crinums, the Watsonias, and the Moreas and many others that would make desirable occupants of American gardens. In addition to the accurate descriptions, photographic illustrations and some colored plates convey very clearly the author's purpose.

At the end of the book there is a glossary which has reduced the many Latin terms to their simplest meaning. Following this is a list of dealers from whom South African seed, bulbs and plants may be bought. There is also a helpful list of synonyms as well as an index of botanical and common names.

Book Ends

By Bett Hooper.

There's a January issue of Harper's Magazine on my desk . . . And in it an article on book reviewing by Theodore Hall, who, until May of 1936 was keeper of the bookcase keys which now swing from my key lock . . . "No occupation on earth," Ted says, "can be more sedentary and more solitary than book reviewing" . . . Ted it was who hied himself off to Columbus, Ohio, to write fiction . . . As of December 1 he reports: "Tonight I expect to go to a local auditorium and hear Carl Sandburg sing and strum his guitar. I wish you were going to be along. It's damned solitary around here most of the time" . . . Fie on Harper's for putting his name correctly on the cover . . . on the table of contents . . . and then made "Hall" into "Hunt" over the article . . .

Frances Winwar, author of the Atlantic prize-winning biography on the Rossetti family, will have a new historical novel out in the spring . . . It's to be called "Gallows Hill" and is, of course, about the persecution of "witches" in Salem . . . I suppose Jean Harlow will have the lead since Claudette Colbert has been cast as another maid of Salem . . . Oh, well, the hats were cute in those days and by the time Adrian gets through with them, we may expect a Salem style wave . . .

Pity Prof. George C. D. Odell, whose book "Annals of the New York Stage" has just been published . . . Covering the years from 1865 to 1870, it naturally spans that period when James Gordon Bennett, publisher of the New York Herald, and the great Barnum went off speaking terms . . . The publisher refused to print any advertising for the noted showman . . . So Barnum got the other producers and managers to withdraw their advertising from the Herald . . . So, Prof. Odell found life exceedingly difficult when he was trying to reconstruct the theatrical history for that season . . . The next time you get ready to speak a cross word, don't . . . Think of future biographers . . . It's easier than counting ten . . .

Mary Scull, who does such swell work in the calendar line, took pity on me after reading my plaint that there were no more old-fashioned calendars . . . She sent me a very fine one with the following verse which I think is good enough to be printed:

Although I looked through many, and tried so very hard,
I couldn't find a lady on a Christmas card
That had a muff with violets and also ermine tails;
They all had skis or candles or else Madonna veils.

But when it comes to calendars, we're tops, and don't you doubt it,
I know you soon will wonder how you got along without it,
'Twill hold your dates and list your books and note your plans ahead—

This is a good time to take inventory of how many ski cards . . . how many candles cards . . . how many Madonna cards, etc. . . . you received Christmas . . . Chris Morley has a mighty comprehensive survey of his in his latest book, "Streamlines." . . .

Another doctor has written his autobiography . . . Dr. Andrea Majocchi, Italy's foremost surgeon, will have a book of memoirs out this spring . . . D'Annunzio once said of him: "His scalpel is miracle working" . . . It will be interesting to see if his pen is mightier than his scalpel . . .

I heard that Dorothea Brande of "Wake Up and Live" lost a mink coat here this New Year . . . I hope it wasn't during one of those hours of the day in which she wasn't speaking to anyone . . . Or that it wasn't one of the hours which she had set aside to be pleasant to everyone whom she encountered . . . Imagine saying: "Good morning, my good man . . . And have you stolen my mink coat, you old dear?" . . . But maybe authors don't practice what they preach in their books . . .

When Ben Lewis, author of "Riding," induced Eugene Friduss, famous photographer, to go with him to the United States Army post at Governor's Island to take pictures, that was only the beginning of their difficulties . . . Realizing that the only successful way to give a complete picture of riding was to include "shots from the rider's viewpoint," they had to build a scaffold high and wide enough so that a jumping horse with a rider could clear under it, but not shy away from it . . . It had to be solid enough to hold Mr. Friduss, yet not so high that the snaps would be out of focus . . . Then they had to persuade Maj. Catesby Jones to lend them his horse "Cadet" . . . prevail upon Maj. Robert P. Stout to be the rider . . . And still some people think that all a photographer has to do is say "look pleasant" and press the bulb. . . .

Donald A. Laird, of Colgate University, author of "Increasing Personal Efficiency," says that the best way to start increasing personal efficiency for the New Year is to take a couple of hours extra sleep before staying out the night of December 31 . . . "Lost sleep should always be made up in advance before it is lost" . . . I had intended making this column much longer . . . But I think I'll start now making up the sleep which I intend to lose next New Year . . . And a happy one to you, and you, and you . . .

Electricity

"ELECTRICITY: FOR USE OR FOR POWER?" by Bernhard Ostrolenk. (Harper's, $2.)

Magic has played a vital role in many phases of human thought and activity. In religion, magic is what scholars call the "strategy of animism." In social and economic life, magic formulae are panaceas. But in science, magic becomes reality. Electricity, magic par excellence, requires no Dr. Faustus to direct its powers. Therefore, Bernhard Ostrolenk cannot be accused of being fantastic when, in "Electricity: For Use or for Power?" he pleads time and again that simply by increasing consumption of electric power the standard of living of American families will rise.

Dr. Ostrolenk indicts the private utility companies, and he makes it strong on every count. He blames them for the fact that "more than nine-tenths of America's farm homes and two-fifths of its urban homes have no electricity in any form." And he blames them because he is sure that rates are much higher than they should be.

There is, however, one method of making private power companies bring rates down—the "yardstick." That it works, Dr. Ostrolenk has no doubt; rather, he has figures: The average rate per kilowatt-hour in the United States is 7.1 cents; in Montreal, with competition between municipal and private plants, 3.5 cents; average annual residential consumption in Montreal is 2,400 kilowatt-hours, while in similar sized cities in the United States it is 400; further, in 1935 three companies affected by T. V. A. competition, in spite of rate reductions as high as 60 per cent, increased their earnings over 1934 by 5.8 per cent.

It will be evident from this brief review that Dr. Ostrolenk's book is packed with figures. It is a masterful argument for government power development. That is its mission. But on just that account it gives a much too one-sided picture. Private utilities do have some valid arguments; Prof. Ostrolenk does not say so, but perhaps he implies it when he says, "Certain it is that the yardstick may preserve the utilities for private capital."

Modern Magic Carpet

By Frank McNinch, Jr.

ARTIST BALDRIDGE and Authoress Singer (Baldridge) have supplied the material for a beautiful volume of travel in modern Persia. Adhering strictly to a sketch book composition, this volume vividly presents, throughout its 153 large pages, the impressions and reactions of both artist and author as they wander about this ancient land.

With carte blanche from the Persian commissioner of police they proceed from Basrah on the Persian Gulf up through Ur of the Chaldees of Baghdad on the Tigris; from there to Hamadan, to Kazvin, up to Tabriz and back down to Teheran; thence over to Nishapur and Meshed, back over and down to Isfahan and Shiraz, off on a side journey to Yazd, then back up to Tebran and across again to Baghdad; then down to Basrah once more to leave the country. Broken by many short side excursions to places of historical interest or to meet some local or foreign potentate or official, the log of these travels is a hectic account of surmounting local and natural obstacles to transportation and bodily comfort.

THE account of these helter-skelter hops from place to place, amid dust storms and cold, in obsolete and decrepit automobiles, and of the frequent and exasperating stops in the most dilapidated of shelters, is given in ten disconnected chapters. In a highly sketchy and impressionistic style the reader is carried through the rigors of travel in a land with few or no transportation facilities.

Days are wasted waiting for some shiftless procrastinator to produce an excuse for an automobile; then hours are spent in physical discomfort upon the road, halting for endless bickerings with minor police and local officials to gain the necessary passage permits.

Breakdowns, cold nights spent upon springs with no mattresses, meals of cold wheat cakes and tea, dust then rain, heat then cold, endless harangues, seem to be the constant lot of the traveler in Iran. Each chauffeur regards it as his holy duty to extort three times the agreed price for each leg of the journey; each minor officer and guard must not let one pass until the full importance of his personage and position is properly realized, and each sect and creed would have one know that all other sects and creeds are of no importance whatever.

• • • •

MODERN Persia is presented as a kaleidoscopic picture of an ancient land now in the throes of rebirth, with midwives of many nations attempting to control the destiny of the child. With English interests well established, the French wielding a powerful influence, with Russia active on the north, and with a strong nationalistic consciousness burning in the minds of the younger generation, the Persian nation is in a seething, unsettled state of transition from the old order to an undetermined new.

Each village and city differs from its neighbor. Here old customs have been abolished, and women appear unveiled; there women have gained not an inch of emancipation. Here a group is attempting to foster a theater and produce modern plays with local actors; there another group forces the closing of a cinema house; a feud arises over the attempt to establish a silk factory, a rug factory. Class opposes class and creed hates creed; one wishes for modernization and another clings fast to the old; and the result is a turbulent nation made up of almost every conceivable division and degree of race, religion, class, industry and government; a chaotic and inflammable conglomeration of diverse peoples, interests and ideals.

THROUGH this country, back and forth, Mr. and Mrs. Baldridge have traveled, meeting men, women and children; visiting officials, wandering through bazaars and shops and dipping into the life of the country and people as design or whim dictated. Mrs. Baldridge has recorded her impressions in a vivid and terse fashion, although her style is frequently so sketchy and broken that reading becomes difficult and tiresome.

A large volume, 9 by 12½ inches, "Half the World Is Isfahan," is admirably illustrated with six full-page color crayons and over 100 excellent marginal sketches by Mr. Baldridge. His work shows an exceptional ability to catch in a few bold lines a character or scene of interest, and he has thus accurately depicted both the people and the everyday life in contemporary Persia.

"Half the World Is Isfahan" is not a book for the person desiring a plot or much continuity in his reading. It should, however, have a strong appeal for one interested in the Persia of today, or in well-executed crayon drawings and sketches of distant and interesting subjects accompanied by first-hand impressions of those subjects.

Picture of the People

"THE SOUND OF RUNNING FEET," by Josephine Lawrence. (Stokes, $2.50.)

F. P. A., in his column recently, discussed what he rightly called "egomania" in current book titles. To be in the vogue, he suggested "Vanity Fair" should be renamed "I Live on Nothing a Year" and "Ethan Frome" would be better captioned "I Took a Sled Ride."

The suggestion was apposite, because it had already occurred to me that "The Sound of Running Feet," the new novel by Josephine Lawrence, could as well have been called "If I Had a Salary Raise." Miss Lawrence had already played with the egomania theory by calling her previous well-deserved success "If I Have Four Apples." But in that title there was nothing to cast any doubt on the complete objectivity of this very competent author's thought. In "The Sound of Running Feet" she has guarded herself in advance against the legitimate criticism voiced by F. P. A. But if the title chosen is somewhat ambiguous, the text of Miss Lawrence's novel is all that could be desired in analytical reporting of contemporary America.

Those who were impressed by the tragi-comedy of "If I Have Four Apples," will naturally approach "The Sound of Running Feet" with high expectations. And they will not be disappointed. It is in the same genre and lots more of it. Probably there is too much of it for we are not going to remember as much about these ten character studies as we do about that all-too-human family in the previous book. But the problems faced by the people in this new book are the everyday stuff of life and we will remember and appreciate the humorous and tender insight into their situations long after we forget the individuals who comprise them.

This book is a sympathetic study of small business people in their office and home relations. The business is a small real estate organization much hurt by the depression and only kept alive by the struggle and sacrifice of the owners. We see a group of eight employees, men and women from 18 to 60 and their two employers. One young clerk, very consciously representing rebellious youth, undertakes to organize the staff to demand better hours and higher wages. Then we are given their individual stories against the home background, all bound together by the office.

Employers, especially those in small business enterprises, would do well to circulate this book among their employes. The bosses are almost the only characters not afflicted with the gimmies and not because they are surfeited with profits either. In their grooves the employers are just as up against it as any of their clerks. A depressing scene—too true to be altogether amusing but very salutary reading if you think you should have a salary raise, provided, of course, you are a philosopher, which none of the employes of River, Mead and Luth were.

If Josephine Lawrence would use her talented pen and her remarkable insight into modern characters on people with higher intellectual standards she could undoubtedly give us something to tear the heart strings. If she turned her searchlight on people of ambition and sensitivity struggling with their disquietude and destiny against economic pressure she would give us a work of more enduring worth.

True the employes in River, Mead and Luth's office were all striving for something, but in their case it was generally a fur coat, a new permanent or a car, and they struggled with unexpected sickness, real and fancied, poor relations, unsympathetic mates and mortgages.

The group make a well rounded picture; the weak men have sterling wives, the selfish women have patient husbands, the unmarried are as bound by families as the married, but one and all are up against circumstances which have them beaten from the start and if they could have had their salaries raised you know the vicious circle would have continued. It ends with an inevitable romantic note very well done. But there against the reader knows it can only add another ring to the circle and so on forever. There is no escape.

Congress, Fully Organized, Awaits President's Delivery of Annual Message Today

Hattie Caraway Acts as Escort For Robinson

Women Members Appear Mostly in Black, Wearing Flowers.

Two feminine legislators—one in the Senate, one in the House—broke precedents yesterday as the opening session of the Seventy-fifth Congress got under way.

Senator Hattie W. Caraway's face was wreathed in smiles, and what has frequently been referred to as her "mouse-like" mien was totally missing yesterday as she escorted her colleague, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, to the rostrum to take his oath of office, and became the first woman ever to escort a Senator in this ceremony.

Meanwhile, over in the House, Representative Nan Wood Honeyman of Oregon was breaking a different kind of precedent. For the first hour after the veteran clerk, South Trimble, had called the assembly to order, she sat sedately wearing a hat—the only member of the House, male or female, ever to sit so long with head covered in a body where the rule is "no hat in here." Later, she removed her lid and looked happier about it.

While the remaining members of the feminine block in Congress did not break any precedents, each chalked up an "only" in her attire to distinguish her from the others. Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, in a black brocaded crepe frock had two orchids on her shoulder; Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, also in black, was bedecked with three gardenias; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, had an orchid on her shoulder and a gardenia on her bosom. Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, did not wear flowers, but she had a yard-long string of pearls knotted around her throat, and a fan that matched her black dress fluttered noiselessly in the buzz of activity that marked the opening of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

insisted the planes were for local use in Central America.

While Federal departments insisted the planes were for commercial use, rumors nevertheless were rife among those close to aeronautics that the purchasing of second-hand planes for war was going on at a rapid rate all over America.

"There's plenty of it going on around various parts of the country," an officer of the National Aeronautic Association said yesterday. "The market is booming, especially in the southwest, the Pacific Coast and around New York."

A government official, who refused to permit use of his name, said: "I have heard through underground channels that agents are buying anything that will fly. There has been a lot of it offered for sale lately, and it is being bought, although many of the ships are too old for safe use in a country where there are any regulations."

Department of Commerce officials said that all planes bought were of large carrying capacity—varying from a ton to more than three tons with no small ones—it would be difficult to convert them into bombers. It was explained that bombs can not be "shoveled out the side door," that careful distribution of load, and other factors would make the ships impractical for war purposes.

The oldest plane sold was built in 1928, four were built in 1929, one in 1930, one in 1932, and the rest in 1933 and 1934. All of them will fly, but all are out of date. Sales in obsolete ships have picked up during the past six months, over the first half of the year, the records show. New ships are too expensive for the Central American purchasers, it was said.

Commerce Department records do not show any information concerning buyers beyond the names. The State Department, however, makes an effort to determine who the ultimate buyer may be in the event such goods are sold to neutrals. A report on the subject is to be issued next week.

Nine Vultees, built in 1934, and capable of carrying 3,200 pounds apiece was the largest export consignment. Commerce Department files show the Vultees were sold to Charles H. Babb by American Airlines, Inc. Babb resold them to Rudolph Wolf, Inc., 80 Wall street, New York City, an agent for Central American buyers.

Four old Ford planes, built in 1929, recently have gone to Honduras. These planes will take aloft 3,840 pounds each.

Six Curtis Condors have been picked up by the Compania de Transportes Aereos del Pacifico, Mexico City. Built in 1933 and 1934, these ships will carry 3,300 pounds each.

Smaller consignments of one or two planes each were sent as follows: One Boeing and one Ford to the Sociedad Colombo-Alemana de Transportes Aeros, Barranquilla, Colombia; one Pitcairn, to Panama; one Boeing, Campania Nacional de Aviation, which lists its agency office in Los Angeles; two Boeings, Republic of Honduras; one Ford, Empresa Nacional de Transportes de Sud Americana; one Boeing, Guardia Nacional de Nicaragua.

These planes all represent obsolete stock owned by the main American air companies. The planes have been gathering dust in hangars all over the Nation. American Airlines, Inc., disposed of the largest number—six Condors, nine Vultees and three Fords.

Amendment Sentiment Grows For U. S. Hour-Wage Control

by constitutional amendment, the question of whether they desire to grant additional powers to Congress."

By supporting such an amendment, Ashurst said he did not mean he opposed such legislation as the Federal incorporation bill, through which Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, hopes to write regulation of working conditions into Federal charters granted corporations.

He said he believed the Supreme Court decision Monday upholding the Ashurst-Sumners act prohibiting interstate shipment of prison-made goods to States prohibiting their sale had opened a new field for legislative action, particularly in the sphere of child labor. The Arizonan may sponsor a bill making standards governing shipment of prison-made goods applicable to child labor.

"Briefest Amendment."

The Constitutional amendment he will offer today is one of the broadest proposals to extend Federal powers yet submitted, and would give Congress power not only to regulate hours and conditions of labor, and fix minimum wage standards, but to regulate industry, business, production, agriculture, commerce and trade as well.

It provides simply that "the Congress shall have power to make laws to regulate agriculture, commerce, industry and labor"—the briefest Constitutional amendment ever proposed.

Senator Schwellenbach immediately seized on the Supreme Court's prison-made goods decision to draft his bill applying the same working conditions to goods, wares and merchandise manufactured and processed in establishments in which employes work more than 30 hours a week, or employ child labor.

"While I can not agree with the opinion as expressed by some that the Supreme Court's decision yesterday absolutely solves all of our problems so far as labor legislation is concerned," said Schwellenbach, "it is unquestionably true that yesterday's decision makes much more effective the regulatory legislation which I am introducing."

Cheered by the court decision, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor said that "even a superficial study of it justifies the conclusion that the shipment and sale of goods manufactured by child labor in States where the employment of children is prohibited by statute can be barred effectively." Green said the Federation will continue to support the child labor amendment, and sponsor legislative moves to prevent child labor exploitation.

A detailed and far-reaching program of farm tenant aid was incorporated in the 18-page bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Jones, who worked co-operatively last year with Senator John Bankhead, of Alabama, whose farm tenant bill failed of passage in the House. Bankhead will introduce a companion bill in the Senate today.

Requires $500,000,000.

The Jones measure would capitalize the proposed Farmers Home Corporation at $50,000,000 and provide for $500,000,000 in appropriations over a ten-year period to operate a system of land purchases and loans whereby farm tenants could become home and farm owners.

The corporation would be managed by three directors appointed by the President, consisting of one director each from the Treasury, the Agriculture Department and the Farm Credit Administration.

Broad powers would be granted the corporation in moving toward its objective of farm ownership by tenants and improvements of tenant conditions. It would have authority not only to make loans and enter contracts, but to "acquire, by purchase, gift, or otherwise, any real or personal property or any interest therein." Further, it could "construct, maintain, or acquire necessary buildings, improvements, furnishings, equipment, implements and machinery, supplies, facilities and livestock." It could borrow money up to one-fifth of paid-in capital, could improve, sell, lease or otherwise dispose of property, and would continue to function until dissolved by act of Congress.

No loans would be made to finance indebtedness except that on property purchased from the corporation, and no farm would be transferred to a purchaser until 25 per cent of the purchase price had been paid.

Interest rates on the tenants' unpaid balance of the purchase price would be the same as that charged for direct loans by the Federal land banks. An emergency rate of 3½ per cent, expiring next June, is now charged by the land banks. Significantly, Jones introduced another bill yesterday to extend the land bank emergency loan rate another two years.

Argentine Minister Sees Increased U. S. Trade

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Increased trade between the United States and Argentina is predicted for 1937 in a statement made today by Dr. Roberto Artiz, Argentine minister of finance, a Buenos Aires cable to the Argentine Information Bureau revealed.

Dr. Ortiz said the visit of President Roosevelt to Argentina assures that official efforts will be made to increase the flow of commerce between the two nations and the President's promise that he will urge the ratification of the United States-Argentine sanitary convention gives hope for a better basis for expanding trade.

Warmth Blooms Flowers.

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 5 (AP).—Mild weather has made the daffodils daffy and enticed the daphne mezereum, forsythia and countless johnny jump-ups to bloom. Mrs. Braddock M. occasions during the last five or six years. That was the air of gayety which hung over House and Senate in contrast with the tension and strained nervousness which has marked the beginning of pervious sessions in depression years.

"Rebel Yells" Missing.

But despite this air of gayety and inter-party harmony, the House displayed greater dignity than on past opening days. Not even when Speaker William B. Bankhead, re-elected by an overwhelming vote, was escorted to the rostrum did the House Democrats break out in yells and cheers. The "rebel yells" of the Southern Democrats have been a feature of opening sessions since that party captured control of the House in 1930.

Speaker Bankhead was roundly applauded when his election was announced, when he appeared and when he graciously and fulsomely lauded Republican Floor Leader Bertrand H. Snell, who nominally opposed him for the Speakership. But it was polite applause, perhaps due to the fact that more than 100 of the members of the House appeared there for the first time.

The day's activities got under way when Vice President John N. Garner, in the Senate, and elderly South Trimble, clerk of the House, in that body, rapped their gavels for order promptly at noon and presented the chaplains for prayers. In the Senate the first business was the swearing in of the 16 new members and 21 others who were re-elected last November. Several of those required to take the oath were absent, including the veteran George W. Norris, of Nebraska, and the new Iowa member, Clyde L. Herring, who is still Governor of that State.

Oath Given Leaders.

The oath was administered first to the two party floor leaders, Democratic Joe T. Robinson and Republican Charles L. McNary, both re-elected. Diminutive Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, the only woman in this Senate, escorted her big, burly colleague to the rostrum. Perhaps of significance was the fact that Senator McNary moved into the No. 1 seat on the Republican side of the Senate chamber.

None could remember when a Republican floor leader last occupied that seat, although Senator Robinson has occupied the number one seat on the Democratic side. Senator McNary's new seat was used by Senator Arthur Capper in the last few Congresses and for many years before that it was the seat of Robert M. LaFollette, the elder. Perhaps, whispered the galleries, the change means that Senator McNary will start leading the Republican side.

The administering of the oath to the newly and re-elected Senators, who marched in groups of four to the rostrum, escorted usually by their colleagues, proceeded without mishap. But several incidents added to amusement and gossip in the galleries. Two of these incidents demonstrated the strained personal relations between two sets of colleagues on the Democratic side, despite the general air of harmony.

Bilbo Is Absent.

One concerned Senator Pat Harrison, re-elected last fall over the opposition of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, both of Mississippi. Neither likes the other. Senator Bilbo was absent yesterday, so Senator Robinson escorted the Finance Committee chairman to the rostrum.

The other incident of this kind occurred when the name of Senator Mathew M. Neely, of West Virginia, was called. He and his colleague, the youthful Senator Rush D. Holt, have been acrimonious adversaries, although both Democratic. Senator Neely, resplendent in formal morning clothes with a red carnation as a boutonniere, marched out into the middle aisle alone. Senator Holt, sitting a few feet away, was deep in conversation with former Senator Thomas P. Gore, who had come back for the opening festivities.

As Senator Neely alone started down the aisle to the rostrum, Senator Robinson jumped to his feet and rushed to the side of the solitary West Virginian, offering his arm. Senator Holt did not look up, still apparently busily talking with the blind Oklahoman.

The 34-year-old Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, one of only two Republicans elected to the Senate in November, was escorted by the veteran Senator, David I. Walsh, of that State. Senator Walsh and young Lodge's grandfather, who served many years in the Senate, had been bosom personal friends, although separated politically.

Only three of the baby Senators had the temerity to make their debut in formal morning clothes, although many of the older members dressed up to that extent for the occasion. The three Beau Brummels among the "baby" group were Senators H. Styles Bridges, former Governor of New Hampshire; Harry H. Schwartz, of Wyoming, and C. O. Andrews, of Florida. Senator Bridges was the second Republican among the new comers.

When this business had been concluded, Senator Robinson announced the death of former Senator Louis Murphy, of Iowa, in an automobile accident, and Senator Arthur Vandenberg the death of former Senator James Couzens. Each sent up a resolution expressing the regret of the Senate. Keeping unbroken his record for never speaking in the Senate, except to answer rolls calls, Senator William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, made no announcement of the death of his former colleague, Peter Norbeck, but he sent the usual resolution of condolence to be read by the clerk.

Senate Officers Re-elected.

After that the Senate proceedings moved rapidly. The present officers of the Senate, including Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary, was re-elected; motions were adopted setting the hour of meeting, notifying the House and naming a committee of the two floor leaders to notify the President that the Senate was in session. Adjournment was taken until 12:30 p. m. today.

On the House side the members after a roll call by States, first proceeded to the election of a Speaker. Simply and without efforts at oratorical effect, Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, renominated Speaker Bankhead; Representative Roy O. Woodruff, of Michigan, nominated Representative Snell as the Republican choice, and Representative Gardner R. Withrow (Progressive), nominated Representative George J. Schneider, of Wisconsin, for that group.

Speaker Bankhead received 323 votes on the roll call; Snell, 84; Schneider, 10, and Representative Fred L. Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, 2. Representatives Snell, Schneider, John J. O'Connor and Harry B. Steagall were named a committee to escort the Speaker to the rostrum.

Snell lauded the Speaker's character and mental attainments and expressed confidence the Alabaman would be "just and fair to all." The Speaker responded by calling the Republican leader "a man of the highest character and probity" and as possessing "the finest mental capacity." He asserted that whenever "Bert Snell makes an agreement regarding a parliamentary situation it is not necessary to get it in writing."

Laughed Over Gag Rules.

He recalled how strenuously he opposed the "gag rules" which Snell, when he was chairman of the Rules Committee, and the Republicans were in control, used to impose on the House. But when the Democrats came into power, he said, he believed the same rules "innocent" and necessary, but Snell denounced them. The House greatly enjoyed this humor.

The oath of office was then administered to the Speaker by Representative Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, the dean of the House in years of service. Speaker Bankhead requested the entire membership to arise and take the oath of office en masse—but before he had concluded his request the voice of Representative OConnor was heard, protesting that Representative-Elect Arthur B. Jenks (Republican), of New Hampshire, should stand aside. He said that there was a dispute as to this member's election. He finally was counted in by 10 votes after the first results showed a dead-heat in the New Hampshire contest.

Representative Snell sprang to his feet with a defense of his follower, asserting he came with a properly accredited certificate and was entitled to be sworn in. O'Connor protested that his motion was not debatable and Speaker Bankhead rapped the Republican leader down. It looked for a moment as if all the harmony and "era of good feeling" of a few minutes before had been dissipated.

But the Speaker a few minutes later demonstrated his friendly spirit for the day. When the membership, with the exception of Jenks, had taken the oath, Representative Snell offered a resolution providing that the oath be given to the New Hampshire member, pending hearings on his election credentials.

"All in favor say, 'yea'," commanded the Speaker and the Republican minority of 87 bellowed "yea."

"All opposed 'nay' and the yeas have it and so ordered," the Speaker rattled off before any of the Democrats could say "nay." It was the first use of the "steamroller" in this session but everybody thought it was fine.

The House then completed its routine business and adjourned until today.

Germany Prohibits Bus and Butter Ads

Berlin, Jan. 5 (AP).—Germany was told today—by official decree and a newspaper editorial—to stop building up a taste for butter, and to use street cars in preference to buses.

An official decree prohibited advertising agents from arousing yearnings for butter and other fats—of which there is a shortage—by picturing mouth-watering scenes.

Efforts to win new customers must be confined to such commodities as sugar, marmalade, fish, potatoes, cottage cheese and barley, the decree ordered.

Editorially, the newspaper Zwolefuhrblatt urged greater use of the street cars instead of buses to save gasoline, another commodity on which the Reich is short.

U. S. Issues New License to Ship Planes to Spain of Cuse and Dineley) would be passed by both Houses by unanimous consent tomorrow without debate.

$9,000,000 Deal Awaits Arrival of Madrid's Envoy to Mexico.

In the meantime, Cuse's stevedores worked under rush instructions to load the Spanish steamer, Mar Cantabrico, with the 18 airplanes and 411 engines he has been licensed to ship to Bilboa, a government-controlled port in Spain.

Cuse in Race.

Cuse had planned to overhaul and repair the airplanes and engines before sending them to Spain. When public and official indignation was aroused over Cuse's willingness to go against the hands-off policy of the Government, and it began to appear that legislation would be rushed to stop the shipment, a race began.

Cuse appeared before the collector of customs of the Port of New York and presented his export license. The collector insisted on the limit of delay, 24 hours, before allowing loading to begin. The time expired yesterday morning, and Cuse's airplanes, in 100 heavy crates, began to go aboard the Mar Cantabrico at 1 p. m. yesterday. Crates containing the engines have not arrived at the dock, and it is uncertain whether they will be shipped with the planes.

Unless exportation is made illegal at once, at least part of Cuse's shipment will cross the 3-mile-limit line and be beyond supervision of this Government. Up to that point, the shipment could be halted by a Coast Guard cutter.

Dineley was indignant last night in his hotel room, and insisted that although he had had repeated conversations with the State Department since last June over issuance of various licenses to ship arms, its officers had "not once" appealed to his "patriotism" or expressed the view that it was against Government policy to ship arms, either to Spain or to other countries.

He said:

"The head lines oughta say tomorrow: 'U. S. Business Man Loses Nine Million Bucks.'

"I never remember a single time when the department said anything about patriotism until this Cuse case broke out. This thing was just 'hoked up' now.

"We—the Consolidated Industries is who I represent—that's a dummy name for a lot of munitions dealers—were all set to ship this stuff directly to Vera Cruz. It would go in 48 hours, except Ordaz's inspectors, on their way here with him right now, have to look over the stuff first.

$9,000,000 in Bank.

"The $9,000,000 for our stuff for Spain is here in a Washington bank right now. One-third of the airplanes could be flown off at 48 hours' notice to Vera Cruz without any of these international entanglement things.

"The Mexican government has told me that their statement about American-made planes not being trans-shipped through Mexico to Spain wouldn't apply to my stuff. All my stuff has the proper clearances and can go through like any other consignment of goods. That statement applied only to planes and stuff that had a fake destination on it.

"I'll just send it to Vera Cruz. I don't know or care what happens to it after that.

"All of our stuff is under option. But that nine million bucks is a lotta jack to go out the window."

Dineley, a thin man with a hawk nose, thinning black-gray hair, frank in manner and speech, said that he'd been in "the munitions business" for more than 25 years. He added:

"My stuff is scattered around the country. We were going to shoot it to Vera Cruz instead of shipping it directly from here because we were afraid of stevedore trouble. Lots of stevedores won't move the stuff—war materials—and we didn't want to be held up by labor strikes.

"I guess I'll have to kiss that $9,000,000 good-by. Who put it up, you say? No spik English, pal."

Embassy Here Is Clear.

De la Casa denied the Embassy here knows Dineley. This checked with the general understanding that the Embassy in Washington has not participated in any airplane shipment deals. Ambassador Fernando de los Rios was in New York last night to address a Spanish Loyalist rally, under the auspices of the United Spanish-Aid Societies of America.

The fact that the Congress does not meet until noon today, and has a calendar crowded with the President's annual message on the state of the Union and the official count of the electoral vote, may operate to allow Cuse's shipment to leave New York harbor. Before the announcement of the Cuse race against time, and news of the Dineley license, Pittman had predicted passage of the resolution banning arms shipments by the end of the week. Whether it can be expedited is uncertain.

Pittman was ready to ask a mandatory order authorizing the President to bar all shipments of arms and munitions to Spain, or to other countries for trans-shipment to Spain, instead of the discretionary type of legislation really sought by the Administration. But because of Congressional opposition in some quarters to the discretionary type, giving the President broad powers, Pittman decided to ask for legislation that could be whisked through the legislative hopper.

A number of Congressmen, however, may oppose any temporary makeshift legislation, and insist on entirely new permanent legislation of either mandatory or discretionary type.

The "stuff" to be shipped by Dineley—or rather, the $4,507,050 part of it that is licensed by the State Department—consists of the following:

Commodity.	Value.
1 Boeing airplane	$17,500

Enrique Carlos de la Casa, counselor of the Spanish Embassy here, said last night Ordaz had been expected from New Orleans last night but was grounded by bad weather. He previously had suffered shock when his plane had overturned in Brownsville, Tex.

Ordaz is understood to be bearing assurances to this Government in the matter of the steamer Motomar, ordered into Spanish service while carrying an American cargo of flaxseed.

Trip "Purely Personal."

New Orleans, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Bad weather cancelled Airline schedules east of here today and prevented Felix Gordon Ordas, Spanish Ambassador to Mexico, from resuming his trip to Washington. The Ambassador, his wife and their daughter arrived last night by private plane on a "purely personal trip," he said.

4 Unionists Found Guilty in Slaying

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Four maritime unionists tonight were found guilty of second-degree murder in the shipboard slaying of George Alberts, chief engineer of the S. S. Point Lobos, who was stabbed to death last spring. Sentencing was deferred.

A jury of six men and six women reached its decision only a few hours after receiving the charges, which took seven weeks to present in a trial in the Alameda County Superior Court.

Foreclosure Sales Ban Issued by Gov. Langer

Bismarck, N. Dak., Jan. 5 (AP).—Gov. William Langer proclaimed tonight a moratorium prohibiting real and personal property mortgage foreclosure sales and execution sales of livestock and other personal property in North Dakota.

Langer commanded all State, county and township officers to perform no official act "which will, in any degree, accomplish, aid or assist in the foreclosure or forced sale of any home, or in the forced sale of property necessary and indispensable to the livelihood of the occupant, or in dispossession of home owners who may have lost their homes by foreclosure since 1932, or in the obtaining of tax titles to homes where the same may be not subject to a tax deed."

Ode to

by
Ogden Nash
O IS FOR ORGAN
I guess that any musical audience
Like Organs better than accordeonce.
The Organ makes such heavenly noises,
Like loads of angel girls and boyses.
So warm, so gold, so magic thrilling,
Humanity with rapture filling,
We might compare the organ's note
To Otard gliding down the throat.

Lotus Extends 'Parade' Billing Another Week

'Windsorettes' to Remain at Shoreham; Tarr's Condition Improves.

The Lotus, which used superlatives to describe last week's billing, now announces that its "Flower Parade of 1937" will be held over for another and final week.

The show which has a line of dancing girls and principals galore bills in its premier place, Garcia Gomez, Mexican dancer. Others are Theodore and Denesha, adagio team; Evelyn Knight, songstress; the Barclays, comedy numbers, and Henriette Lorraine who gives an exhibition of a soft shoe dancer.

Bill Strickland and his Capitolians are supplying the dance tunes at each of the performances which are presented three times daily at 1 p. m., 7:30 p. m. and 11:30 p. m.

Jack Tarr, saxophonist and violinist with Sande Williams' orchestra, is reported recovering from a New Year's accident, in which he was knocked down by an auto.

The entertainer who holds forth at the Carlton Cocktail Lounge and at the "El Patio" supper club is being relieved temporarily by Eddie Peabody, banjoist.

* * * *

The twelve "Windsorettes," Broadway chorus who entertained New Year's Eve merrymakers at the Sohreham, are being held over for a few more days. On the same bill are Alma Metcalf, violinist, and Rudy Baie, a tenor from Hollywood. The latter is master of ceremonies.

The Royal Hawaiians at the Ambassador's Hi Hat present a new Mexican cowboy number this week entitled "Rancho Grande." In this number Clarence Blake, billed as the only electric guitar player in town, is reported to produce some amazing sounds with his tricky instrument.

The troupe now performing in the Ambassador's cocktail lounge can sing in seven languages besides Hawaiian and English.

Last night the presence of Senators, Representatives and plain politicians called for the playing of numerous State songs.

An added attraction is Helen Malcolm, contralto, who shows up with the best in the matter of versatility. She has learned some Hawaiian songs which she renders in the approved manner, according to the native entertainers.

Every Saturday Hi Hat offers a special ladies luncheon from noon to 3. Also continuous entertainment from 1:30 to 7 and from 9 until closing. On other days the schedule is 5 to 7 and from 9:30 until closing.

At the Madrillon: Cocktails and entertainment at the 4:30 Club in the Mayan Room. From 7:30 on Johnny Shaw and his Versatile Sextet entertain with music. Spanish foods served.

A new team—Myron and Evylyn—take the floor at the Cocoanut Grove this week in a ballroom and adagio number. There are many who say it's the best team since Bambon and Baine. Carl Addison, a barytone who formerly microphoned for N.B.C., and Helen Vernon, a soprano, are the vocalists. Watch for a new dance—new and from Hollywood—and hold your ears, for that's where the management promises you'll be knocked.

From now on, week-ends at the Casa Grande, Berwyn, Md., hotspot, will feature floor shows. Blues Singer Agnes Harris and Berk Motley, with his Rhythm Masters, have been engaged as permanent daily attractions.

Otis Manning, known far and wide as the Magician Moderne, Roy Kiser and Jack Campbell will continue to entertain patrons at the Cafe of All Nations, Jimmie Byrd says.

Bert Wallace and his Music Box Revue are swinging into their second week at the Cafe La Paree. Hazel Warren, Al Sakol's swing singer, and Buddy Shaner are taking care of the vocal parts of the show. The revue, with several solo specialties and chorus numbers, goes on at the luncheon, dinner and supper hours. Sakol's band plays for dancing, while an extra attraction is Magician Spencer Howell, winner of the six-week series of talent searches.

Railroad Labor Chiefs to Map Course Today

Representatives of Various Groups to Discuss Legislative Aims.

Railway labor's legislative program for the new Congress will be drafted at conferences here today of representatives of 15 railroad labor organizations. The conferees headed by G. M. Harrison, of Cincinnati, chairman, are presidents of unions and brotherhoods included in the Railway Labor Executive Association.

At the same time five of the labor leaders will be mapping their course for tomorrow's conference with presidents of the carriers, suggested by President Roosevelt, on the litigation-tangled railroad retirement law.

The five are: Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks; D. B. Robertson, Cleveland, president, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; B. M. Jewell, Chicago, president of the Railway Employes Department, A. F. of L.; E. J. Manion, St. Louis, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, and Capt. James J. Delaney, New York, president of the Masters, Mates and Pilots of America.

Names of the railroad executives who will meet them were announced Monday.

Retirement Board Continues.

Meanwhile, the Railroad Retirement Board, with collection of taxes for its fund halted by injunction, continued operations under its Congressional appropriation, and completed work on proposed technical amendments to the present act.

Among legislative subjects to be discussed by the labor men are the six-hour day to spread employment, unemployment compensation under a Federal, rather than State laws; full-crew and train-length regulations and others.

Particularly insistent is the demand of J. G. Luhrsen, of Chicago, president of the Train Dispatchers, for a six-hour day for dispatchers. The present eight-hour day, he contends, is killing off dispatchers at too early an age, and the six-hour day is much to be preferred over any increase in pay, he holds.

"More pay won't do the dispatchers any good when they're dying off as they are now," he said yesterday in asserting his organization would not participate in any wage-increase demands. The six-hour demand by his union has been carried through the mediation stage with the roads, and Luhrsen declared last night that if arbitration was refused he would press for the legislation.

The Railroad Retirement Board, meanwhile, was awaiting summons to the meeting of rail presidents and union executives, its service having been offered by President Roosevelt to J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, and Harrison.

Board Paying Pensions.

Though the carriers have halted, by court action, collection of the taxes for pensions, amounting to 3½ per cent of each employe's pay, with an equal sum contributed by the roads, the board is paying pensions to some 2,000 eligibles and adding about 40 to the list daily. Payments are made from a $46,000,000 fund made available by Congress.

Murray A. Latimer, chairman of the board, said yesterday a number of technical amendments to the act had been drafted, but no measure had been prepared as a substitute in case the law now under attack is held unconstitutional.

Club Fire Toll Reaches 6.

Selma, Ala., Jan. 5 (AP).—The death toll from the Phantoms Club holiday dance fire here a week ago reached six today as Mrs. Richard J. Williams, 27, succumbed to burns. Two other victims remained in the hospital. Twelve young women were burned when their costumes caught fire from a match used to light a cigarette.

On the Air Today

President Roosevelt will be heard this afternoon in his first broadcast of 1937 when he speaks on "The State of the Nation' before a joint session of the House and Senate. WMAL and WJSV will be on the air at 12 noon and 1:30 respectively. The President is expected to speak at 2.

Prominent statesmen will be interview by N. B. C. on urgent legislative problems of the day (WMAL) during the recess following roll call at noon. J. Fred Essary will be in charge. Senator Byrd of Virginia will lead off on the redrganization of the government departments. Senator Robinson will discuss minimum wages and maximum hours for labor; Senator Pittman, neutrality, and Senator O'Mahoney, national charters for business.

Columbia will concentrate on the arrival of dignitaries and diplomats before the President's arrival and will throw in a description of the new Supreme Court chamber for the first time on the air.

* * * *

Chamber music, Curtis Institute students, under direction of Dr. Louis Bailly, WJSV, at 4. Classics and symphony from manuscript.

Bea Lillie, a new series of comedy broadcasts by Lady Peel, star of the music show, "The Show is On." WMAL, at 8. Tonight: the trials and tribulations of an honest working girl.

"One Man's Family," for first time a member of the cast sings as a part of the serial story, WRC, at 8. Helen Musselman (member of the family next door) is the vocalist.

* * * *

Another new feature for today is "Man Versus Woman"—an entirely new venture in news observation with Maybelle Jennings and John Heiney. Each will select three items from the news of the day and in simple language discuss them from the "one person's opinion" angle. Sometimes, of course, there will be a duplication in the items that appeal to both male and female listeners. Humor, earnestness, controversy—all the reactions to the high spots of news interest will be reflected in the new series. It wouldn't be a bad idea to have both the men and women of the household on hand for this one.

Miss Jennings has been widely known as a Washington newspaperwoman and in the last two years has become a star of Columbia network broadcasting. Mr. Meiney has been associated with radio activities for many years and in a few moments will place his initials at the foot of this space.

"Man versus Woman" will be a WJSV feature, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 6:30.

* * * *

Here and there: Mutual has completed arrangements to broadcast weekly from Hialeah Park, Miami, beginning January 16. Bryan Field will describe races, with Joseph E. Widener participating . . . . Radio has helped Milton Berle in his dickering with theater managers. This week at Manhattan's Loew's State, he gets $5,000, plus 50 per cent of the receipts over $35,000. Before his radio contract, he got far less at the same theater . . . . The "Saturday Night Party" has been renewed—but on a week-to-week basis, not for a straight 13 weeks . . . . James Melton is already being talked of as a successor to Dick Powell on "Hollywood Hotel" . . . . Edgar Guest has been signed for an entire year for "Welcome Valley."

* * * *

More h. and t.: Burns and Allen leave their present program April 1—and Ken Murray, who enjoyed quite a fair rating in his fall series, is the favorite candidate to replace the veteran team . . . . Incidentally, Gracie and George have completed arrangements on their New York trip for a musical show to open next fall on Broadway. Book will be by Russell Crouse and Howard Lindsey; Gordon and Harris the producers.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 5.

I plead guilty to a common human failing — I like to read other people's mail. Maybe it is the detective blood in my veins. At any rate, I possess an uncanny urge to sneak quick peaks into alien envelopes — and Hollywood is the best place in the world to satisfy such a yearning. Movie stars receive great quantities of mail, and they are free with it.

MARY ASTOR.

From fan letters I have fathomed considerable knowledge of public opinions of the movie greats. Take Mae West, who leads the parade of stars whose screen roles are actually believed. Mae's average mail is so ribald, that it will not bear reprinting. Mary Astor receives many such letters, but Mary's are based on her private life.

Clark Gable is recipient of quantities of love letters, most of which come from women who believe that his ruthless "great lover" roles reflect his private mode of living. Irene Dunne and Myrna Loy receive countless letters from lonely suffering wives and sweethearts. And you would never guess the actor who receives heaps of marriage proposals from the South, so I will tell you—Step'n Fetchit.

I recently ran across this amusing story of a Chicago woman who moved into a house next door to Clark Gable. After much egging on, her husband agreed to invite Clark to call one evening to talk dogs and hunting. Near midnight, as the actor was about to take his leave, the hostess carefully salvaged the cigaret ends Clark had left. "The girls back home," she explained, "will cheat each other blind when I offer these Clark Gable mementos as prizes at my next bridge tea."

The story has reached Hollywood about the home town pal who stared enviously at Robert Taylor (when Bob paid a visit to his old tramping grounds), and said, "Boy, you're lucky, getting to kiss all those beautiful movie women." "But I haven't," replied Taylor. "There are dozens I haven't kissed. Give me time!"

Gene Raymond tells me that it is almost worth a ruined scene to watch Lily Pons after she has muffed her lines. The little French singer unfailingly turns her face directly into the microphone and pours out her limited supply of English expletives and exclamations, meanwhile wringing her hands angrily. When she runs out of English words, she switches to French, and did it ever occur to you that French is the most expressive tongue in the world? If it has not, you might listen to Lily some day, and be convinced.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

"College Holiday" Is Nonsensical Charade, Starring Same Cast as Appeared in "Big Broadcast of 1937"

Screened Yesterday for the Drama Desks, This Subject, Starring Jack Benny, Proved a Frivolous Joyride; A Lop-Sided Bout Between a Heavy and an Atomweight; Sidelights Upon Whipping a New Melodramatic Comedy Into Shape for a Broadway Tryout.

PROBABLY Jack Benny, star of the picture, has taken the sting out of anything that might be said against it in advance of public showing, by declaring that "College Holiday" never was intended to make much sense or add up to anything but a large total of entertainment.

BELL.

About two and a half months ago, or somewhere about knee-deep in October, an item by the title of "The Great Broadcast of 1937" came along with almost the identical cast of this subject in its principal roles. We proclaimed at the time that it got off to a slow start and then compounded a crescendo of interest and excitement until, at the end, a pretty good picture had been seen.

Much the same is true in the present instance—except that "College Holiday" compiles no such rational dramatic sequence of events as "The Big Broadcast." This all was divulged yesterday afternoon in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, when "College Holiday" was unwound for the benefit of the local drama desks.

There is a great deal of genial flubdub in the matter of the Greek classicisms that the film pretends to expound but that is largely offset by the cleverness with which the musical numbers have been introduced and staged. They are not all "naturals," as the saying goes, but they all do pretty well toward enlivening a subject that might otherwise have fallen a little flat.

There are some minstrel sequences toward the end of the picture that call for, and receive, extraordinary pictorial treatment. These dissolving views are in the nature of photographic tricks that always have their effect upon the consciousness of any audience.

The songs and dances, incidentally, are done in a manner that will knock at least one of your eyes out.

There will, of course, be a complete review of this subject in these columns the day after it opens at Loew's Palace Theater, but, in the meantime, it may be enough to say that here is a nonsensical sort of thing that will enlist the frivolous attention of all those who do not insist upon a strict regimen of serious drama in their film fare.

So there comes a note from Ben H. Atwell that the major portion of the personnel of the German Embassy will constitute a considerable box party at the National Theater on Monday night, January 11, to enjoy the musical story of an early romance in the life of Germany's eighteenth century giant of letters, Goethe. Another distinguished box party, in honor of the composer of the operetta, Franz Lehar, of "Merry Widow" fame, will be hosted by the official representative to America of the Viennese composer's homeland, Edgar Prochnik, Austrian Minister.

The whole trouble was that this young Kid Mike Robe was not an orthodox fighter.

I mean to say that his stance was all wrong and he was what Bill McCormick, The Post's oracle of the roped arena, would designate, chastely enough, a southpaw, a forkhander or a portsider. These fellows are always puzzling and even with an atomweight matched against a heavy—or maybe I am only a light-heavy by now—there is an advantage on their side. I did not so much realize this when the bout started a few days before Christmas.

But when we really got going, I became dully conscious that this midget antagonist had his right—which was his wrong—hand in my nose all the time and now again was throwing some very nasty hooks into the body. Being a husky sort of a guy, I can take a few mean pokes in the midriff and not mind it too much. But, in time, this fellow, Mike Robe, the germ of the ocean and all points north, south, east and west, began to hit low. The referee must not have been looking.

After a barrage of these body wallops below the belt, we gave in and our handlers theoretically threw in the sponge. So we lay on the rubbing table for six days and don't feel too well yet.

In course of time, we hope to solve the style of this atomical champion and give him an even race. So far, we have not quite penetrated his style of attack. Maybe, after a while . . .

So now you know how we happened to be knocked out by a guy less than our weight by a ton, but more potent in his punch by quite another one.

Boy, the flit gun!

Miss Kitty Prichard, or Pretty Kichard, as the case may or ought to be, calls up in a bit of a dither from the Rialto Theater to say that today and tomorrow, only, the Ninth street revival house will have on view the renowned study of Western disaster known by the name of "The Plough That Broke the Plains." This is the Government's epic of the dust bowl, produced under Federal resources and recognized as one of the finest documentary films ever made. It has, of course, been shown locally before, but this return to the screen is worthy of especial mention and support.

• • • •

It may be a trifle late to mention it, but there was an interesting commentary upon the progress of perfecting "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," at the National Theater last week, in the attitude finally assumed by Mrs. Marguerite Veiller, the author, toward the alteration of her script.

"The Two Mrs. Carrolls" enjoyed something like a year's run in London, but the London version of the play was not the one presented here on the occasion of the American premiere of the piece a week ago Monday. The playing form had been altered to suit American tastes and Mrs. Veiller had been adamant in her insistence that not a line of dialogue or bit of action be changed.

Then came the Washington reviews, the first-night reaction and the rest of the usual business of a continental—in the American sense—premiere, and Mrs. Veiller capitulated. Not only did she capitulate, but she boarded train for New York and told the play tinkerers to go as far as they liked—which is what they are doing.

Last-Minute Afterthought.

After reading this column over, I am confirmed in my conviction that I have come back to work at least three days too soon!

Scotch Lass Sues For Right to Lead M'Lean Clansmen

Edinburgh, Scotland, Jan. 5 (AP). A 17-year-old girl, Louise MacLean, went to law today to fight for legal recognition as chieftainess of a highland clan, that of MacLean of Ardgour.

If the Edinburgh court upholds her claim against that of a cousin, Lieut. Comdr. H. H. MacLean, it is believed she will be the first lass to be head of a Scottish clan. Hearing on the case, said to be without precedent in Scottish law, began today and is expected to last three days.

Louise is the eldest daughter of the late Alexander MacLean, who died in 1930. The dispute has arisen since then, the girl contending that clan headship must pass to lineal heirs regardless of sex, while her cousin argues the chieftainship passes to male heirs in preference to women.

Sen. Lodge, Son Unhurt In Elevator Accident

A crowded Capitol elevator, carrying Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, his son, George, and about 14 other passengers, got out of control yesterday and slipped to the bottom of the shaft.

The story and a half descent was made slowly, and no one was injured or even shaken.

'Career' Blamed in Rift.

Hollywood, Jan. 5 (AP).—Youthful Elaine Barrie, separated from 54-year-old John Barrymore after a quarrel, said today it was all over his ultimatum that she choose him or a career and—"my career comes before anything else."

Clown Together in New Musical

Mary Boland and Jack Benny present a new collaboration of comic gifts in "College Holiday," the new filmusical coming soon to the screen of Loew's Palace. Others in the cast include George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs and Ben Blue. There are, needless to say, many more besides these, but that will give you a rough idea—not too rough, it is to be hoped.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Tablecloth Scrawlers Are Back.

"Yes, sir," said P. Chivvers McQuinnigle, well-known hotel-restaurant man, "there can be no further doubt that the recovery is genuine. Our tablecloths are covered with figures again. Our guests are making mathematical calculations on them for the first time in years. In any volume, I mean.

• • • •

"It is most encouraging. During the last two years of the Hoover regime tablescrawling was practically at a standstill. And for the first three years under Roosevelt the laundries ceased using chemicals to clean the covers. We often kept the same tablecloth for several meals.

• • • •

"Why we could have served big black pencils with meals and not had a customer use 'em. There was lots of talk about better times being here but you couldn't fool P. Chivvers McQuinnigle. All I had to do was to look at my tablecovers. When there were no figures on 'em I knew the Nation was still on the rocks."

• • • •

"When did you first notice that tablecloth scribbling was coming back?" Mr. Mcuinnigle was asked.

"It happened in a peculiar way," he replied. "One morning about a year ago one of my old waiters came to me with something of his old-time jauntiness of manner. He seemed so gay I asked what was the matter. 'Well,' he said, 'I don't want to be too certain but I think there's a man at my table figuring on the tablecloth.' 'No,' I exclaimed, 'Not really!' He insisted he had good reasons to think so, and I cautioned him not to frighten the fellow."

"Frighten him!" exclaimed the reporter.

"Yes, indeed. Tablecloth calculators became very timid after the big market crash, you know," replied McQuinnigle. "Well, anyhow, we kept our distance and after the fellow had left we made a rush for the tablecloth and sure enough there were two solid columns of figures!"

"Really two columns?" questioned the reporter.

"Yes, but that was nothing. In the boom days it was nothing for a single customer to dirty up a tablecloth with five or six columns of figures. In groups of four they could cover one side and start work on the other between the soup and the fish."

"It must be very encouraging," suggested the reporter.

"It's wonderful," replied McQuinnigle. "We're having the waiters bring pencils to every table again just as we did under Coolidge. Big black pencils. Of course, a man can have a blue indelible one if he asks for it, but I don't think the indelible pencil users will show up until the situation in Europe improves."

"The domestic situation is satisfactory?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes. If it wasn't for the crisis abroad the tablecloth scrawlers would all be using indelible pencils and fountain pens on our fresh linen right now, bless 'em!"

"How is the situation with respect to figuring on the wallpaper beside the telephone?" asked the reporter.

"Better," admitted McQuinnigle. "If the market goes up another five points wall paper scrawling will soon reach its 1928 high."

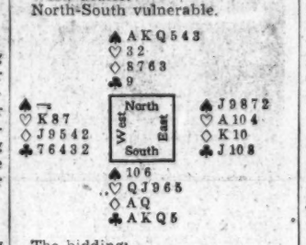
Mrs. Ely Culbertson on Contract

Neither Fish Nor Fowl.

The worst bids at Contract are those that are "neither fish nor fowl"—in more technical terms, based neither on honest values, nor out-and-out "psychics." At duplicate bridge it is often advisable to make a very shaded third or fourth hand opening bid, but in rubber bridge there is no excuse for shading honor trick requirements to 1½-plus, except with a very strong suit. East got just what he deserved in today's hand.

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Speaking of East's just deserts, it must be admitted that West's pass to the takeout table was highly questionable, considering that he was void of spades. He might have anticipated that his void indicated a long line of spades in North's hand (since South was also probably short, having doubled for a takeout, and that North might convert the takeout double into a penalty double by passing. But there was also some logic in his feeling that a two club or two diamond bid on his miserable suits might be only jumping from the frying pan into the fire. North, of course, acted correctly in passing to the takeout double; his splendid spade suit speaks for itself.

East had originally opened the hand on the vague thought that he might stop an adverse game, and now decided that even if he went down two or three tricks (East was an optimist!) it would be a worthwhile saving.

Actually there was no merit in East's bid from any angle. With honors in every suit, he should have been satisfied with defensive possibilities. If his partner had as good a hand, game for the opponents would be very doubtful; if he didn't, a semi-psychic effort would be much too costly. It was much too costly!

South opened the King of clubs, and followed with the Queen and Ace, North discarding hearts on the latter two rounds. South shifted to the Queen of hearts and North ruffed. A low diamond went to the Queen, and a second heart ruff followed. On another low diamond South captured East's King, and gave North a third heart ruff. Now on a diamond lead from North, East was helpless—whether he trumped with the nine or Jack of spades, South was bound to make his ten-spot. As it happened, East trumped with the nine of spades and South overtrumped, and North's three top spades completed the rout. Declarer was held to exactly one trump trick, and thus was defeated six tricks on a contract for only one-odd.

It Walked In the Dark

By Agee Hays

SYNOPSIS.

Bob Holbrook, as the Brians' butler, is helping his brother, Larry, investigate the stabbing of Alexander Brian. Brian's offices are in the home. Miss Hunt, resident stenographer, heard Brian scream, rushed upstairs, found him dead; his older son, Peters, asleep; his younger son, Mark, trying to get out of his own room, which has been locked, and Julian, the private secretary, running water in the bathtub. Cora, the cook; Frank, the gardener; Leo Sen, houseboy, and Jean, maid, all seem to have alibis. Mrs. Brian is in an asylum. The second night Bob is there Peter is murdered in his private office shortly after midnight. Miss Hunt and Julian, working overtime in their respective offices just outside. As before, the murderer used a thin, sword-like blade and did not leave it. Mark says he was just arriving home when it happened. Miss Hunt, who is engaged to Mark, says Peter was using a dictaphone and had closed his doors so he wouldn't bother her. She heard him stop dictating and scream. Then she heard his light snapped out. Finding his door locked, she called Julian. She had heard footsteps in the outer office before it happened. Asked to describe them, she seems suddenly frightened.

CHAPTER 11.

"No!" Miss Hunt denied, vehemently. "Not like anybody's walk! I'd have known it was strange if I had been thinking."

"Why would you?"

"Because," her trembling hand pushed back a vagrant copper curl, "it wasn't like anybody's I knew."

"What made it different?"

She shook her head. "I can't describe it. But, oh, you know!" she looked to Larrry for understanding. "It just didn't remind me of anybody in the house."

Sutton frowned. "Look here, young lady!" he growled, "Who're you shielding? Come across!"

Marilyn Hunt was indignant, of course. She straightened resentfully in her chair. "Do you think I would——?"

Further questioning brought out nothing new. As soon as the door was closed behind her, Sutton turned to Larry, his lips drawn into an exasperating line.

"Now what come across her?"

New Suspicions.

Sutton strolled over, bent his huge bulk and spat accurately into the fireplace. "Judas!" he exclaimed suddenly. "The Hunt woman's got a better motive than anybody else!"

"Yes."

"Sure! The old man—prob'ly Peter too—stood between her and Mark. And also—they stood between Mark an' the family dough. Yah! Think her story over! All that bunk about footsteps an' him closing the door between their offices an' her losin' the key!"

"You could add what Bob said about her sobbing in the night and pleading over the telephone—to the case against her," Larry mused, lighting a cigarette and watching the match die out.

Jeffers thrust his head in at the door and called, "What you gonna do with the rest of 'em in there? They say they're gittin' tired."

Sutton pulled his big hand down over his face and sighed. "Good heavens! So'm I! I'm dead on my feet. But I'm not gonna let anything slip through my fingers this time. We're gonna stay right here till we've talked to every one of 'em. Tell 'em they're free as soon as we've talked to 'em. Mark an' Miss Hunt can go now."

"Get out and limber yourself up a little, Bob. The Brians think you've gone to bed and I bet you wish they were right."

I certainly did. I ached all over.

"Say, captain, if this is to be an all-night session, how about a little good strong coffee?" Larry suggested.

"Yeah. I been thinking about that. Jeffers, you take that cook to the kitchen. Stay by her. Have her make plenty of coffee for the whole bunch."

Julian's Story.

When Jeffers had closed the door, Larry turned from the study of Great-grandfather Brian to ask casually, "What are those footprint men doing?"

"I told 'em to take one shoe off everybody and match up right away. But let's not drag this out any longer 'n we have to. Might as well get somebody else in here while we're waitin' for the coffee."

"Let's try Julian."

When Julian came in he was wearing one shoe and one bedroom slipper and muttering something about whose crazy idea that was. He was somewhat impressive as he stood there before the fireplace, towering above Larry and Sutton, who were seated, the lights from the chandelier behind him throwing shadows which deepened the perpendicular furrows in his lean face.

He said his name was Julian Preston, and he explained his position in the family.

"Where was you at the time of the murder?" Sutton demanded.

"I think I must have been in the stockroom, for I heard Miss Hunt scream while I was in there. I hurried out and found the doors to Mr. Brian's office locked."

"Had you locked the door between your office and his?"

"No. He closed it because he wanted to do some dictating. He may have locked it."

"Why should he lock a door between you an' him?"

Julian's eyes widened and narrowed as he stared at Sutton. "I"—he shrugged nonchalantly—"I'm sure I don't know. I don't suppose he would, as a matter of fact."

"When you come back, knowin' there was trouble in there, why didn't you unlock that door with your key"

"I always keep the key to that door in the top drawer of my desk."

Julian paused and smiled faintly. "I went to get it and it was gone!"

"Humm. Think somebody stole it?"

The Picture Looks Down.

Julian nodded. "I think the person who did the killing wanted to keep any of us from getting into that room right away."

Lockwood looked in at this juncture. "Jeffers says the coffee ain't quite done, Cap', but—could I see you a minute?"

Sutton went out into the hall.

Larry and Julian eyed each other silently. I noticed Julian glancing now and then at the ancestral painting.

It was all fantastic. That solemn questioning in the middle of the night. And Peter, who only a few hours ago, in this same room, had talked with me about weird sounds, was now dead, probably by the hand of the perpetrator of the sounds. It made "Old Ghostie" with his thin avenging blade a convincing part of the tragedy. Suddenly I shuddered. I don't know why, but the memory of that silent telephone on the other end of the line while I was phoning in Alexander's room came to me ominously.

And some time within this night a murderer would likely come into this same formidable room and look into the eyes of Larry and Sutton and lie.

Julian pointed a lean finger at the picture. "There," he said abruptly to Larry, "is where the solution lies."

Larry stared, amazed. "You're not crediting the servants' story about an old man's ghost doing all this?"

Julian's thick lips drew up again in a faint humanizing grin. "I'm only saying, 'There lies your solution.'"

Before Larry could reply Sutton backed into the room, closed the door and sat down. "Maybe you can tell me," he growled at Julian, "what you was doing outside Peter Brian's window tonight."

Julian's eyes opened in amazement. "I?"

"You! Now dont deny it. We've got the goods on you."

Julian's Footprints.

Julian shrugged his lean, stooped shoulders. "I hadn't planned to deny it," he said simply. "When I couldn't unlock the door I went out there and tried the windows. But they were all locked."

Sutton stared at him silently. His explanation was plausible.

"Was anybody with you?"

"No. I went alone. Mark and Miss Hunt were trying the doors again."

Larry leaped forward suddenly. "Could anybody have got into Peter's office without Miss Hunt's seeing him while you were in the stockroom?"

"No; unless he went through my office. But," Julian added thoughtfully, "the person who took the key from my drawer could have done that."

"And Miss Hunt could have heard him go through the outer office?"

"She might have, but the floors are thickly carpeted and if anyone wanted to, he could go easily without being heard."

"You mean that if Miss Hunt heard anyone it was because he, for some reason, wanted to be heard?" Larry asked quickly.

The gaunt shoulders shrugged. "Why? Did she say she heard someone?"

"Yes," Larry confided. His eyes narrowed in speculation a moment and he gave a low whistle. "Imagine! A murderer wanting to leave the memory of footsteps—a special kind of footsteps in the mind of a girl!"

Julian frowned.

Coffee for Three.

The library door opened noisily and Jeffers came in with the coffee.

"Boy, oh boy! Is that fat cook burned up!" he chuckled.

Jeffers left the coffee pot. "We got more down the hall," he flung back and went out chuckling.

"Mr. Preston," Larry said when the three men had settled back to drink their coffee, "we rather suspected that Miss Hunt might be trying to protect somebody. Can you make a suggestion on that?"

Julian looked at Larry thoughtfully as if attempting to see behind my brother's mask of friendliness. "Of course," he said hesitatingly, "if she thought she heard Mark——. But this was Mark's night at the club."

Nothing of importance was brought out in the rest of Julian's interview until, as he arose to go, Larry detained him with, "Exactly what did you mean when you said that picture held the solution of the crime?"

Overdraft Audit Session Today In Montgomery

County Board Meeting in Rockville May Hear Final Report.

Auditors who have been checking Montgomery County accounts with the Maryland State roads commission for several months to determine the status of the alleged county overdraft will confer with the board of county commissioners tomorrow in Rockville, it was announced at a meeting of the board yesterday.

The audit was ordered by the local board after preliminary study of the State accounts raised the question of whether all of the work done by the roads commission had been properly authorized by the county commissioners. The overdraft was set at approximately $225,000 by State auditors and has resulted in a drastic curtailment of county road work due to diversions of a large part of the county's lateral gasoline tax funds to apply on the amount claimed due by the State. No indication was given yesterday as to the nature of the county auditor's report.

Two legislative recommendations of the county liquor control board were approved by the commissioners yesterday and two other recommendations rejected. Those approved call upon the State Legislature to eliminate the term "light" in connection with wines in accordance with a policy already adopted by the Federal Government and most wine producers, and to increase the license fees for beer and wine dealers. The proposal would raise the license for Class "A" off sale beer dealers from $25 to $50; Class "A" off sale beer and wine licenses from $35 to $65; Class "D" on sale beer license from $50 to $85, and Class "D" on sale beer and wine license from $60 to $100.

The commissioners rejected proposals to seek a reduction in the State liquor tax from $1.10 to 75 cents per gallon, and elimination of the 6-cent per case beer tax levied last year for relief funds.

Augustus R. Selby, of Germantown, was recommended for appointment to the county welfare board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation several weeks ago of Dr. Claude W. Mitchell, of Silver Spring. William S. Welch, of Halpine, was appointed night watchman at the Bethesda liquor dispensary at a salary of $85 per month and Miss Mary Somerville, of Rockville, was appointed telephone switchboard operator in the courthouse at $100 a month.

Shirley F. Workman was elected president of the Silver Spring Businessmen's Association at the annu meeting last night. Other offic named were Winship I. Green, vice president; P. M. Williamson, secretary; George T. Day, treasurer, and J. Howell Forsyth, William A. Walsh, Fred L. Lutes, Fred L. Waters and Warner E. Pumphrey, members of the board of directors.

Immediately after his election President Norman appointed a finance committee composed of Fred L. Lutes, chairman Charles W. Hopkins, J. Howell Forsyth and Troy M. Waldron with instructions to present a budget for the ensuing year at the next meeting.

A talk on the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission by J. Darby Bowman, secretary-treasurer of the commission, and election of officers will feature a meeting of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association tonight at 8 o'clock in the Liquor Control Board Building at Silver Spring, Md.

Miss Louise Eiker was elected president at the annual meeting of the Chevy Chase Chapter of the Y. W. C. A. held yesterday at the home of Mrs. J. Gilmer Korner, jr., 5635 Western avenue. Mrs. William H. Somervell was elected vice president; Mrs. Hubert R. Snoke, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter A. Brown, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Joseph P. Brantley, treasurer. Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams, retiring president, and the officers form the executive committee.

Sergt. Earl H. Burdine, of the Bethesda substation, was elected president at the annual meeting of the Montgomery County Police Association held in the Silver Spring County Building. He succeeds Sergt. Roy Bodmer, of Rockville.

Sergt. James S. McAuliffe, of Rockville; Clerk Charles H. Woodson, of Silver Spring; Corpl. Oscar T. Gaither, of Bethesda, and Policeman Carroll V. Jones, of Bethesda, were elected vice presidents.

Other officers re-elected were: Clerk James C. Nichols, of Bethesda, corresponding secretary; Policeman William S. Crawford, of Bethesda, recording secretary; Sergt. D. L. Snyder, of Bethesda, treasurer; Policeman Marion Dayroff, of Rockville; James E. Shoemaker, of Bethesda and Ira K. Hover, of Rockville and Corpl. Gaither, trustees; Sergt. Guy L. Jones, of Silver Spring, trial board committee chairman, and James C. Christopher, Bethesda attorney, counsel.

Montgomery County members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday renominated the four incumbents as directors of the association to represent the county. The election of directors will be held at the February meeting of the association.

Those nominated were: W. W. Hodges, of Barnesville; L. R. Sabine, of Laytonsville; Doublas B. Diamond, of Gaithersburg, and Bowie Waters, of Germantown.

J. W. Jones, president of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, has announced that the following delegates and alternates will represent Montgomery County at the annual meeting of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation to be held next week in Baltimore, Md.:

Delegates—Thomas C. Darby, Germantown, Md.; Eugene S. Walker, Monrovia, Md.; William J. Hines, Brighton, Md., and Ulysses Griffith, Laytonsville, Md.

Deploring souvenir hunting as a "horrible disease," Mrs. Alexander B. Trowbridge, Washington lecturer, yesterday in a talk before the Takoma Park Women's Club urged women to do their utmost in training their children against the habit.

Mrs. Trowbridge gave figures from hotels and other business concerns showing the amount of loss caused by souvenir hunters.

The club voted to appropriate $25 to the Takoma Park (Md.) Library. Mrs. Byron M. Coon, president, announced. Mrs. Otto B. Roepke, Mrs. W. H. McWilliams, Mrs. W. J. Schutrump and Mrs. H. D. Albin as new members.

The Ladies Aid of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, Woodside, yesterday voted to sponsor the printing of a church cook book containing favorite recipes of its members. The aid will take charge of the annual father and son banquet of the church on Friday, January 22. Dr. Holladay, president of Western Maryland College, will be the speaker.

Gov. Harry W. Nice's proposal to ask for an additional $7,000,000 for the State budget at the coming legislative session was attacked by State Senator Stedman Prescott in an address before the Womans Democratic Club of Silver Spring. Prescott declared that although Gov. Nice had assailed Ritchie's administration for "waste and extravagance" he has kept none of his pledges to reduce expenditures in the State. He discussed the present political set-up in the county, State and Nation, and lauded the work of women in the recent campaign.

A constitution and by-laws was adopted for the newly formed club which gives the group the name of The Womans Democratic Club of Silver Spring, provides for meetings on the first Monday of each month and restricts membership to the Wheaton district. The club voted to apply for membership in the United Womans Democratic Club of Maryland. Chairmen of committees are: Program, Mrs. J. Howell Forsyth; hospitality, Mrs. Joseph C. Cissel; registration, Mrs. Wililam Brannan; legislation, Mrs. Frank Neumann; membership, Mrs. A. O. Denham and publicity, Mrs. Paul Clark.

First Lady Denies Note Hinting Cousin Need Not Attend Party

Mrs. Roosevelt, at Press Conference, Refutes Rumor She Asked Mrs. Longworth to Reception, Then Discouraged Attendance.

The rumor going round and round that Mrs. Roosevelt sent her cousin, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, an invitation to the recent diplomatic reception at the White House, and then followed it up with a note hinting she need not attend if it would make her uncomfortable was denied emphatically by the First Lady yesterday at her weekly press conference.

Mrs. Roosevelt was queried about the rumor, which grew out of a published account in a local newspaper, near the close of the conference. Earlier, she entertained the press women with a rehearsal of the exploits of tiny Chandler Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Roosevelt, who is now a White House visitor.

A great favorite with her grandfather, Chandler is unusually self-assertive, is not afraid of anything, and if given half a chance, will toddle into the room where the President is holding a conference, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

Other members of the family now making up the juvenile guest list at the White House are Chandler's baby brother, Elliot, jr., her cousin, Kate, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, and Eleanor and Curtis Dall (better known as Sistie and Buzzie), children of Mrs. John Boettiger, and Sarah Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt.

Asked about her connection with the New York Chapter of the Newspaper Guild, Mrs. Roosevelt said that while she was glad to be a member of the organization and had joined as soon as she was invited, she did not expect to attend meetings, would neither picket nor strike—no matter what the cause—and had that understanding when she became a member.

Fairfax Budget Slated for Study By Board Today

Public Hearing on 1937-38 Schedule May Be Put Ahead to March.

The Fairfax County board of supervisors will meet today in the board rooms to reorganize for the year and discuss the tentative budget for the coming fiscal year.

Indications are that no material change will be made in the 1937-38 budget, although pressure may be brought to increase the salaries of county policemen and enlarge the force.

The supervisors will consider a resolution of the Fairfax County Firemen's Association requesting that financial aid be withdrawn by the county from the Falls Church Fire Department, which, according to the association, is considered part of the Arlington County system.

An effort will be made this year to move ahead one month the annual public hearing on the budget. The hearing then would take place in March. The annual reports of county departments will be submitted to the board at today's session.

The Pohick Home Demonstration Club has elected Mrs. Flora Hall, president; Miss Gloria Hall, secretary; Mrs. Pauline Little, treasurer; Mrs. Melvin Taylor, reporter; Mrs. Pearl Beach, member of advisory council; Mrs. Dora Beavers and Mrs. Minerva Hawkins, club leaders.

The club is completing plans to sponsor a community song service Friday night at 8 o'clock in the Sydenstricker School.

Directors of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce will hold a business meeting tonight, preceded by a dinner at 6 o'clock at the Fairfax Southern Methodist Church. The dinner will be served by the volunteers' class, headed by a committee consisting of Mrs. Mary Cullen, Mrs. John Sisson and Mrs. Fred Everly.

The county school board at its meeting yesterday voted to close schools January 20 so pupils may attend the inaugural ceremonies in Washington.

A delegation from Franconia, headed by George C. Smith, appeared before the board urging additional class rooms be constructed at Franconia immediately to take care of the increasing enrollment. They cited the present overcrowded condition at the school and the rapid real estate development in the community and anticipated a large beginners' class next term. It was stated that the new school to be erected at Woodlawn would take about 20 pupils from the school and only 25 will graduate in the spring.

A petition was received from the Colored Citizens Association asking that the school budget be increased so as to provide for an increase in salaries for the colored teachers next year.

The major portion of the day's session was devoted to a discussion of routine matters in anticipation of the preparation of the school budget for 1937-38.

The Colvin Run Citizens Association will give a dance tonight in the community hall on the Alexandria-Leesburg pike at Colvin Run. President Joseph A. Wheeler will have charge of the dance and the proceeds will be used for improvements to the community hall which formerly was the old Colvin Run School.

Inspector Will Consider $3,800 Salary for Job

Civil Service Commission Must Settle D. C. Boiler Inspection Tangle.

If the Civil Service Commission will authorize a boiler inspector to receive $3,800 a year, the District's problem of inspecting boilers will be solved.

Price M. Greenlaw, local inspector who lost a job when Congress abolished the fee system last session, indicated yesterday he would consider his old position at this price.

District authorities are now negotiating with the Civil Service Commission to find out just what can be done.

Heretofore, Greenlaw had been collecting his own salary on a fee basis. His was the last fee system position in the District. On December 24, six months after President Roosevelt signed the bill abolishing fee collections, Greenlaw lost his job.

He wouldn't return, it was reported, at the civil service classification of $3,200 per year. Although they had no funds with which to pay him, the Commissioners agreed to reappoint Greenlaw at this figure.

The boiler inspector indicated he could make more by the fee system, suggested the $3,800 salary and threw the whole thing into the laps of civil service commissioners.

Turkey Seizes 124 In Major Red 'Plot'

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 5 (AP).—Police arrested 124 persons here today, and believed they had frustrated what was described as "an important Communist plot."

Twenty-two of those arrested faced trial on serious charges, including attempting to cause an uprising of workers against the present Turkish government. It was said the trial would be held in secret.

Nazim Hikmet, famous Turkish poet, was caught in the round-up. He has been imprisoned repeatedly for Communist activities.

The arrests followed investigation of two workers caught distributing allegedly seditious pamphlets, which police said provoked serious trouble in certain factories.

U. S. Sued for $102,663.

By the Associated Press.

Northern Pacific Grain Growers, Inc., of Washington State, filed suit against the United States yesterday for $102,663 which it said represented losses suffered because of grain stabilization operations of the Federal Farm Board in 1929 and 1930.

Prince Georges Citizens Urge Gaming Check

Federation Proposes Law Enabling Police to Make Surprise Raids.

Prince Georges County political leaders yesterday were confronted with a proposal to empower the police to stage surprise raids on suspected gambling establishments.

The proposal was contained in the legislative program for a revision of the police department advocated by the County Federation of Citizens' Associations. The recommendations were submitted to the county commissioners at Upper Marlboro, Md., by Hugh C. Bickford, chairman of the Federation's police committee.

Referring to Jimmy La Fontaine's place on the Bladensburg road, near the District line, the report stated:

"The question has long been asked in this county, "How does Jimmy get away with it?"

Procedure Assailed.

"You can't expect the police to break up gambling unless you give them authority to arrive on the spot in a hurry, kick in the doors and see what is going on. At the present time, under the present laws, even if the force had enough men to take care of such things, about all they could do would be to get out cumbersome writs and injunctions which would give so much warning that they might as well save their time and effort."

The report suggested that the county borrow from the D. C. code the law which gives police officials, on written statement by a member of the force or two householders, the authority to order raids on suspected gambling places.

"The District has been very successful under this statute," the report continued. "That is why the gamblers moved over the Line."

Police System Attacked.

In a vitriolic attack on the present police system, under which seven officers, a justice of the peace and a bondsman have been indicted for conspiracy to obstruct justice, Bickford's report asserted:

"Remember that if any of these men are acquitted of the crimes they are charged with, the Constitution, under the present statute, guarantees that they shall keep their jobs. And even if they are all convicted, is the police system of the county any better off than it was before? Is there not the same system of political control; is there not the same lack of training; is there not, in short, still left the same set of circumstances which made the present scandal possible and which will breed another one as soon as the excitement of this one has died down?

"We should not, and can not, rest here. The time is ripe for making permanent changes, for adopting legislation that will make it impossible that such a condition arise again. And when we adopt legislation let us not have the loosely drawn laws which are now on the books—so loosely drawn that the author did not even consult the Constitution of the State to find out if it was Constitutional, or workable.

Six Recommendations.

The report contained six specific recommendations for a complete revision of the present police set-up: establishment of a bi-partisan board of police commissioners; public examination for appointment to the force; establishment of an adequate course of training; maintenance of necessary scientific equipment; promotion and advancement on basis of merit and salaries sufficient to bring into the service intelligent men who intend to make police work a lifetime career.

County political leaders also are understood to have drawn up a draft of a bill revising the police set-up.

The draft was prepared by Ogle Marbury, counsel to the board of commissioners, who explained the reason his bill was not made public was that no publicity was wanted until a reconciliation with the recommendations contained in the Federation's bill had been effected.

Smith Will Seek Transfer of Road

Although the threat of closing Military road adjacent to the Washington Airport has passed, Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday said he would seek to have the road transferred from the War Department to Arlington County.

He made similar efforts last year when the Commerce Department threatened to have the road closed because of the hazard of the airport.

The road is badly in need of repair, Smith said, and, though it is used by many Arlington residents, it is not maintained with any regularity by the War Department, which no longer has use for it.

Joe Cox put on his cap and drove over from the crossroads store. W. F. Halley got into his sedan and drove up from the farm. A. R. Harrison came down from the old Mason place in his roadster.

There wasn't a horse in sight on the highway to Fredericksburg when the three old men, whose average age is 65, swung their cars into the schoolyard at the Woodlawn School for the seventy-second and perhaps the last meeting of the Woodlawn Horse Company.

It was a warm day last week when the meeting took place, so the surviving remnants of a once lusty young group of Virginia farmers decided to hold the meeting on the school porch instead of indoors, where they had gathered on previous last Mondays in December since 1865.

The odd, warm sunshine felt good to the old men and limbered up their conversation, though as a matter of fact the meeting was more of a wake than a celebration, Halley strolled around the schoolhouse and looked at the trees. He runs a sawmill. Harrison sat on the steps in the sunshine. Cox fixed his clear blue eyes on the road and thought of other days.

About Done For.

"Yes," Harrison remarked, "it looks as though we're about done for. The society hasn't much reason for existence any more." Autos streaked over the concrete. "Since automobiles came in there isn't much more horse-thieving, and without horse thieves there's no excuse for the Woodlawn Horse Company." His remarks were accepted for a while without protest.

"Well, we broke up that chicken-stealing outfit," Cox shortly challenged. Harrison smiled inwardly at the notion of a rip-snorting horse-thief agency scaring off hen snatchers. He is a realist. The old company had gone to pot.

"No," he observed sadly, "no use fooling ourselves, we're only here to try to kind of keep the old association together. Hate to see it die. Too bad, only three of us here today. Used to be a couple of hundred back there after the Civil War. Whenever a horse was stolen then, you'd see the men 'go down the road' and they stayed out until they got the horse back. Members never lost a horse, not a one, since the day they organized against scavengers and pillagers after the war. Oh well——" and he edged his hat forward over his eyes and lapsed into silence.

Post-War Phenomenon.

The story of the Woodlawn Horse Company is the story of a typical phenomenon of the tumultuous post-war era which produced vigilantes, horse-thief and stock protective associations, the Ku Klux Klan, and other private nongovernmental agencies in a day when a bleeding and wounded South was the easy victim of carpetbaggers, raiders, and all other forms of battlefield vulture.

It must have been a striking and picturesque group which gathered in the Woodlawn schoolhouse on the night of October 15, 1865. Most of the farmers present were Quakers who had come down into the rich farmlands adjoining Mount Vernon a few years before, only to be caught up in the tide of war which swept around George Washington's old estates.

Being Quakers, they refused to take up arms on either side. Pennsylvanians and Jerseyites transplanted to Virginia, their sympathies were divided between their pasts and their futures, and stalemated in all events by their religion. The way of the neutral, however, is hard. They were overrun by both sides. They were in the midst of a no-man's land.

When hostilities ceased they thought the peace which they worshipped had at long last come. But their troubles were just beginning. Virginia became a roosting spot for the first horde of carpetbaggers. Lawlessness flourished. Horse-stealing became a commonplace, and with the horses went cows, sheep, vehicles, and anything else that could be hauled off in a night raid.

Took Law in Own Hands.

Law enforcement waned as the spoilers grew stronger. It became apparent after continued ravagement that the farmers would have to take the law into their own hands. They would do their own policing.

So it was that Cortland Lukens, John Ballinger and T. S. Wright pounded the schoolmarm's desk on that day in 1865 and asked about 15 other Quaker farmers to band together into a society to be known as the Woodlawn Horse Association, to defend themselves against guerrillas. Lukens was the first president, Ballinger treasurer, Wright secretary, and James Hunter, Edward Denike and Levi Stiles, directors.

It wasn't long before they had their first "case." The strategy of recovering a stolen horse was simple compared to modern crime detection methods, but it was apparently a great deal more effective. As soon as a horse theft was reported by one member, the society was summoned to the schoolhouse, orders given to certain grounds to deploy in one direction down the road and another to go in the opposite direction. Then entered the most important ingredient of the plan—persistence. The searchers stopped at every house along the road and gave descriptions of the missing animal, and kept on going until they picked up information from someone who had seen the horse. The angry Quakers kept eternally searching until they found the horse and brought the thief to justice. It was part of the system for searchers to stay out until the horse was found, not returning to their homes and beds until the missing nag was overhauled, and headed back toward its rightful master.

Terror to Thieves.

In addition, a reward fund was built up by dues. This fund allowed various amounts as rewards to the legally constituted officers of the State in the event they should find the horse. Money is a strong spur and $50 was the usual price, an important sum in those times, and the diligence of the police in aiding the Woodlawn Horse Company soon became remarkable. It wasn't long until the effectiveness of the organization became a watchword about the State, and thieves began to steer clear of the Quaker settlement.

Success breeds success, it is said, and such proved the case in expansion of the society, or "company" as the members call it. It wasn't long until everyone wanted to become a member and from the 15 original charter founders the membership swelled to 56, the treasury overflowed with dues, and the company began to take on a social as well as police status.

As late as 1909 there were more than 50 members, although horse-stealing had somewhat gone out of vogue as an illicit means of acquiring assets by that date. The pages of the minutes of the company by this time were, however, beginning to show many notations of "deceased" after members' names, and the high tide of financial strength of the organization was reached about this period, with more than $500 in the treasury.

Autos Spell Doom.

Not until 1923 d' the first auto theft appear in the records. It was the signal of the advent of another age and the funeral notice of the Woodlawn Horse Company. Harvey S. Clapp, son of the United States Senator, asked the company in that year to help him recover a Ford touring car. Recovering autos and horses are two different matters in a civilization of paved roads and easy escape. The horse company could no longer "go down the road" and stop at every farmhouse on the myriad intricate highways of today. Survivors voted to start disbursing the treasury funds to charity.

By 1932 the company was just about done for. That year the few members who had not been removed from the roster by death or indifference, in a step calculated to revive the company, voted a motion which called upon the members to protect any and all property. It was thought with an increased scope, now that horses were out of the picture, its youthful vigor might be restored. But the results were rather pathetic. Some darkey henhouse raiders had made off with a few hens. Word was passed around that the horse company was going down the road again. So terrifying had its reputation been in years gone by that the hen stealing ceased at once. But the victory could hardly be described as a great one, as Mr. Harrison pointed out. A motion to admit women to pep up the society was voted down.

Time Marches On.

So last Monday it was a sad remnant of the old sociey which gathered on the schoolhouse steps. Autos whizzed past in an endless stream on the concrete highway. The three old men and their society were something apart and of another age, as their own cars mutely testified. Harvey Clapp was dead and his widow teaching in the Woodlawn schoolhouse. Almost all the other members were dead. Cortland Lukens' home—he was the original president—had been converted into a roadside lunchroom. The once lush and beautiful countryside was now forested with billboards. Slowly, without any formal farewell, the three old men wandered to their cars and drove away. They seemed to sense that they had probably attended the last meeting of the Woodlawn Horse Company. Time marches on.

Murder Suspect Fights Extradition

Arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a fugitive from justice warrant from Maryland charging him with the murder of Eugene Hancock, Carvin Burley Baxter, 27, of 508 Third street northeast, demanded 30 days to fight extradition.

Baxter waived preliminary hearing when arraigned before Judge Walter J. Casey, who ordered him committed to the District Jail without bail for the usual 30-day period. Hancock lived next-door to Baxter.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey H. Tolson arrested Baxter last week after he is alleged to have taken the gun that killed the 66-year-old steamfitter in Piscataway, Md., nearly two weeks ago to the home of an uncle in Cherrydale, Va. The gun was recovered Sunday. Carvin became involved as an accessory when he is alleged to have spent a part of the $100 taken from the murdered man, and aided in the disposition of the murder rifle.

The warrant on which Carvin is being held as a fugitive charges him with the murder, police said because there is no charge of accessory on the Maryland statute books.

Youth Is Captured In Rooftop Chase

A fleet-footed colored youth was captured by police yesterday when he barricaded himself in a room after a dizzy chase over roof-tops in the first block of New York avenue northwest.

The chase started when police were called to the home of Fire Department Lieut. John Moore, at 81 New York avenue. A roomer had noticed the youth enter the home.

Policemen H. H. Hodge and W. L. Morris chased the youth to the roof. They lost him after running over several roofs. They called for additional help. Three other patrolmen came and a concentrated search found the youth locked in a room of 65 New York avenue.

At the Second Precinct Station the youth gave his name as John Thomas, colored, 17, of 38 Pierce street northwest. He was being held for investigation last night.

R. E. Lee Camp Plans Banquet At Alexandria

Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, will meet Friday night at the office of Adjutant W. Lindsey Carne, 119 South Royal street, to map plans for a banquet in Lee Camp Hall January 19, anniversary of the birth of Gen. Lee.

For many years a banquet was held under the auspices of the Robert E. Lee Camp, United Confederate Veterans, but in 1934 the last local member of that camp, Gen. Edgar Warfield, then 92 years old, died. In 1935 and 1936 dinners were held at the George Mason Hotel commemorating the birth of Lee. This year the plan is to return to Lee Camp Hall, the home purchased and maintained by the Confederate Veterans for many years, and in more recent years maintained by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Fire Chief James M. Duncan has mailed questionnaires to 40 persons regarded as eligible for the six positions to be filled this month in the Alexandria Fire Department. They are to be filled in and returned to Chief Duncan at once. More than 40 applications were received, but some were disqualified on the age limit and some did not live within the city limits.

City Manager E. C. Dunn will fill the positions by January 15, when the men will be assigned to duty.

Bernard H. Cook, of Alexandria, district manager of the employment office, now has his office in the former quarters of the Alexandria Employment Office, Cameron street side of the City Hall.

Mrs. Cordelia O'Neil, of East Maple street, while walking on Oronoco street extended Monday night, had her purse snatched from her hand by a white youth about 19 years old. Her outcry attracted so much attention that the man dropped the purse and ran.

The proceeds of the annual Police Ball, to be held January 12, will be applied to the Police Department charity fund. Dancing will begin at 10 p. m. Two orchestras will play.

The George Washington High School Alumni Association will meet at 8 p. m., in the auditorium of the school. Franklin Backus, the president, will preside.

Dr. Gearhart Wins Divorce; Wife's Plea For Alimony Denied

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP).—Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart, New York and Washington dentist who said he had filled the teeth of four Presidents, won a divorce today from Mrs. Ethel H. Gearhart, of Baltimore, after a legal battle that reached four cities and filled 500 pages of testimony.

The decree was granted by Circuit Judge L. L. Parks on the grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Gearhart's petition for alimony was denied by the judge.

Dr. Gearhart alleged that his wife "nagged him and injured his practice by public fits of temper directed at him or his patients." She filed a cross-bill for divorce, also charging cruelty.

Mrs. Gearhart was the dentist's second wife.

The Post Recipe Contest Glorifies Corn Meal Dish

First Prize of $3 Goes to Miss Alice S. Youngman for Directions for Tamalie Pie; Miss Laura V. Jones Wins Second Award.

By Rebekah Blake.

WHO WOULD HAVE THOUGHT that the homely corn meal could be made up into such attractive dishes or be used in so many delicious foods? Yet it can, as was proven by the entrants in The Post Corn Meal Recipe Contest. No, corn meal was not used only in corn bread as so many people think it should be used. Of course there were good recipes for this, but many were for such luscious things as waffles, meat pie, dressing, nut-corn meal muffins and cakes.

The first prize of $3 was awarded to Alice S. Youngman, of Silver Spring Md., for her recipe for tamali pie.

The second prize of $2 went to Miss Laura V. Jones, 2425 West Lanvale street, Baltimore, Md., for her recipe for ham and corn bread shortcake. The third prize, $1, was awarded to Mrs. E. L. McKire, 3810 Eastern avenue northeast, for her Boston brown bread recipe, the fourth prize, $1, went to Helen E. Hoover, 5800 Western avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., for raisin corn bread stuffing, and the fifth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Harry E. Kelsey, 523 Main street, Laurel, Md.

Tamali Pie.

2 cups cornmeal
2½ teaspoons salt
6 cups boiling water
1 onion
1 green pepper
1 can tomato soup
1 pound hamburger (or ground round steak)
1 small can mushrooms (optional)
1 tablespoon fat

Make a mush by stirring cormeal and 1½ teaspoons salt into the boiling water. Cook in a double boiler for 45 minutes. Brown the onion and green pepper in the fat. Stir frequently. Add the hamburger and cook until the red disappears. Season well. Add mushrooms. Add can of soup. Put a layer of cornmeal mush in the bottom of a greased baking dish. Add the meat mixture and then cover with the rest of the mush. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F. This serves six to eight. It can be prepared in the morning and baked at dinner time. Also, it makes a fine hot dish to take out on a picnic. Ripe olives may be added and help the flavor.

Miss Jones' recipe:

Ham and Corn Bread Shortcake.

¾ cup flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups cormeal
1¼ cups milk
1 egg, beaten
4 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Add cornmeal and mix well. Add milk, beaten egg and melted shortening. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake in a hot oven at 425 degrees F. about 25 minutes. Split while hot, first cutting in eight pieces if desired, butter and put together with creamed ham.

Creamed Ham for Filling.

2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Small piece bay leaf
½ teaspoon onion juice
1 whole clove
2½ cups milk
1½ cups cooked ham cut in ¼-inch cubes

Melt butter, add flour, stir until well blended. Add seasonings. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Bring to boil and boil 2 minutes. Add ham.

Here is Mrs. McKire's recipe:

Boston Brown Bread.

2 cups sour milk or buttermilk
¾ cup dark molasses
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup graham meal
2 cups cornmeal
1 cup grapenuts
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup raisins (optional)

Combine the milk and molasses. Dissolve the soda in a tablespoon of warm water, stir it in and then beat in the graham meal, cornmeal, grapenuts and salt mixed with the raisins, if used. Transfer to three one-pound well oiled coffee or baking powder cans, and steam for two hours (or steam for three hours if put in a larger container).

Miss Hoover's recipe follows:

Raisin Corn Bread Stuffing.

5 cups crumbled corn bread
2 cups dry white bread crumbs
2-3 cup seedless raisins
2 cups finely cut celery
2 tablespoons shortening
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sage
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
5 tablespoons bacon drippings

Saute celery in shortening about five minutes; add salt and combine with crumbled corn bread, white bread crumbs, seasonings, melted bacon drippings and raisins. Add one tablespoon of water to the eggs, beat well, add to bread mixture and toss together lightly. Stuff fowl or pocket of veal lightly with the stuffing. Bake any extra stuffing in separate pan, basting with meat drippings.

Here is Mrs. Kelsey's recipe:

Maryland Corn Jems.

Cream ½ cup butter (or other shortening) and add gradually, while beating constantly, ¾ cup sugar; then add 3 eggs well beaten and 1½ cups milk. Mix and sift 2 cups cornmeal, 1 cup flour, 5 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Combine mixtures and add ½ cup of currants. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven from 20 to 25 minutes.

New England Boiled Dinner Maine Favorite

State's Housewives Cling to Old Recipe to Vary Sea Food Meals.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

IT IS NOT STRANGE that the flavor of the sea lingers about the favorite foods of the inhabitants of Maine, for sea food is plentiful and varied in that part of the country. For generations the Maine people have utilized the gifts of the ocean, which breaks along its rock-bound coast from Northeast Harbor to Portland, to vary their diet and to add zest to their daily meals.

Maine does not give its entire allegiance to sea food, however. It clings with real faith to the virtues of the New England boiled dinner, the delicious flavor of apple and pumpkin pie and the substantial satisfaction of home-made doughnuts.

When a person is really hungry after a long day of sport or work, the appetite is made even keener as a Maine home is approached and from the windows is wafted the tantalizing odors of that famous Puritan delicacy, the boiled dinner, whose use dates back to colonial days.

Of course, without a New England conscience to guarantee exact following of the recipe, a boiled dinner might not have such a twang.

The necessary ingredients include 4 pounds corned beef, 1 small cabbage quartered, 3 carrots quartered, 6 medium onions, 6 small parsnips, 6 potatoes and 2 small turnips.

Wash the beef in cold water and, if very salty, soak in cold water for 30 minutes. Drain. Place meat in boiling water and cook from three to four hours or until tender. One and a half hours before serving, add the cabbage, carrots and turnips. Half an hour before serving, add the onions, parsnips and potatoes. Place attractivley on a large platter and serve.

Nowhere in the world are there finer lobsters than those to be found on the Maine coast. Everyone, of course, knows the usual method of broiling lobsters, but in Maine they have a way of using the lobster meat in croquettes that any housewife could emulate to her profit.

Lobster Croquettes.

2 cups of lobster, cut in pieces
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon chili sauce
Yolk of 1 egg
1 cup thick white sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mustard
2 eggs, well beaten, and bread crumbs

Make a little white sauce and pour a little over the beaten egg yolk. Return to the double boiler and cook one minute. Remove from fire and add the lobster, parsley, chili sauce, salt and mustard. Chill. When cold enough to hold shape, form into cone shapes or balls. Dip into the beaten eggs and then in bread crumbs. Fry in hot fat and drain on brown paper. Serve with tartare sauce.

Other Maine recipes which people Down East are fond of passing on to their friends include the following:

Maine Salad.

1 cup cold white fish
1 cup cold diced potatoes
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup minced celery
¾ cup French dressing
Lettuce
Pimento strips

Combine the shredded fish, potatoes and celery and season with the salt and paprika. Mix with French dressing and serve on lettuce garnished with strips of pimento.

Nor can be forgotten the tempting relish of Kennebunk pickle served with cold meat, which is made from a pioneer recipe used in Maine for many generations.

Kennebunk Pickle.

2 pounds green tomatoes
2 pounds red tomatoes
1 small head cabbage
2 sweet red peppers
2 green peppers
¾ quart of onions
1 bunch celery
6 tablespoons salt
1 quart white vinegar
3 cups brown sugar
1 stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon whole cloves
1 teaspoon dry mustard

Chop the vegetables very fine. Add the salt and let stand overnight. Drain. Add the vinegar and brown sugar. Combine the cinnamon, cloves and mustard and tie in a small cheesecloth sack. Boil everything together for about 30 minutes. Remove the cheesecloth sack. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Date Bars.

1 cup sugar
1 cup seeded dates, halved
2 eggs
1 cup chopped walnut meats
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
Salt to taste

Beat eggs until light, adding sugar and beating again. Add in order dates, nuts, salt, flour and baking powder. Bake in 1-inch sheet in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Cut in bars and roll in powdered sugar.

A Word About Cooking Sausage
Raw pork is extremely unhealthful and hard to digest. To be edible sausage should be fried at least 20 to 25 minutes until it is done clear through. For best results put about ¼ or ½ inch of water in the frying pan and boil, then pour off excess water and brown. Sausage should be fried slowly. Fast frying often browns or burns the outside leaving the center uncooked.

Roosevelts Entertain At Dinner for Cabinet

Character Impersonator, Dancer and Pianists Perform; White House Hums With Activity as One Event Follows Another.

By Lynda Reeve.

All the world seems to be beating a path to the portals of 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, and with one party following closely on the heels of another, there appears no rest in sight for the President and his family. Last night the Cabinet dinner was checked off the list of White House dates crowded into January and early February before Lent calls a halt on formal entertaining.

Following dinner, additional guests were invited for the program on which Miss Alice Wynne, dancer; Miss Juilet, character impersonator; Mr. Beveridge Webster and Miss Edna Ferns, pianists, were presented.

Temporarily, the White House family is smaller, but just for a few days. The grandchildren are still there, but the Elliott Roosevelts are in New York as are the James Roosevelts. The latter are in the throes of packing in preparation for making their home here. Before leaving town, they were house hunting and have just about made up their minds which one to take.

Mrs. Roosevelt began the day yesterday with her press conference at which Jill, one of the two Irish setters of the White House, was present, sitting at the First Ladys feet.

Today Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the President to the Capitol, where he will deliver his message at 2 o'clock. Tomorrow she will be off for New York to open the Junior League headquarters, a class on civic government which later will be held at the Todhunter School. On the following day she will return to Washington for the luncheon Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, is giving in her honor. In the afternoon, there is to be a concert at the Library of Congress and, still later, Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas at the White House. Saturday she will attend the luncheon at the Willard at which Miss Maude Royden is to be the guest speaker. The next week will start off for her with Mrs. Lawrence Townsends musicale at the Mayflower.

Monday afternoon there will be two informal teas. Tuesday Mrs. John Nance Garner will be hostess at luncheon in her honor, and following that there will be a tea at the American Association of Universtiy Women. That night the White House will be the scene of the Judicial Reception. And so the busy days go by.

The huge horse-shoe-shaped table, which all but filled the State Dining room last night, was covered with snowy damask, glistening crystal gobletes, silver and the handsome gold service which contained Columbia roses, Stevia, Adiantum and Baldii fern.

The guests at the dinner were the Secretary f the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.; the Secretary of War, Mr. Harry W. Woodring; the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Furley, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude Swanson, the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold L. Ickes; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry Wallace, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins; the Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Walton Moore; Miss Margaret Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne C. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edison, Gen. and Mrs. Mallin Craig, Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Early, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. Marriner S. Eccles, Mr. and Mrs. Morris L. Cooke, Mr. Frederic A. Delano, Mr. John Dewey, Miss Mary W. Dewson, Mr. Edward A. Filene, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Flynn.

Also the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Hon. and Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. William D. Hassett, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley High, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, Miss Esther Lape, Mr. Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, Miss Mary Patten, Hon. and Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Price, Miss Elizabeth Read, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas G. Roosevelt, Mr. Kirke L. Simpson, Mrs. John Slade, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Grover A. Whelan, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Winant, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Capt. and Mrs. Paul H. Bestedo and Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson.

Plans already are well under way for Inauguration Day. The evening before there will be a dinner for the various heads who worked in the campaign and the evening following Inauguration Day there will be a dinner for the numerous Governors who will be here to take part in the festivities and to attend the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes', conference. On January 20, following the parade there will be a buffet luncheon at which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain the Cabinet and a few other guests. Later in the afternoon there will be a large tea, and still later Mrs. Roosevelt plans to attend the concert in Constitution Hall.

Among the guests at the White House for Inauguration will be Mrs. Louis McHenry Howe and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baker.

C., for the week-end and next Wednesday will motor to New York City for a short stay.

Among the guests yesterday were Mrs. Norman Oyster, Dr. and Mrs. Radford Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheridan, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, of Fairfax, and Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Selinger.

Ruth Parker Dove Bows In Season's Last Debut

Dance-Reception Follows Dinner for Miss Margot Garrett Given by Miss Angelica Lloyd; Party Strictly an Affair for Younger Set.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carter Dove presented their daughter, Miss Ruth Parker Dove, to Washington society last night at a dance given at the Carlton Hotel, where they make their home.

Miss Dove is the final Capital debutante to make her bow. The dance at which her parents entertained for her last evening was strictly a young people's party, with about 175 guests attending. It was preceded by a dinner given by Miss Angelica Lloyd at the 1925 F Street Club in compliment to Miss Margot Garrett.

Mr. and Mrs. Dove and their daughter received before a screen of palms and ferns in a room at the north end of the hotel. Sobodium palms formed a partition between the reception room and the main lobby and were used elsewhere in the room for decoration.

The debutante, who is tall and slender, with dark hair and eyes, was gowned in a frock of white chiffon fashioned with a Grecian neckline, caught on either side with emerald clips, and at the waist was a green girdle which formed a short train in back.

The dancing was in the Carlton room adjoining that in which the hosts received. Guests resting between dances could look down on the scene below from small balconies decorated with sobodium palms.

Among out-of-town guests here for the party were Miss Harriett Parker and Miss Martha Parker, cousins of Miss Dove and daughters of Myron Parker, of Washington, and Mrs. Louis McKim, of Baltimore, who are visiting Miss Dove at the Carlton. Miss Harriett Parker made her debut this season in Baltimore. Also here from Baltimore were Miss Agnes Talliafero, Miss Sara Buck, Miss Margaret Hammond Cooke, Miss Hope Distler, Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, Miss Phyllis Livingston Poe, Miss Elizabeth Rider, Miss Frances Ehlen, Miss Elizabeth Sothoron, Miss Sarah Whitall, Mr. Gillett Boyce, Mr. Harvey Clapps, Mr. Edward Dukhardt and Mr. Thomas Dukhart, Mr. Rhett Elliott, Mr. Thomas Hughes, Mr. Richard Janney, Mr. Courtney Jenifer, Mr. Gerald Kidder, Mr. John Rain, Mr. Pendleton Stitt, Mr. Cary Swope and Mr. Henry Warren.

Also, Mr. Edward Gemmell, Mr. Louis Stocklin, Mr. John Pitny, Mr. Gill Greenway, and Miss Larraine Littlefield, a guest of Miss Dove, all of New York; Mr. Harry Darlington, jr., Mr. McCullough Darlington, sons of Mrs. George Garrett, of Pittsburgh; Mr. Billy Wilbur and Miss Elizabeth Charrington, of Warrenton.

Among those seen were Mlle. Nora de With, daughter of the Minister of The Netherlands, and Mme. van Haersma de With Senor Manuel Trucco, son of the Ambassador of Chile; Mr. Decio de Moura, secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Miss Nancy Brereton, wearing white satin; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hight, Mr. Edward Summers, Mr. Edmund Corley, Miss Alice Tuckerman, wearing an off-shoulder frock of purple taffeta; Miss Carlile Porter, in red crepe; Mr. Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Miss Gertrude Pearson, in cream moire; Mr. Joshua Evans, Mr. Fred Hunt, Miss Aubrey Campbell, in black taffeta; Mr. Nathan Bartlett, Miss Martha Davidge, Miss Betsy Waldron, of Honolulu, who was wearing black net and velvet; Mr. Austin Boyd, Miss Ann Childs, Miss Eleanor Flood, in Nile-green satin; Miss Margot Garrett, Mr. Clement Conger, Miss Marguerite Hagner, in black velvet, and Miss Florence Harris.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Sally Finney Evans, brunette, who grew up here and has returned after some years' absence, made her singing debut last night in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh Hotel. Sally, barely over 5 feet, is not one of the "regular act," but has a wee roller skate piano which she moves about and upon which she plays favorites that take the hearers way back ——. She plays request numbers, not with the usual night club air, but rather with the atmosphere of an informal gathering.

With her husband, the late Col. Paul Evans, she spent much time in London, when he was attache to our embassy there.

My goodness, it seems as though Washington is luring more and more important people here. Now, we hear that about March, society will be on its toes and ready to trot out the best silver and grandmother's choicest recipes. Why? Because an unofficial British committee, which has as its reputed aim the soldering of closer relations with this country, is now making plans to be here. The members, accompanied by their wives—thus making more reason for parties and gay affairs—will be headed by the Hon. Kenneth DeCrucy, leader of the Conservative Party in Parliament.

What a nice party Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman gave yesterday afternoon for Bette Hartz. It took place in the high-ceilinged, spacious quarters of Gen. and Mrs. Coleman at the Soldiers' Home. As soon as the guests arrived, the hostess, who was costumed in rich dark velvet, shooed them into one of the numerous drawing rooms, where cocktails were served. Then there was luncheon.

The long table, with its handsome embroidered cloth, had as a centerpiece an effective arrangement of poinsettias, holly and pine sprays intermingled with tall crimson tapers in silver holders, just matching the tall silver goblets.

When the guest of honor arrived, wearing a wide-brimmed and practically crownless hat of black felt, with a blue-gray lame frock, Villette Sullivan announced that Bette was famous for having the best-looking hats in town. There was no dispute.

Mary Crane, after crossing the Atlantic several times, apparently has decided that traveling is good for one, and practices what she preaches. She returned to her home at Fort Myer in the wee sma' hours yesterday morning after a party in Baltimore (that's what comes from making a debut in these two cities) and immediately after luncheon yesterday was off again for the Maryland city.

• • • •

Among the guests were Mrs. Hartz, mother of the guest of honor; Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. John Kendall, Mrs. Margaret Kyle, Mrs. Neitah King, Jeanne Grimes, Jean Macklin, Betty Galt, Mary Kay Spinks, Mary Patterson, Mary Agnes Young, Dorothy Highfield, Margaret McMullen, Katherine Pearson, Gertie Pearson and Betty Boschen, pretty blonde newcomer to Washington, whose father, Maj. Gen., Boschen, is now Chief of Staff of the Army, following in the footsteps of Gen. Coleman.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Elliott Kekenes, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Constance Kekenes, to Mr. Robert Lee Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Aubrey Simpson, of this city. The wedding will take place in June.

Leave for Florida.

Many Dinners Are Scheduled

Residential and diplomatic society seems to be following the heavy entertaining schedule set by the White House, and many dinners and teas make this one of the gayest weeks so far this season.

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch entertained last night at a dinner at the Legation for 24. The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, and Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, were the ranking guests.

Another diplomatic dinner is scheduled for tonight when Mr. and Mrs. George Bowie Chipman will entertain at their home on Woodland drive in honor of the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis.

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness will entertain at a luncheon today at their home, and tonight Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge will give a dinner.

On Sunday, Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, of the State Department, will give a luncheon at his home on N street, in Georgetown, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McC. Little have issued invitations for a dinner January 15.

Albert Stephans Plan Visit to Washington

Announcement has been received of the marriage December 30, in Portland, Oreg., of Miss Katharine Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allan Hart, of that city, to Mr. Albert E. Stephan, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Stephan, of Washington. The ceremony took place at the First Unitarian Church, the Rev. Richard A. Steiner officiating.

Mr. Stephan and his bride will come to Washington on their wedding trip. The bride attended Reed College and Mills College, and Mr. Stephan attended Wesleyan University and Harvard Law School.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Augment Income and Thereby Keep "Dream Home" Is Problem of Worried Housewife.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For years we planned and dreamed of a home in the country where we could have a flower garden, but circumstances conspired against us. Five years of depression and no steady income made it difficult for us to manage on what we had saved, and still keep out of debt. Then we came to Washington a year ago to make a new start, for my husband found a job here.

* * * * *

Rents were so high we decided to buy a home within our means. We found a house of the kind we had always dreamed of, located in suburban Virginia, about a 30-minute bus ride from downtown Washington. At first we were undecided about taking it, as we did not know for certain we could afford it. But we were told we could rent out two rooms and thus meet our regular expenses.

* * * *

Well, we gave our last $500 as down payment in the belief we would have no trouble renting the rooms—for we heard persons were out here every day begging for nice furnished rooms. We have been here nearly six months now, and after spending $5 on advertising and placing cards in stores, we are still waiting for our first applicant for a room.

* * * *

If I had any chance to show my rooms I know I could rent them, as they are comfortably furnished with new things. We are only three blocks from the bus lines, we have hot-water heat, bath and shower. But we have come to the end of the road. We just can't go on this way. We can't allow ourselves to fall into debt, and I am afraid we may lose our home if something doesn't turn up soon.

* * * *

If I thought I could get a position I would look for one, as I have had ten years' experience as a saleswoman and can give excellent references from one of the high-class stores in the Middle-west. I will do anything to save our home, as it is the first real home my husband has ever had. He is a good, steady man and we both are so afraid of getting into debt. We do love our home. It means so much to us. If we could only rent the rooms, we could get along nicely. I would be willing to serve meals or share the kitchen.

* * * *

Dear Miss Haworth, I do hope you can help me find a way out, as I am so worried. The future looks so black and discouraging. Anything you may suggest will be gratefully appreciated. We are strangers here and have no one to go to for advice. We like it here and want to remain here and be good citizens of the community. Thanking you for your attention, I remain, yours respectfully. DISCOURAGED.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR DISCOURAGED: It is my prediction that you will always have difficulty in finding and keeping lessees of your two spare rooms. Lone men and women who must call a rented bedroom "home" are usually loath to live on the very outskirts of the city in which they work. They may try it for a time, believing they have a soul-hunger for country space and quietude, but almost invariably they find themselves even more hungry for daytime proximity to their place of employment and night-time proximity to the bright lights of the city's down-town section.

* * * *

However, don't despair. There may be other ways of saving the situation. For one thing, it is possible you might convert the second floor—if yours is a two-story house—into a furnished apartment or light-housekeeping quarters for a married couple or small family. Or you might devise a sitting room, bedroom and bath suite for an elderly invalid or convalescent who requires country air, food and quiet. Or, for a time, until you are in the clear financially, you might rent the whole house furnished, and find a room for yourself and your husband elsewhere.

* * * *

Still another solution of the problem—and probably the most effective; certainly the one I should elect if I were in your position—is to find employment as a saleswoman. If you are thoroughly experienced and have convincing references, you can find such work if you diligently seek it. The $12 or $15 a week you might receive as a minimum starting salary would easily exceed the rental revenue from two paying-guest rooms. Average room rentals, as I understand it, range from $15 to $30 a month, depending upon the convenience of the address. I daresay you could not expect more than $20 a month each for your rooms, and not all of that is profit by any means.

Dutch Treat Club News.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The Dutch Treat Club of Washington will open its 1937 program with a combined business meeting and dinner dance this evening (January 6) at 7 o'clock at the Lotus Restaurant. This club, although only a few weeks old, is growing in membership and in the scope of its activities at every meeting, and is filling a long-felt want in this community. It offers a socially acceptable way of meeting congenial, refined, intelligent men and women, and of spending a pleasant evening at a minimum of expense.

* * * *

On and after the second meeting in January, this club will introduce a guest speaker at each meeting. One of our first speakers will discuss "Copyright Laws;" another is to demonstrate the mysteries of legerdemain; still another will explain the principles of graphology, and we are getting other entertainment experts lined up. Sincerely,

AL DUNN,
Vice President.

* * * *

DEAR MR. DUNN: This column is scarcely the proper medium for publicizing the time, place and program of your club meetings, but I shall make an exception this once, in order to get your announcement before persons who may be looking for just that social opportunity your group purports to provide. Another time, I suggest you mail your contribution to the club news editor of this newspaper. Each day some space is devoted to an account of club activities, past, present and to come.

M. H.

Develop Your Talents

"ISN'T LINDA marvelous," sighs Mary wistfully. "She has everything it takes to enjoy life—self-confidence, intelligence, charm. I can never be like her."

Of course you can't be exactly like the gracious, radiant Linda. She has her own delightful quirks of personality. But you can be just as charming in your own way. You, too, can build the confidence in yourself that makes others admire and believe in you. You, too, can use your own type of intelligence to bring you more of life's riches. You can follow Linda's plan of developing what you have, to get what you want.

Ask yourself these questions, just as Linda did several years ago when she decided that life was not so much fun for her as it ought to be:

"How can I develop charm?" The answer is—take the trouble to be as gracious and kindly, as engaging in manner and appearance as possible.

"How can I develop self-confidence?" By saying, "Of course, I can," instead of "Oh, what's the use. I can't do it."

With our 40-page booklet, "Getting More Out of Life," as a guide, you can put your character, your brain and your personal charm to work—to get out of life what you have not been given.

Send 15 cent for our booklet, "Getting More Out of Life," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Bright Gloves Add That Needed Color Touch To One's Dark, Mono-Toned Winter Costumes

Match your gloves to your shoes or touch of color on your hat if you want to be first in interpreting the spring vogue. The gloves above, designed by Paul Chanut, of Paris, are made of new soft, durable leather, with vent back and novel treatment in the hand-stitching.

By Ethel Ehlen.

TO ENLIVEN dark winter costumes, try adding bribht gloves as a smart accent. If you are ensembled-minded, a feather in the hat or shoes of the glove tone, are sponsored by the Paris couturiere, Molyneux, one of the greatest exponents of the colored glove. He often uses the first-mentioned method to introduce a note of color to an otherwise monotone ccstume.

According to previews in the market, gloves for spring will have a greater costume importance than ever before. Color, which was given fashion significance last year, is now definitely established. The emphasis on styling in what is aptly termed "costume gloves" is the feature of the oncoming season. This is scheduled to put the ubiquitous classic pull-on somewhat in the background. These new gloves in no way resemble the novelty versions of last year. They are trimmed with smart good taste and their entire treatment is original, chic and discreet.

Two-Leather Gloves.

The "two-face" glove, combining two leathers, will be much in evidence, it is predicted. The kinds of leather used, determining the type of glove; glace, kid and suede being designed for afternoon, and sturdier leathers, such as suede kasanova and glace kasanova (a new leather), for sports, travel and general daytime wear. Hand-worked details abound in the spring showings. Hand-whipping and sewing; hand embridered motifs; old-fashioned stitches, such as the cross-stitch and feather stitch, have been revived to feature very feminine gloves for all occasions.

Tweed effects are achieved by the use of two silk threads of different colors in the stitching. Quaint Edwardian-looking gloves for afternoon use tiny flower designs in hand embroidery, sprinkled over the tops. With the neutral-toned spring hats adorned with gay spots of color, there is an excellent chance to match this bit of brilliance with gloves in the same tone as the hat trimming. Or gloves the same color as the hat, with the stitching or embroidery repeating the color accent.

Gloves for spring are longer than they have been for several seasons. This is due to the vogue for shorter sleeves in both coats and frocks. The six and eight-button gloves are expected to be extremely popular, although the wrist-length and four-button types are still in the style picture. Whatever the chosen length, it should be remembered "gloves should meet sleeves and be long enough to crush down over the wrist and arm."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 5.

MY VASSAR correspondent, who is the clever Georgette Auerbach, of Hartford, writes a bulletin to the effect that there seems to be a revolution raging on the dear old campus this year—not a social one; purely a matter of costume.

ALICE HUGHES.

Georgette says that the place has suddenly bloomed with all the peasant colors now so popular—Tyrolean, Russian, Mexican and so on—and that the old uniform of sweater and baggy tweed skirt seems to have been pushed into the hall closet for the year. I gather that you wouldn't know the old place now, with the historic Brooks sweater seemingly a thing of the past.

This upset at Poughkeepsie really started, I suppose, when the girls began wearing gay scarves immigrant-fashion. Then, by easy stages, came the Tyrolean hat, the Russian blouse, and the various oddments of brightly colored footwear now popular. As a result the place by day resembles a combination fancy dress ball and institution of higher learning, with the former aspect at least holding its own.

All of which is interesting news indeed, and anything which will ginger up and brighten a workaday campus is quite all right with me. And one of the oddest features of this Vassar revolution is the fact that it quiets down sartorially after sunset, with the girls looking very calm and conservative in their white satins or black velvets. So this is the latest from the Poughkeepsie front. Other campuses remain to be heard from.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our theater season peps up amazingly with the turn of the year! "The Show Is On," that musical madness with Bea Lillie and Bert Lahr, sure to fill the Winter Garden until summer, and Clare Booth's new show, "The Women," a hit. The author, of course, is Clare Booth Brokaw Luce, wife of the publisher of Time, etc. And we simply refuse to part with Mr. Gielgud's "Hamlet," so the engagement has been extended to the twenty-third of this month . . .

* * * *

Maybe it's a sign of better times, or perhaps there are more men "on the loose" at midday, but a lot of "mixed luncheons" are on tap these days in some of our statlier homes. Mrs. Charles Marshall, whose lovely Gracie Square apartment overlooks the East River, gave one such the other noon at which 20 men and women were present. Only sherry and tomato juice were served—the latter the more popular—and by 3 o'clock all the men were out of the place and back at work—I trust . . .

* * * *

We've another lady mannequin-designer to join our famous Cora Scovil—this time Jean Spadea, a brilliant fashion artist, whose girls have just made their debuts in the windows of one of the bigger and smarter stores on the upper Avenue. Jean called her first product, a blonde, "Eve," and the second, a brunette, looks very much like Thelma, Lady Furness . . .

* * * *

When you see these lovely society boys and girls sitting around the fancier New York night clubs, don't think the proprietor is getting rich from their trade. They aren't the spenders—they are window-dressing, and many of them will sit around all evening with one or two glasses of tonic. As for their tips—well, ask any waiter!

Figurines Make Unique Ornaments

Figurines, antique or modern, graceful or grotesque, lend the finishing touch of livability that make the room a success.

"Mantels, of course," says January House Beautiful, "are the obvious place for figurines, but there are other places, too. A table in an otherwise uninteresting corner. Shelves in a secretary. The provocative spaces in a modern bookcase. End tables. The top of bookshelves. And, with greater frequency, on dining tables. Figurines for table decoration are becoming increasingly important. There are little birds, for istance, to arrange around a mirror plaque. There are white porcelain figures, intended to be used with low square flower containers. You may even take the figurines from your mantel or your bookshelf and create a table arrangement that will not only be charming but completely original."

Plant Containers Varied.

The new plant containers are made in a variety of shapes. Dogs, elephants and other animals are simulated, with plants seemingly growing out of their backs. A group of cacti, or succulents, will make an attractive planting for these ornaments. Other containers are made as book-ends, wall vases, horns of plenty, indeed almost anything you could imagine.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Cirrhosis—Hardening of the Liver.

The liver is the largest organ in the body and most of us have pretty definite ideas as to the demands for its secretion [bile], which is used in the general scheme of digestion. It is subject to diseases, however, just as is any other region, and must, therefore, be protected from abuse, overload and injuries. It is essential to life, as without it death would occur within a day or two. It is richly supplied with blood, and food materials absorbed from the digestive tract—except the portion which enters a special lymph channel [the thoracic duct]—pass through it.

There are many reasons for believing that it helps to filter out poisons from the blood and we know that it plays an important role in the utilization of proteins, starches and sugars. Whenever the blood needs sugar, and that substance is not adequate in the diet, a supply may be obtained from the storehouse in the liver. In fact, from 12 to 15 per cent of the total weight of the organ is a form of carbohydate called glycogen.

One serious disease which must be avoided because it cannot be cured is called atrophic cirrhosis, or hardening of the liver. It is characterized by a marked increase in connective tissue which really has no function or value except to fill in space. However, if it replaces liver cells it means that the organ is that much less efficient. This fibrous material, which is deposited in larger amounts as the disease progresses, results in a hardened, shrunken structure. Various toxins, poisons and infections can destroy needed liver elements, replacing them with this useless filling tissue.

One of the causes is the abuse of alcohol. There is no positive experimental evidence that alcohol is alone responsible, but the disease is usually associated with the excessive employment of this chemical and comes about—so it is believed—because of the presence of some adulterating substance which may contaminate liquors. Another theory is that the drug [alcohol] may be responsible for the formation of toxins of digestive tract origin. At any rate, we cannot overlook the fact that about 50 per cent of all cirrhosis victims have been heavy users of alcohol. Against this presumed origin is the fact that it is found even among Mohammedans and Chinese, who are abstainers.

Of almost equal consequence is syphilis, and in various series of cases this cause has been ascribed to as high as 71 per cent. Other figures indicate that but 25 per cent can be laid on the doorstep of this parasitic disease.

As a rule, atrophic cirrhosis is an ailment of middle age. At first the symptoms resemble those of dyspepsia, with early morning vomiting, gas, and diarrhea. The liver itself is large and tender in the beginning. Jaundice is rare, though it may appear as a fleeting symptom.

The way to safeguard the liver and to protect it against assault is not to take into the digestive tract any substance likely to poison the organ. It is only after the products of digestion have passed the "sieve" of the liver that they are allowed to enter the blood.

Too Attentive Parents Cause Child to Become Weakling

Mothers and Fathers Should Not Foist Too Much Companionship on Offspring; Is Blow to Later Self-Reliance.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. X congratulated herself on being very close to her children. "I know all that they do and think and say. They had rather be with me than with anyone else, and will gladly turn down an expedition with a friend to go out with me. I never question them. They tell me everything because they want to."

But the time came when the X children began to go out into the world Camps, boarding schools, college, jobs, all required a certain independence of home and mother. They were wretchedly homesick, all these model children; could not make friends, and found girls and boys of their own age boring and immature.

In school and camp they quite naturally clung to teachers and councillors, refusing to mix with their own kind and join in their interests.

In college it was much the same. They did well in an academic way, but missed the group activities and social life entirely. They had trouble finding jobs because they lacked initiative.

Their mother, meanwhile, was no better off. Without the children to keep her young and interested, she grew bored and aged very rapidly. She had no hobbies, had lost her friends, was out of touch with her husband.

Children are birds of passage. They are in the home for only a few years, and during those years must be made ready to live their own lives. The mother bird knows that fledglings must fly. Even while tending them faithfully, she is getting them ready for departure. In the end she will, if necessary, push them out of the nest. To make a child dependent on his home is like clipping wings of a bird of passage.

Priceless original Chinese Embroideries on compacts and cigarette cases

Every one of these embroidered tops is a certified Chinese original—at least 100 years old. They are cut from colorful, hand-made plaques created in the era of the wealthy Manchu Dynasty, and handed down through generations. The past decade has nearly exhausted the supply of these treasures, and each year sees them growing scarcer and dearer. Every one in our collection is remarkably well preserved. There are no two alike and all are priceless, since they cannot be duplicated.

One-House Unit Opens Session In Nebraska

Senator Norris Addresses Unicameral Legislature He Sponsored.

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 5.—Nebraska's new one-house legislative machine sped into action today, perfecting a permanent organization at a harmonious four-hour opening session.

Lieut. Gov. Walter H. Jurgensen, presiding officer, called the Nation's first unicameral lawmaking body into session. Spectators overflowed from the galleries to the floor.

"From now on," United States Senator George W. Norris, sponsor of the one-house plan, told the 43 members elected on a non-partisan basis, "Nebraska has a right to expect a business-like administration."

Charles Warner, a veteran of 25 years in Nebraska Legislatures, following his election as speaker, cautioned that "an efficient Legislature" did not necessarily mean "speed in converting bills into law."

The first day's efforts of the single house brought optimistic comment from leading members tonight.

Warner said "it appeared to hold a favorable tinge for the future. All was done in an orderly way."

Lieut. Gov. Jurgensen said he was "pleased with the way we perfected our first permanent organization."

France Nominates Mild Family Man New Executioner

Paris, Jan. 5 (AP).—A sedate family man, Andre Obrecht by name, mechanic by trade and musician by preference, has been picked to become France's official executioner—master of the guillotin.

His uncle, Antol Deibler, retiring from the state service after nearly half a century as headsman, nominated Obrecht as his successor to the gruesome but lucrative position.

As such, Obrecht will perform executions throughout France, traveling with his keen-bladed instrument into all corners of the country, and withdrawing, when not on official business, into the complete seclusion that is a part of the job.

Deibler, in his seventieth year and tired of his task, sent his notice of retirement to Minister of Justice Marc Rucart in December, asking that it become effective early in 1937. Traditionally, Deibler, who inherited the post from his father, was empowered to name his successor. And Obrecht's nomination accompanied his uncle's request for retirement.

Obrecht had assisted his uncle on several occasions. He was reported to have practiced with Diebler's instruments in chopping off the ends of straw bundles until his proficiency received his uncle's professional approval.

Labor Unit Scores Wagner Act Attack By Liberty League

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Relations Board yesterday termed an American Liberty League opinion that the Wagner labor disputes act was unconstitutional, "a deliberate and concerted effort by a large group of well-known lawyers to undermine public confidence in the statute."

In its first annual report to Congress, the board called the opinion, drafted more than a year ago, an effort "to discourage compliance" with the act, "to assist attorneys generally in attacks on the statute and perhaps to influence the courts."

Immediately after the opinion was made public, the board said, a long string of suits to test the act's constitutionality was started.

British 'Flu' Rages; Sailors Are Warned

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—British naval authorities, indicating concern lest influenza, widespread in England, strike hard within the British fleet, issued a warning tonight to all sailors on shore leave to avoid crowds.

The disease has spread more rapidly than any which has hit England in recent years, becoming general within two weeks.

Thus far it has caused comparatively few deaths.

Of the 24,000 government postal workers, 5,000 have reported themselves stricken with the "flu" in the last week. Some hospitals have been pressed because of the large number of cases.

Hawaii-Australia Air Travel Called 'Near' by Official

The Hawaiian Islands to Australia by air.

That possibility was discussed yesterday by Rex Martin, assistant director of air commerce in charge of air nevigation, at a luncheon of the Civitan Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

Martin showed movies of a survey made by the Government in the South Seas, and said that a hookup between the islands and "Down Under" was feasible but not practical at this time. He expressed the opinion, however, that such a dream would be realized within a few years, and paid tribute to the Government for contributing to what he hoped would be its realization.

Movies also were shown of a trans-continental flight, demonstrating the facilities the Government furnishes for the furtherance of safety in air travel. E. Barrett Prettyman presided.

New Orleans, Jan. 5 (AP).—Walter C. Wright, 77, founder and publisher of the Lumber Trade Journal, died today. He retired in 1931 when the Journal was merged with the Southern Lumberman, of Nashville.

Southern Petition Studied by I. C. C.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission said yesterday it was giving "due consideration" to the petitions of southern State regulatory commissions and shipping interests for an investigation of class rates in southern territory.

The present class rates, the commission said in its annual report, to which railroad carriers have related certain commodity rates by percentage columns, are the result of I. C. C. decisions in the southern class rate investigation initiated in 1922.

"Petitioners aver," the report stated, "that the class rates are based on a record made during the years when economic conditions were unusual and when the country was enjoying a period of prosperity far different from anything that has existed since the rates became effective.

"They allege that the rates assailed are unjust and unreasonable, injuring not only the shippers but also the southern railroads, and pray that upon the investigation sought we issue an order requiring the establishment of just and reasonable rates on this traffic."

A. A. U. Head Wars On Tammany Chief

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Dissatisfied with present conditions, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the National Amateur Athletic Union and Democratic leader of New York's silk-stocking district, brought out into the open today a move to oust James J. Dooling as leader of Tammany Hall.

In a surprise step similar to those in his fight with Avery Brundage over A. A. U. leadership, Mahoney made public a letter to Tammany leaders demanding a meeting of the executive committee at once "to put our organization in shape for the important campaign that will be with us next fall."

Postmaster General James A. Farley, speaking as national and State chairman, said yesterday he would remain neutral in the Tammany fight. It is known, however, that he and Dooling have been at odds for some time.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Allantoin

Representative Fred Biermann, of Iowa, is back in town for the opening of Congress, more hale and hearty than ever, and therein hangs a tale of Biermann, a Department of Agriculture scientist and a remarkable chemical known as allantoin.

Biermann had been ill for more than ten years. He limped about on crutches. His doctors tried every cure known in vain. Then a year ago last summer, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace heard of the Iowa representative's plight.

"Say, there's a man over at the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine who's just made a remarkable discovery on how to heal wounds," exclaimed Wallace. "He may have just the thing."

The Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine man was a Dr. William Robinson, who for some time had been pondering the question of why fly maggots heal wounds. Maggots were known to eat the dead tissue, but it was also believed they contributed to the growth of new flesh by their secretion. After considerable experimentation Robinson discovered that the maggot secretion consisted principally of allantoin. He tried the chemical alone. It worked as well as the maggots themselves.

Biermann's doctor agreed to try the allantoin—after everything else had failed. Within a few months the Iowa representative had thrown away his crutches, his ulcers healed!

Allantoin is being used extensively and is being prepared in a number of ways. Dr. Robinson showed us allantoin in the form of an easily dissolved powder, as a lubricating paste in a tube (used by doctors to grease their instruments in maternity cases), as an ordinary skin cream which is rubbed over the back of our hand and diluted in a liquid solution. Robinson poured us out a small cupful and suggested we sip some and "run it across your teeth," which we did.

"Swallow it," he then suggested, gulping his cupful down. With some misgivings we did and (we haven't been able to get over this yet), nothing happened.

Rules and the Men

The Spanish civil war is in its, we don't know what month, and maybe it's time your Diaryist got around to telling a story about it. Louis Inwood, assistant director of the air mail section of the Interstate Commerce Commission, told us the story—it concerns the American aviators, free-lancing with Gen. Franco's rebel army—and vows it actually happened.

You may recall that when Madrid was first bombarded the aviators dropped their steel eggs on the depopulated outskirts of the city. It seems that before going aloft the free-lancers had gotten together and agreed to "a few rules of civilizing warfare," one of which was not to bomb the center of the city.

When Gen. Franco was informed that the planes hadn't bombarded the heart of Madrid as ordered he naturally asked why.

"It's the rules," replied the free-lancers.

"Will you take $500 apiece to break those rules?" Franco asked. They would and did.

Now that another Congress is about to come to grips with momentous issues of State—at least that's the way the headlines go—the Diary ought to have one little Congressional note. The Senate is expected to go through the session with a single ivory gavel, but the House had two dozen wooden gavels made especially for this session.

Sick Leave

Those who contend that employes abuse their sick leave privileges should read the section on that subject in the anual report of Dr. W. W. Stockberger, Agriculture's personnel director.

During the calendar year of 1934 for which statistics have been compiled, Stockberger shows that the average sick leave taken by Washington employes was 7.5 days. Only 3.9 per cent of the workers took the maximum amount of sick leave allowable, 30 days, while 1,126 of 6,785 employes didn't take a single day sick leave.

Employment of a full-time medical officer and an adequate nursing staff at the Department of Agriculture is recommended by Stockberger.

Cavalry to Resume Riding Exhibitions

Fort Myer's famous "Friday rides," exhibition drills given by the Third Cavalry, will be resumed for the season in the riding hall, beginning January 15, at 2:45 p. m., Col. J. M. Wainwright, commanding officer, announced last night.

Familiar to thousands of Washingtonians, the drills held on Friday afternoons during the winter, demonstrate the high degree of training reached by men of the Third Cavalry and the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

The drills are free to the public, but admission is by tickets only. Tickets can be obtained without cost by calling or sending a letter to the Fort.

Parade Limit Set at 2 Hrs. For Inaugural

Hotel Space Still Ample; 'Short' Drills Slated; More Seats Planned.

New High in Pageantry and Color Promised by Adm. Grayson.

The coming Inaugural parade will be limited strictly to two hours' marching time, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman of arrangements, announced yesterday.

And at the same time, Senator M. M. Neely, chairman of a committee completing Congressional plans, said additional seating space will be provided for the induction ceremonies on Capitol Hill.

Senator Neely said he had conferred with David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, and it has been agreed to construct more seats in front of the Inaugural stand. Although he did not estimate the number of additional spaces, original plans called for seating approximately 12,000 persons.

"New High in Pageantry."

Admiral Grayson predicted yesterday that the Inaugural parade January 20 would "strike a new high in pageantry, color and performance." Hardened soldiers and sailors, he said, will brave inclement weather—if such is the case—to present spectators with "short and snappy" display of military formation.

There are at present plenty of hotel accomodations for Inaugural visitors, the housing and hospitality committee, headed by Edgar Morris, reported last night. At a meeting in the Washington Board of Trade offices, L. Gardiner Moore, president of the Washington Hotel Association, told the committee that several hundred rooms are still available.

Anticipating large crowds, however, Morris said several thousand additional rooms will be listed with the housing bureau in the Willard Hotel for those who can't find space.

Limited to Two Hours.

In his decision to limit the Inaugural parade to two hours, Chairman Grayson said he wished to place no additional strain on President Roosevelt or the thousands who are expected to line Pennsylvania avenue.

The parade will be headed by Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, as Grand Marshal. With him will be his staff—Brig. Gen. C. D. Roberts, Capt. C. B. Lee and a member of every military unit represented in the line of march.

The first division will consist of State Governors, headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley. They will ride in gaily bedecked autos and will be the only civilian group in the parade. Their cars will be interspersed with visiting service bands.

Maj. Gen. A. J. Bowly, U. S. A., will head the second division, of West Point cadets. Behind them will come the Navy Band. Several military units will follow, and then more service bands.

Crack Riders Promised.

The Naval Academy midshipmen will be flanked front and rear by Naval musicians. Fort Myer will send its Third Cavalrymen, crack horsemen and trained exhibition riders.

John Littlepage, vice chairman.
Railroads—B. R. Tolson, chairman; Edward Plack, Alan B. Smith, Daniel L. Moorman, O. N. Spain, Frank L. Jenkins, P. E. Masi, C. T. Stewart, W. H. Marks, C. W. Owings.
Air transportation—Samuel J. Solomon, chairman; Herbert D. Ford, William B. Briggs, J. J. O'Donovan.
Water transportation—Clarence F. Norment, jr., chairman; J. Allen Riordon, W. H. Callahan, I. S. Walker, Harry Baker.
Traffic regulation—William A. Van Duser, chairman; Capt. Milton D. Smith, Inspector B. A. Lamb, George E. Keneipp, Richard A. Ham, M. O. Eldridge.
Private automobiles—Oscar W. Colclcah, chairman; Lee D. Butler, W. I. Cleveland, F. M. Cunningham, Alf Farrandou, George E. Keneipp, Raymond J. Walter, J. B. Woodside.
Interstate buses—L. C. Major, chairman; Alex Koplin, Vincent A. McGarry, Inspector B. A. Lamb, John M. Melchen.

Chairman Grayson also announced that Maj. Ernest W. Brown would serve as a member of the parade committee, of which Gen. C. D. Roberts is chairman.

Fire Turns Tables, Goes to Firehouse To Get 'All Put Out'

Firemen of No. 1 Engine Co. were astonished yesterday when a man walked into the station and asked would they come outside to extinquish a fire for him.

Slightly dubious, the smoke eaters went without. To their surprise a truck was parked in the drive way very much ablaze. The flame was put out promptly.

The truck, owned by the District Refuse Department, was loaded with trash. E. A. Dove, driver, said he noticed the blaze while across the street from the firehouse and drove in.

Hoovers Sent Invitation To Roosevelt Inaugural

Former President Hoover and Mrs. Hoover were invited last night to attend the Inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Senator M. M. Neely, chairman of the Inaugural Committee, sent the following telegram to Mr. Hoover at Palo Alto:

"On behalf of the Inaugural Committee I have the honor to extend to you, as the only living ex-President, and to Mrs. Hoover a most cordial invitation to attend the Inaugural of President Roosevelt at noon on January 20."

Soko, Chimpanzee Who Pleased Thousands, Dies in His Sleep

Harris & Ewing.

Soko, the Zoo's aged chimpanzee, who died yesterday.

Oldest Anthropoid in Captivity Mourned by Zoo's Director and Keepers Who Had Watched Over Him for Years.

Pleasantly and without pain, death came yesterday to Soko, the chimpanzee, who was the most widely known inhabitant of National Zoological Park.

Director William M. Mann and Head Keeper William H. Blackburne mourn his passing and so will thousands of men, women and children scattered over the world when they learn that the oldest anthropoid ape in captivity is no more.

For Soko was the delight of all visitors, old and young, who included the Zoo in their Washington itinerary. A first-class showman who brought laughter with his trapeze art, his nose thumbing and his face contortions, he was a favorite of Presidents, of such celebrities as Helen Hayes, Neysa McMein, Alexander Woollcott and Noel Coward, as well as just plain folks.

Evidently the grizzled veteran died in his sleep. About 25 years old, which would correspond to 70 to 80 years in a human being, Soko has been failing badly the last few months.

"For the last three weeks," said Dr. Mann, "he did little else but sleep. In that period, if not longer, he gave no exhibitions."

"Exhibitions" meant swinging from his horizontal bar, sticking out his tongue at disrespectful youngsters, swinging a cloth as though he were flagging a train or performing any of the thousand and one other tricks in his repertoire.

Soko's exact age was not known exactly, but Dr. Mann and Blackburne believe he was about 2½ years old when he arrived here 22 years ago. He was a native of West Africa, captured in infancy and peddled to Washington's Zoo by an animal dealer.

Though he probably held most of his "public" in contempt, possibly performing for them for his own amusement rather than theirs, Soko could be genuinely affectionate. His best friend was the elderly Blackburne, who was his nurse, instructor, disciplinarian, physician and dietitian.

The baby Soko was taught by the head keeper to sit at a dining table, handle knife and fork, scribble with a pencil and perform other stunts. Then one day the chimpanzee, realizing he was reaching maturity, smashed all his paraphernalia.

"Chimps get that way when they leave the childhood stage," explained Dr. Mann.

In all probability Soko's brain will go to pathologists at Johns Hopkins University for experimental use. His carcass will be turned over to Smithsonian Institution taxidermists for preservation.

To the tens of thousands of his admirers will be left only memories of a quizzical ape who made them laugh their troubles away.

Recognition Asked By Minority Groups

Progressives and Farmer-Laborites in the House of Representatives joined forces yesterday in a bid for equal recognition with Republicans as a minority party.

At the same time they proposed a political realignment which leaders hoped would be a powerful factor by the 1940 elections.

"We take our stand for progress, for peace, for plenty, and we wish to join hands with all those who are going our way," said a statement issued by Representative Schneider (Progressive), of Wisconsin, the group's unsuccesful candidate for House Speaker.

Their strength increased from 10 to 13 in this fall's elections, the Progressive and Farmer-Labor Representatives called upon Speaker Bankhead for as many major committee assignments, in proportion to their numbers, as given the 89 Republicans.

In a letter to Bankhead, Representative Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, the group's floor leader, contended it was "only reasonable that we be given the same consideration that is accorded to another minority party."

P. U. C. Grants Right to Buy One-Man Cars

Capital Transit Given Approval to Purchase 45 Vehicles.

Action Follows Suit Filed by Citizens and Labor Groups for Ban.

Application of the Capital Transit Co. for authority to purchase 45 new one-man street cars was approved "in the public interest" yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

In granting authority for the purchase, the commission specified the new cars should be of the streamline, President's conference type, similar in design to 20 placed in operation here in 1935.

As part of its $2,700,000 replacement program, the transit company applied for purchase authority on December 24. At that time legal action was—and is still—pending in District Court seeking reversal of a recent P. U. C. order permitting the operation of additional one-man street cars in Washington.

Suit Is Disregarded.

On December 16, the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Central Labor Union filed an apepal from the commission's one-man car order, charging the Transit Company with "false representations" in its promise that "no trainman would be discharged or forced to leave the service." The appeal brief contended that continued operation of one-man cars would not only inconvenience District residents, but force men from work.

In approving the recent purchase application, however, the Public Utilities Commission said:

"The commission is of the opinion that approval of the application of the Capital Transit Co., of December 24, 1936, would be in the public interest."

John Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Co., said yesterday the purchase order would be placed immediately and the 45 new cars would appear on Washington streets early in June.

At present, he said, 91 one-man cars are operating in the District. With the additional purchases, it is planned to retire an equal number of the oldest and least desirable cars, he added.

The 45 new cars wil be used to equip the base schedule of the Fourteenth street line, it was reported. Replacement of cars now running on this line, company officials said, will increase service efficiency and riding comfort.

The company proposes to finance the new purchase by payment of 25 per cent upon delivery of the cars and the balance over a 5-year period. The cost was estimated at $720,000.

Dismisses Controversy.

In its approval order yesterday, the P. U. C. dismissed pending controversy over the one-man car question with the observation:

"The subject of one-man street cars was considered at a formal hearing before the commission in July, 1936, and an order approving operation as one-man cars of 20 cars of similar type was subsequently issued."

In the citizens-labor union appeal brief, 14 specific charges against the commission's order were cited. Although the P. U. C. held—after last summer's hearings—that the financial condition of the transit company, together with evidence as to safety and speed of the one-man cars, made approval of the operation petition imperative, the court action seeks to render the order inoperative until final adjudication of the appeal.

The commission's approval order yesterday is expected to renew the long-standing battle with intensive efforts to press pending legal action.

Universe Is Expanding Cosmos, Or Mature One, New Data Infers

Definite Conclusion Awaits Construction of Even Larger Telescope Than Reflector in Mt. Wilson Observatory, Dr. Hubble Tells Capital Group.

The universe that our world moves in is either a small, rapidly growing cosmos or an indefinitely large one which has practically completed its growth, Dr. Edwin Hubble of the Mount Wilson Observatory astronomical staff indicated in a lecture at the Carnegie Institution last night.

Warning that such conclusions are tentative, Dr. Hubble said that recent explorations with the Mount Wilson Observatory giant telescope justified a provisional attempt to infer the nature of the physical universe from the observed characteristics of the sample.

(The Wilson Observatory telescope is the largest in operation. Its 100-inch reflector has enabled surveys to be made out to a distance of about 400,000,000 light-years. If put into miles, which no sane person would do, the figures used to express this distance would probably fill an entire newspaper column. You can figure this out yourself. A light-year is the distance that light travels in any given year. Light has a speed of 186,384 miles a second.)

Red Shifts Unexplained.

The reason that scientists aren't certain whether the universe is large or comparatively small is due to their inability to explain whether red-shifts in the spectra of nebulae are caused by expansion or by some unknown principle of nature which does not involve actual motion.

These red-shifts it appears, affect the apparent brightness of nebulae and thus distort their estimated distance from the earth.

If the red-shifts are caused by what Dr. Hubble constantly referred to as "an unknown principle of nature" the nebulae are shown to be distributed in a sensible uniform fashion. Since the observable region is homogeneous, the speaker insisted, the universe must be vastly larger than the sample that we know.

"A Unique Position."

On the other hand, if the red-shifts measure expansion our own stellar system would be left in "a unique position," Dr. Hubble reasoned.

Saying that "the notion of a unique position is as unwelcome as the earlier notion of a central earth," the Mount Wilson astronomer said that the theory of homogeneous expanding universes offered spatial curvature as a compensating feature.

"The necessary inference," he said, "is that the universe is finite and very small. In fact, the present radius of a spatial curvature would be just less than the penetrating power of the 100-inch telescope."

Summing up all the evidence, Dr. Hubble gave his opinion that the probabilities seem to favor the greater universe. But, he warned, a definite choice between the two must await better methods or still more powerful telescopes.

Citizens' Group Thanks Mellon For Art Gallery

Southeast Association Will Send Letter Expressing Appreciation.

Members of the Southeast Citizens Association, in session at the Hine Junior High School last night, voted unanimously to send a letter of thanks to former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon for the $50,000,000 art gallery he is giving to the Capital.

Plans were made for the decoration of Southeast Washington for Inauguration.

Named to the special committee in charge of these plans were Mrs. Emma Bright, Mrs. Milton Prosperi, Mrs. D. M. Kennedy, Mrs. Ada Minnix, Mrs. Alys Thume, Bernard Ladd and Louis Prick.

The group went on record as seeking a new, modern receiving home for the District and favoring the construction at the end of East Capitol street, to be known as the Jefferson Memorial Stadium.

Columbia Heights.

Approval of a proposed bill to create a Potomac Valley Authority for the improvement of waterways, transportation and power facilities was registered last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, meeting at the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

The citizens also went on record as favoring a one-man government for the District to replace the present three-man system. They asked that the Board of Education be elected by the people and that the District be given representation in Congress.

Another resolution adopted demanded shorter hours and increased pay for guards at the District Jail. The association advocated that the police department be granted additional funds to enable it to run its own repair shop.

Capt. Rhoda J. Mhoda J. Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau, gave a brief address at the meeting.

North Cleveland Park.

The North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution asking President Roosevelt to appoint a man to fill the office of people's counsel as soon as possible.

The association heard a talk on fiscal relations, given by L. A. Carruthers, and another on national representation, delivered by James Yaden.

E. L. Davis to Tell Of F.T.C. Functions

Functions and powers of the Federal Trade Commission will be explained to the Young Democrats tonight at the Willard Hotel by Ewin L. Davis, a commission member.

Officers elected recently will assume their duties at this meeting. They are: Royce L. Givens, president; Charles L. Hanowell, vice president; Alfred Kurtz, treasurer; Doris H. Smyth, recording secretary; Agnes H. Hinds, corresponding secretary, and James L. Bailey, sergeant-at-arms.

A. A. A. Offers Special Autos In Safety Work

Will Provide Dual Control Cars to School Board for Classes.

Dual control automobiles to teach boys and girls safe driving will be introduced to Washington if the Board of Education approves a plan proposed by the American Automobile Association.

The A. A. A. wants to organize a high school course for teaching safety, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said yesterday he expects to bring the matter before the school heads at their next meeting this afternoon.

If the plan is approved, A. A. A. will furnish the dual control cars. They would be painted in distinctive colors and their use would be restricted to specified streets.

In addition to the special cars, which would serve as "laboratory" equipment for the course, A. A. A. is ready to furnish textbooks on "Sportsmanlike Driving." There would be full credit given for the course.

Another course in safety training also is suggested by the association. This would be offered in the teachers' colleges here.

These special classes, according to Richard W. Ham, safety director of the District Club, are to be part of the organization's drive to reduce traffic hazards. Through the school boy patrol, traffic deaths among school children already have been reduced 88 per cent, Ham said. The new plan, he hopes, will make the educational safety program more effective.

Dr. Ballou today also will bring to the board his version on a recent Civil Service Commission statement criticizing the board for its policy on married teachers whose husbands have jobs with the Government.

Following enactment of the economy act, many teachers resigned fearing that holding their school positions would imperil their husbands' Federal jobs. The commission on May 12, 1924, ruled that section 213 (dealing with married workers) did not apply to District employes. Since then the Board of Education has been reinstating married teachers who resigned on condition that they get from the Federal agency concerned a statement that it planned no reduction in personnel, and that reinstatement of the teacher would not affect the husband's status.

Rental Board Bill's Backer To Drop Plan

Ellenbogen Says He Will Support Measure if One Is Offered.

Mrs. Norton to Sponsor Racing Proposal for District.

Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who fought a long losing battle to set up a District rent commission last year, will not reintroduce the bill, he said yesterday, despite the absence of Thomas L. Blanton, who led the attack.

"I stood the gaff for the members last session," he said, "and I think I did my part to bring rents down. Now, if the members want something done they'll have to get another champion. I'll help, however, if a bill is introduced."

Ellenbogen plans to sponsor a measure for the liberalization of the District unemployment compensation act, he said, but he has not worked out the details yet.

One aim will be to increase the payment by the District government, which was $135,000 in the current appropriations act and is $175,000 in the 1938 budget.

Might Cut Relief Cost.

The Pennsylvanian, who is a member of the House District Committee, said that by broadening provisions of the unemployment insurance act the District may be able to reduce its appropriations for direct relief of unemployment.

Although no meetings of the Senate and House District committees will be held until a half dozen vacancies are filled, members are already beginning to forecast local legislation.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, stated that he will modify his bill to authorize Sunday liquor sales by confining it to extending the Saturday night closing hour from midnight until 2 a. m. Sunday.

Because of the opposition to Sunday afternoon traffic in spirits, he will delete the portion of the bill which would have kept bars open from 1 p. m. until midnight Sundays.

Dirksen also plans to draft a measure to authorize the sale of liquor by the drink for consumption at lunch counters. Such sales are now limited to light wines and beer.

Chairman Mary T. Norton announced her intention of backing a District racing bill again, but added that she may permit a male member of the committee to introduce the measure.

Offers Detective Bill.

While awaiting recommendations from the District Commissioners on major local legislation, Mrs. Norton introduced yesterday a hold-over bill to establish two classes of detectives in the Metropolitan Police Department. The measure, favored by Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, would permit the assignment of precinct detectives to the Detective Bureau without promotion to rank of sergeant as at present.

Representative Kent Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, disclosed his willingness to accept an assignment on the District Committee, providing he does not get a place on the Rivers and Harbors Committee.

A stanch foe of the "red rider," Keller is understood to have the support of Washington Public School teachers because of his defense of their records last year.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, stated that he will reintroduce a companion bill to the Kennedy measure calling for repeal of the "red rider," but it is expected that the Senate will give the House an opportunity to act first.

Bank Deposits Here Largest In D. C. History

Total on December 31 Was $334,075,890; Sharp Gain in 6 Months.

Deposits in the 22 Washington banks, as of December 31, reached their highest point in history, with a total of $334,075,890, which compares with $306,413,740 on June 30 last year, a gain of $27,662,149 in six months.

The figures followed a call issued yesterday by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor for all banks in the District and all banks in the United States.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation also issued a call for condition on the last day of 1936. The FDIC call affects 7,700 insured banks not members of the Federal Reserve System. The call by the Comptroller of the Currency covers 5,400 national banks. The Federal Reserve Board is expected to issue a call covering member State banks.

Deposits in the individual Washington banks on December 31 were:

The Market

Steel, Motor and Amusement Stocks Rally in More Active Trading; Wheat Breaks.

New York, Jan. 5.—Stocks rallied in more active trading, the turnover coming to about 2,000,000 shares, but U. S. bonds continued heavy and commodities were shaken by a break in wheat. It seemed to be a case of improvement in stocks in spite of head shaking by the doctors.

Frowns from the day's news met the securities markets, but face value was not given by traders. Either the markets had a surplus of bad news or those who had sold in anticipation of a decline were satisfied with the advantage gained. Whether short covering or new purchasing, a good rally took place. Opening prices were generally higher and for a while in the first hour the market was fast enough to leave the ticker behind in its reporting job—not an especially difficult performance.

From then on the tendency for prices was to burden gradually. As if the deadlock in the labor disputes which now are crippling the automotive industry and the more threatening tone of the war news from Europe were not enough to discourage the markets, the convening of Congress added its bit. Under the circumstances it is difficult to guess just why the markets should look cheerful. For one thing it may be that, so firmly held is the idea of business recovery, that the Government is counted upon to let nothing happen which will seriously impede progress—as an extension of the labor difficulties undoubtedly would do.

Public opinion soon can end strikes. Strikes are somewhat like wars—the winner is also the loser. Spanish developments go deeper. Outbreak of fighting among the principal nations on the Spanish issue would be a real calamity for American business and markets, and the effects would be felt all the sooner for the threatened neutrality legislation. Barring a European war, the markets have less reason to fear Congress than they did a year ago, for each mile nearer full business recovery makes disruptive legislation more unlikely.

Treasury Rate.

Further weaknesses in United States Government bonds was accompanied by a higher rate paid by the Treasury on its current bill offering. The plan to cut down excess reserves and sterilization of gold, while they are measures taken to check a possible credit inflation, may cost the Government something. No rise of consequence in money rates likely will be permitted, if it can be helped, but banks with rising commercial business have not the old urge to rush headlong into any sort of Treasury issue. Foreign exchanges were strong, the war news apparently having less effect than exchange controls, and possibly our industrial troubles are discouraging a certain amount of foreign investment.

Commodity markets were unsettled, in sharp contrast to the rallying tendency of stocks. Grains were especially weak. May wheat broke to close 2⅞ cents lower at $1,32⅞ cents a bushel.

For the first time in the last four trading sessions, the Sun's index of industrial share prices was higher on closing quotations. Steel and motor stocks led the recovery. Several steels rose 1 to 2 points. Motor gains reached 3 points, with Chrysler and General Motors favored. Rails also did better, but most changes in the group were fractional.

Oil shares were less active, but prices held firm. Seaboard was well liked. Buoyancy struck the amusement group. Paramount's rushed ahead on large turnover, the preferred climbing 8 points. Firmness was the rule for silvers, foods, mail orders and other store shares. Coppers weakened a shade on hesitation abroad. Utilities kept in the background.

Individual stocks to attract attention, aside from Sloss-Sheffield, which squirted up more than a dozen points, were duPont, Allied Chemical, American Can, Wilson, Armour, Canada Dry, Cluett Peabody, Consolidation Coal, Pacific Coast and Eastern Rolling Mills.

Conservatism.

The Chemical Bank & Trust Co., which has the distinction of an uninterrupted dividend record since 1827 and is now entering its 114th year, has the distinction of being the most noteworthy example in town of a bank which carried its banking houses at nominal value. After writing off the buildings at the rate of $25,000 monthly for many years, the Chemical has them down to a valuation of $1. Their assessed valuation is $1,115,000. The monthly saving will come in handy to create reserves for other things—for instance, deposit insurance on larger deposits and for social security. Federal Reserve member banks are now exempt from social security assessments, but many are creating reserves in the belief that exemption may not last long.

Bureaucracy.

The Securities and Exchange Commission is maintaining its independence in prescribing an optional abbreviated form of annual report for railroads. This may be good for the self-esteem of the commission, but it is bad news for railroad investors to whom the railroad reports filed with the I. C. C. are not conveniently available. The SEC gives the railroads the choice of filing a complete copy of the I. C. C. report or a copy with many schedules omitted. This is no labor-saving device, for most roads print their I. C. C. reports by quantity production methods. The result of the SEC policy is only that the roads which wish to make it as difficult as possible for investors to find the facts (as any do) will go to the special pains of preparing an abbreviated report for filing with the stock exchange and the SEC. Protests lodged with the SEC last year have had no effect.

Wheat Slumps In Prospect of Heavy Imports

Corn and Oats Also Give Way After Reaching New Peaks.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Prospective big shipments from the Southern Hemisphere, Argentina in particular, led today to 3¼ cents a bushel collapse of prices for wheat.

Platinum Held Cheap In Relation to Gold

New York, Jan. 5.—In a circular letter which they are sending out, Alexander Eisemann & Co. cite reasons for the investment or speculative interest which has recently developed in platinum. The firm, which initiated the sale in this country of certificates of deposit for platinum, states that, in the first instance, platinum, a "free" commodity, constitutes a hedge against possible inflation.

Secondly, "platinum is cheap in relation to gold and is currently selling at only the approximate average price of the past quarter century with gold valued at its old price of $20.67 per ounce. As gold is now $35 an ounce, it is clear," according to L. H. Klybert, the firm's statistician, "that platinum is well below its 25-year average price."

Food Imports In Past 4 Years Exceed Exports

Reversal of Situation Existing for Over Half Century.

New York, Jan. 5.—Imports of manufactured foodstuffs have exceeded exports in each year since 1932 and the imporant surplus has been increasing each year. This marks a complete reversal of the situation that had previously existed for over half a century. From 1875 to 1931, with the single exception of the year 1920, the United States exported more manufactured foodstuffs each year than it purchased from abroad.

This development and the marked increase in recent years in the percentage excess of imports of crude foodstuffs over exports are the most striking changes that have taken place in the balance between American exports and imports in the past decade, according to a study made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The recent development of an import surplus of manufactured foodstuffs has been due chiefly to a pronounced decline in exports of this type of product. In the seven-year period, 1925-31, annual exports averaged $442,805,000, and imports averaged $378,110,000. From 1932 to 1935, however, exports averaged only $157,911,000, while average imports amounted to $236,875,000.

While exports of manufactured foodstuffs have remained practically stationary since 1932, imports have increased each year, rising from $173,927,000 in 1932 to $318,826,000 in 1935. For the first ten months of 1936 exports totaled $124,964,000 and imports $322,829,000, indicating a continuance of the upward trend.

Steel Operations Rise to 79.4 Per Cent

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 2.4 points to 79.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 77.0 last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. The operating rate was the highest since the first week in March, 1930, when the figure was 80.0 per cent.

A month ago operations averaged 76.6 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 49.2 per cent.

Business Failures.

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the five-day week ended December 31 numbered 173 compared with 162 in the five-day period preceding and 206 last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported. Total failures in 1936 were 9,185, the smallest number for any year since 1920, when 8,881 were recorded.

B. & O. Carloadings Gain 17.3% in Year

With a total of 2,439,431 cars loaded during 1936 the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad showed an increase of 360,036 loads, or 17.3 per cent, over 1935. The 1936 total includes 1,610,049 cars loaded on line and 829,382 received from connections. The total for 1935 was 2,079,395, made up of 1,376,519 cars loaded on line and 702,876 received from connections.

For December, total car loads were 213,718, comprising 142,715 cars loaded on line and 71,003 received from connections. This was an increase of 49,218 over the total for December, 1935.

LIBERAL INCOME or STABILITY?

Investors who seek liberal income may be misled by exceptionally large dividend disbursements made in 1936 because of the new Federal tax on undistributed profits.

In making investment recommendations to clients, this firm emphasizes stability of dividend payments. A temporary increase of income may mean a permanent sacrifice of safety. This office will gladly make the "F. & B. Industries Service" available to help accredited investors to select securities of companies in stable industries.

Fred Perry Is Rated Underdog for Pro Net Debut Tonight

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

22 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1937 X ****

Vines Holds 4 Wins Over Briton

Englishman Has Beaten U. S. Opponent Only Once on Default.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Another underdog "who hasn't got a chance" goes to the post tomorrow night.

If you thought Joe Louis was a favorite to beat Max Schmeling, all you need do is eavesdrop on the tennis experts to find out that Ellsworth Vines is unbeatable, that Fred Perry won't have a chance when they face each other across the net in Madison Square Garden in the Briton's pro net debut.

It's the Louis-Schmeling pre-fight ballyhoo set up all over again, but this time the experts can lean on records of tradition and past performances to support their unanimity of opinion. Form usually prevails in tennis.

Beat Perry 4 Times.

Before Perry abdicated as king of the world's amateurs two months ago to make a professional tour which might net him around $75,000, he and Vines had met five times. Four decisions went to the rangy Californian. The fifth was a default victory for Perry, as Vines collapsed on the court in Paris at a time when the bounding Briton was only a point or two away from victory.

Vines made his professional debut a few days shy of three years ago, losing to the then whirlwind Bill Tilden in straight sets. Perry immediately succeeded him as king of the simon-pures and, except for a setback due to an injury in the finals of the 1935 American championship, he ruled supreme for three years. During that interval Vines and Perry played many informal matches and the American always maintained a marked superiority.

Perry Still Outclassed.

Both have improved tremendously in the past three years, but it doesn't seem Perry has caught up with the nemesis of his amateur days. That accounts for the feeling shared by experts that Vines will win tomorrow night, in four sets or, perhaps three.

Playing conditions, a canvass coverning over concrete; artificial lighting and smoke that might affect his breathing may retard Perry some. Vines is accustomed to indoor competition on virtually all kinds of surfaces. It may take Perry some time to accustom his game to these conditions.

Even if he loses to Vines, all won't be lost for Perry. He's working on a percentage basis with co-promoters, Frank Hunter and Howard Voshell, and his contract is said to call for 37½ per cent of the net receipts while Vines' share is reported to be 12½ per cent. A capacity house of 16,000, paying around $53,000, is expected.

Savior Perry.

Perry is receiving the big share of the haul because he is being hailed as the savior of professional tennis. Last year the touring racqueteers found nothing but lean pickings. Running out of opposition and all washed up until some new fodder was supplied, Vines is reported to have grabbed at the smaller share.

The Vines-Perry match will be the piece de resistance of the show. It will be preceded by a singles match between George Lott, jr. and Bruce Barnes, who will be regular members of the troupe, and followed by a doubles contest with Perry and Lott holding a line against Vines and Tilden. It will be Tilden's only appearance with them and he is said to be receiving $500 for his one-night stand. Lott and Barnes are working on weekly salaries, Lott's reported as being $300 and Barnes' slightly less.

Cambria Seeking To Buy Toronto

Toronto, Ontario, Jan. 5.—Joe Cambria, who last week sold his International League Albany club to the New York Giants, came to town today announcing he was ready to buy all or part of the financially depressed Toronto team.

"There are no strings tied to my offer," he said. "If I buy it, the club will remain in Toronto and I plan to make numerous trades to assure the city being represented by a strong team next season."

Their Smiles Will Fade Tonight

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Tennis joins the upper-case sports industries tonight with its $9.90 tops for the Perry-Vines match at Madison Square Garden. The game has come a long way since the turn of the century when passing teamsters, noting activity on a tennis court, were prone to utter a derisive "whoops!" and then laugh heartily.

POVICH.

Fred Perry's professional debut against such as Vines is, of course, the excuse seized upon by the tennis promoters to rocket the admission prices to a new high level. But it is notable that professional tennis, in the dozen years of its existence, has taken rank second only to boxing as the most expensive sport to the spectator.

Tennis, in one rapid stride, tonight forges ahead of baseball's World Series, golf's National Open and National Amateur and the greatest of football attractions in point of prices asked and received. Only boxing, with its record of $40 tops, charged by the late Tex Rickard for the Dempsey-Tunney fights, has been able to command a higher admission fee for the choice seats.

For his lesser fights, Rickard blithely set $20 and $25 as his top prices and to the everlasting amazement of even the fight fans he always sold his high-priced seats first. Rickard had his own philosophy of prices. He played upon the vanity of the big-shot fans who, he said, would insist upon not only seeing the fight from the ringside but upon being seen at the ringside by their friends, no matter what the tax.

Scanning the price range of the sporting spectacles, this department is convinced that big league baseball is the best bargain of the lot. For one buck throughout the season, the fan sees the absolute best, the tops in baseball entertainment. And the modified price scale of the game throughout the year tempers any resentment that may be felt toward the $6.60 tops in the World Series.

In contrast to tonight's top prices at Madison Square Garden, which bring only a dime change from a sawbuck, the royal and ancient game of golf, with a far more exciting background and hundreds of thousands more devotees, has never been able to command more than $3.30 from spectators.

Last year's National Open at Baltusrol found a hundred of the Nation's outstanding golfers competing and a goodly smattering of foreign stars also entered, but the fan was entitled to observe all for the moderate price of $1.65. The admission was raised to $2 on the final day of play. A strip ticket for the three days' play cost the fan only $3.50.

At last summer's National Amateur tournament, fans were permitted to roam the course almost at will and stand almost within reaching distance of the big-shot amateur stars for $10, which covered the cost of admission to the tournament not for one day, but for the entire week of play.

Football, even the traditional Army-Navy game, has never made so bold as to charge the spectator more than $4.40. But those prices have been prevailing all too frequently in recent years when it is considered that football is supposed to be an amateur sport with no pay to the performers.

This department's particular gripe has been the $4.40 charge for the Army-Navy game which appears entirely unnecessary. Both the Naval Academy and the Military Academy draw their athletic appropriations from Uncle Sam's treasury and are not compelled to meet the expenses of their teams out of their athletic profits. One hundred and two thousand taxpayers paid $4.40 each to see the last Army-Navy game and I'm wondering what's done with all that dough.

In Short——

If a race fan were able to produce a pedigree certifying that an ancestor was a passenger on the Mayflower, he used to be able to buy his way into the clubhouse at the Pimlico track for $5.50 . . . but when the track fell upon evil times, the fee was reduced to $3.30 and the pedigree was waived . . . the smaller race tracks, which subsist only on the profits of their "cut" of the mutuel play, cheerfully give complimentary passes to the fans . . . Fans who paid $15 for ringside seats to the Jack Dempsey-Fred Fulton fight actually saw eight seconds of fighting, the referee using the remainder of the 18 seconds the bout lasted to count Fulton out . . . if a fan happened to blink after taking his seat at the ringside, he probably missed half of the fight . . . the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Chicago in 1927 set a new record for ticket scalping . . . hundreds of ringside seats were disposed of by the sharpers at prices ranging from $100 to $150 each . . . the night before the fight, one Chicago businessman offered $200 each for four seats in the first row.

The world champions' pitchers and catchers will report to St. Petersburg March 1, followed a week later by the rest of the squad.

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 5.—Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, No. 3 seeded player, played two rounds today in the fifth annual Miami Biltmore tennis tournament and will meet a seeded opponent Thursday if he wins his next match.

Washington Golf Club To Built $85,000 House

Washington Golf and Country Club's active membership last night authorized the board of governors to proceed with plans to borrow between $85,000 and $100,000 for the rebuilding of the clubhouse razed by fire last September.

The clubhouse will be enlarged considerably, and there will be greater space in both the locker rooms and golf shop, it was said. Indications are that the new clubhouse will be ready by the middle of this summer.

And elected Mr. Griffith, William Richardson and Edward B. Eynon, jr., as the team's board of directors for the eighteenth consecutive season.

Whereupon Mr. Griffith, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Eynon, as directors, elected as the 1937 officers of the firm: Mr. Griffith, president; Mr. Richardson, vice president; Mr. Eynon, secretary-treasurer, even as they have been re-electing themselves to the same offices since 1919.

'Ambitious Youth' Of 18 Seeks N. C. Grid Coach Post

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 5.—Armand Charron, of Indian Orchard, Mass., terming himself an "ambitious youth of 18 with a very definite idea on football," applied today for the job of head football coach at North Carolina State College.

In a letter to Col. John W. Harrelson, dean of administration at State, Charron said his appointment as Hunk Anderson's successor "would mean lots of publicity to your school," and asserted that "given a capable coaching staff, I would put you team in the win column and national spotlight."

Gus Welch, of Petersburg, Va., quarterback at Carlisle Indian School, who formerly coached at Washington State College, Randolph-Macon and the University of Virginia, also applied today for the head coaching job.

Thirty other candidates previously had asked for consideration for the post. Anderson's three-year contract at State, which expired December 31, has not been renewed.

Terry Has Flag Among Plans For 1937

Pilot to Shift Line-up, Will Retire Self; Suggests New Rookie Idea.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Big Bad Bill Terry is Sweet William now.

"Tough guy" of the major leagues, Terry was rolling in good cheer today. He was in town to see his pal, Travis Jackson, installed as manager of the Giants' New Jersey City farm, and he had more plans, predictions and ideas than a Broadway press agent.

First of all, predictions:

"I've offered to bet good hard cash we'll finish one-two, but I don't hear any takers.

"We'll be faster, and younger, and I think we'll be better. In addition to the Cards, Cubs, and Pirates, the Reds should be knocking at the door this year. The Bees will also be improved and the others should be about the same."

To Retire Self.

And now, his plans:

"Hank Leiber will play centerfield. I still think he will be a great ballplayer. Lou Chiozza will take Jackson's place at third, and Johnny McCarthy will be at first. I think I'll put myself on the voluntary retired list this week.

"I have two deals on the fire. I need a catcher and an infielder, I stopped off at Cincinnati on my way to New York and tried to make a deal with Warren Giles for Ernie Lombardi or Virgil Davis. Giles wanted Leiber, but so do I.

"If Chiozza doesn't go at third, I may try Mel Ott there and move Jimmy Ripple over to right.

And here's his idea:

"I've suggested that each club in the majors be permitted to carry two promising first-year men in addition to their regular 23. These two must never have been in the majors before."

In the face of all this material, the army of news-starved reporters were amazed. Still Terry, usually reticent, rambled on.

"And I've figured out a new batting order too. I'm gonna lead off with Chiozza. Then Dick Bartell, Ott, and Leiber, and then Joe Moore, McCarthy, Burgess Whitehead, and Gus Mancuso."

Kenwood Thief Leaves Golf Clubs; Takes $24

The thief or thieves who broke into the golf shop at Kenwood Golf and Country Club yesterday weren't interested in pilfering golf equipment.

Bethesda police reported that $24 in change had been removed, but no golf sticks, balls or bags taken. Around $3,000 worth of merchandise was in the shop.

Police said the intruders broke a window and reached the latch with a piece of wire in gaining entrance to the shop. One suspect was arrested.

2 Local Fives See Action Tonight

Hoyas Play Pittsburgh; Maryland Is Host to Johns Hopkins.

Georgetown Also Faces West Virginia on Thursday Night.

The collegiate basketball business, suffering from a sit-down strike occasioned by Christmas holidays, will resume operations tonight with Maryland entertaining Johns Hopkins at College Park, and Georgetown invading Pittsburgh for a conference game with Carnegie Tech.

The Hoyas will be away two days on conference affairs, engaging West Virginia tomorrow night at Morgantown in another league argument. Maryland's game will be the first of three scheduled this week but the other two will be committed in old Virginny. It starts at 8 o'clock.

Big Ben Allen, sensational commuting center from Baltimore, who was a one-man team with the Terps last season, will be available again this winter for home games at least. Coach Burt Shipley intends to use him at the sadly undermanned center position, but for limited periods only. A student in the school of pharmacy at Baltimore, it is impossible for Allen to attend daily practice and he consequently sometimes gets a little winded.

Guckeyson to Play.

Bill Guckeyson and Eddie Johnson will share the tap-off work with Allen and between the three of them the position should be fairly well tended. Waverly Wheeler, a natural courtman, has clinched one forward berth, but a dog-fight between the veteran, Al Waters, and rookie, George Knepley, is being waged for the other. Knepley, a deadly shot, appears capable of ousting his more experienced rival.

Charley Keller and "Little Knocky" Thomas, have been assigned to regular guard duty.

Hopkins, which fought Maryland through one extra period before succumbing, 45-40, last year, is supposed to be much better this winter and unquestionably is much taller. The Blue Jays walloped Gallaudet, but lost to George Washington in preholiday games.

Georgetown will be without the services of Carroll Shore, star forward, as it goes gunning for its fourth and fifth consecutive victories, but the District boy probably will not be missed if Ed Kurtyka and Joe Murphy are up to par. On a basis of past performances the Hoyas are something of an even-money choice to win the conference crown this season, but their hopes and chances hinge on the outcome of these initial league tests.

Furr Gets Draw In Carroll Bout

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Phil Furr, Washington welterweight, rallied in the first and last rounds tonight to earn a draw with Eddie Carroll, of Ottawa, Ontario, in the eight-round windup bout at the New York Coliseum.

The Canadian, who weighed 146¼ to Furr's 148, held an edge in all but the first and last sessions.

Going into the final frame, he seemed to have the decision, but Furr rocked him with a right-hand smash and belted him around the ring so well that the officials called the whole thing even.

Nunie Bisagno, 132½, Newark, N. J., outpointed Myer Alper, 135¾, Montreal, in the six-round semi-windup.

Filly Ties Mark Of 33 Seconds Flat In 3 Furlong Run

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 5.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt's 2-year-old filly Balking, equaling the world and track record set last year by another Vanderbilt youngster, Airflame, won the $1,000 added Dedutante 3-furlong event at Santa Anita Park today in 33 seconds flat.

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

SYNOPSIS.

A colt is foaled on the Ridgeway Farm. He is given much advice by his mother as he learns to munch grass and test his wobbly legs. The Ridgeways are forced to dispose of their horses at auction and the colt is "thrown in for good measure" when his mother, Battleship Girl, is sold to the Witmore Farm. Dorothy Holbrook's auto has a flat tire near the fence and she sees the colt frolicking. Later she persuades her father to buy him, identifying the colt by a white ring around his leg. Taken to Holbrook Manor, the colt grows like a weed. He and "Miss Dorothy," as he calls his owner, become fast friends. The colt meets Trainer Jensen and is given early racing education. Named "Flat Tire," he starts his racing career and loses his rider at the break. Feels disgraced when not allowed to run next out, but wins his following race. Jensen and his friend, the Cigar Man, win $4,000. Miss Dorothy and her father leave on a world tour. Flat Tire is "out of the money" in two stake races and is sent to the farm for the winter. Jensen, pressed for cash, needs a sure winner. Puts Flat Tire in a claiming race. He wins, but is claimed by "Big Ed" Moreland, tout and gambler. Flat Tire is sold to Arch, a young millionaire, for $5,000. Sets pace as stablemate wins. "Wolf Tooth" makes him run wide next out.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN.

Marlboro Man.

The Oakmont Stable had been at Pimlico for several days before I was sent to the post again. I was pleased when I learned that I was to be started by myself and not as part of any entry. In the latter case, I probably would have been called upon to set the pace again for my sablemate. Thus I would have only a "rooting interest," as the horsemen call it, in the victory, if such materialized. When on my own, I could make or break myself.

At noon on the day my name appeared in the entries, there was some doubt as to whether or not I would be started. A cold rain came in from the East. The track had been getting soft in the morning when I was breezed. Now it was sloppy, if not muddy.

Owner Arch came to the stables and asked Trainer Birthwright if he thought I could run in the mud. There was nothing in my personal record to answer the question. Arch probably had noted that I never had been to the post in the mud.

"We'll, we've got to find out sooner or later, sir," said Trainer Birthwright. "Flat Tire's sire, Port Hole, you know, liked it and his dam, Battleship Girl, was a fair sort on an off track. Let's give him a chance."

Fortunately, Marlboro Man, a 7-year-old in the next stall, gave me a few pointers on mud running.

I followed his instructions and, together with excellent handling from Jockey Soltz, who was getting to be my regular rider, I turned in a smashing victory, or should I say a sloppy victory. I must have been much the best for Soltz was covered with mud virtually from the start. He seemed to weigh a ton. I was splattered, too. But we came from back in the field to take a commanding lead in the final straightaway and it seemed to me that Soltz was pulling up on me through the final sixteenth of a mile.

Jockey Soltz paid me a compliment as he was stopping me after the finish.

"I'll say he can mud it," he said.

I felt like saying, "You're telling me."

There was not a prize for winning a race in the Oakmont Stable. Carrots and an occasional apple were regular diet. The rewards that some horses received only after a meritorious performance were ours every day—whether we won or lost or even if we did not go to the races. I liked it that way.

If I had been running for Miss Dorothy she probaly would have been out on the muddy track to greet me. I found out later that Owner Arch had been entertaining at a luncheon party in the clubhouse and had left his stable and stood in an open box, despite the rain, to see me run.

He was at the stables the next morning. The storm had passed over and a bright sun was shining. I felt good when I awoke and better when Owner Arch stopped by my stall and gave me a friendly pull on the ear.

I struck up quite a friendship with Marlboro Man. He had been a selling plater or claiming race horse ever since he could remember. He was a sort of pensioner in the Oakmont Stable. About twice a month he was sent into a race, generally the last or next to last event on the program. He picked up third money occasionally. In recent years he told me, he had not been claimed. Before that he had been taken away from the Oakmont Stable twice, but, after a month or so, Owner Arch had claimed or bought him back.

Marlboro Man, despite his age, always believed that Owner Arch had some big stake race picked out for him the following summer or the next fall. I knew this was but mental complex when I saw Marlboro Man's right knee. He had had a wind puff or something wrong with it. There were scars where a firing iron had been used on it.

I wouldn't have told him for the world, but I was informed by Maid of Hunches, a mare who was called "Maid of Gossip" by the other horses, that Owner Arch kept Marlboro Man around because of his funny manner of strutting while parading to the post. Owner Arch's friends laughed heartily each time that Marlboro Man came on the track and many of his friends, who otherwise would have been on the way to the city, stayed for the final race just to see Marlboro Man "strut his stuff," as they called it.

Marlboro Man walked slowly, his head high and looked straight ahead. His rear action brought the laughs. He looked like a back view of heel-and-toe-walker, if you know what I mean. When one hip was up, the other was down—and vice versa. Regardless of his number, Marlboro Man seemed to insist upon being last perhaps ten yards behind the others on the way to the post. He put on a sort of private parade.

"Of course, the outrider, jockeys and officials know Marlboro Man and his show," she said, smiling. "They just let him have his own way. I felt sorry for him at first because I believed the bad knee might have something to do with it. But I'm told that he's been doing his strut every since he started racing."

I liked Marlboro Man and I did not disillusion him. As in the case of my mud running, he gave me advice that aided me and also came through with stories and an occasional bit of news. These helped pass away my stall hours.

"You're in luck, boy," he said one day, "I had hoped that Owner Arch would start me in the Thanksgiving Day Handicap at Bowie. You know I was fourth the last time I was out. I wasn't beaten more than four lengths for the main part of the purse. I saw Owner Arch and his friends laughing when I went to the post. They probably were happy because the odds board showed me 30 to 1. You know yourself that I shouldn't be 30 to 1 in any field around here."

"That was too much, alright," I lied, helpfully.

"Well," Marlboro Man continued, "I would have won but for that Jockey Delaney. I never liked that guy. He always calls me 'Shiver

Hips' and, for the life of me, I can't find out why he uses that name for me. Anyway, Delaney must have thought we were in a 4-mile steeplechase.

"He didn't turn me loose until we hit the stretch and then he let some horse bump me. I wish Jockey Soltz had been in my saddle. I'll bet I'd have brought Owner Arch's friends a $90 mutuel."

"I'll say you would," I said sympathetically.

"But I must have done alright," he continued, "Owner Arch was laughing when I came back to the judges' stand and one of his friends yelled, 'You're O. K. Marlboro. It was worth staying to see you—hic!' I guess 'Hic' is a pet name HE has for me. I kind of like it. Don't you?"

I agreed with a nod of my head but my ribs were almost cracking with suppressed laughter.

"But, as I was saying, you're in luck," Marlboro Man went on, "the nominations must show that the field for the Thanksgiving Day Handicap is cheaper than Owner Arch first thought, or he might have started me. I heard him telling Trainer Birthwright that he was thinking about sending you after the purse. If you do start, it would be a feather in your cap if you can win it. Owner Arch loves his stake winners and you'd be in the Oakmont Stable for life if you came through for him in a big race."

This was good news to me. It was too late for me to be a Kentucky Derby winner or a Preakness winner but like many other horses who came into their own late in life, perhaps I could make my mark. Perhaps I would be one of those turf greats—like Exterminator or Man

2d-Half Rally Turns Tide Of Battle

Johnnies' Inability to Make Foul Shots Was Margin for Foe.

A desperate last-second long shot by Ray Fridrick, former Ohio schoolboy star, gave Roosevelt a 24-23 victory over St. John's High, champions of the Catholic Prep School League, yesterday. A near capacity crowd packed the Roosevelt gymnasium to see the Johnnies, conquerors of Eastern's inter-high champions, tackle the Rough Riders.

They not only tackled the Rough Riders, but shackled them neatly in the first half. St. John's led 6-5, at the end of the first quarter and Coach Jack Ray, of Central, an interested spectator, got up and left, believing the Johnnies were just getting under way.

Apparently they were, for by half time the Cadets had a 17-11 lead. Little Joey Gallagher, guard, was doing most of the scoring for the Vermont avenue crew and rang up six baskets before the day was over.

Fridrick Wins Game.

During the intermission, Coach Herman Littman, product of the school of basketball of New York University, went into a huddle with the Rough Riders and they came out much the better for the counsel. Capt. Frank Bailey and Joe Comer began sinking baskets and Roosevelt was surprised to find itself leading, 20-19, going into the final quarter.

Led by Gallagher, the Johnnies kept flicking away at the mesh and despite loss of Jack Regis, who was ousted for four personals, had a 23-22 lead with 10 seconds to play, but Roosevelt broke up a freezing attempt and Fridrick let loose a looper for the hoop. It swished through and the game was over.

Foul Shots Turn Tide.

Roosevelt, hitherto more or less a nonentity in inter-high sports, had sunk the team that had sunk Eastern.

The Rough Riders had their foul shot ability to thank for their victory, or perhaps, St. John's lack of it. The Johnnies missed seven out of eight free shot attempts. Roosevelt sank four out of seven.

It was Roosevelt's second victory in two starts. St. John's 14-12 victory in the game between the second teams of the schools was little or no consolation.

6 Ring Veterans Start Work at Virginia

University, Va., Jan. 5.—Virginia's boxers launched intensive preparations here today for a difficult six-meet schedule which will be climaxed by Navy and Harvard engagements.

Four regular team members and two other 1936 lettermen returned for the season's first massed practice session under the direction of Coach Johnny Larowe, who supervised the proceedings from a wheelchair.

The venerable Larowe, whose remarkable coaching record includes six straight Southern Conference championships and one lone defeat in the last five years of dual meets, is only partially recovered from a serious leg injury.

York, Womer to Help.

Probably committed to his rolling conveyance for the entire season, much of his ring technique will be relayed through his assistants, Al York, former Virginia boxing captain, and Maynard ("Mutt") Womer, last year's leader.

While two weeks intervene before the opening week, January 16, with V. M. I. at Lexington, four of the eight positions must be filled. Of those who will return to their old posts are Capt. Fred Cramer, heavyweight; Ray Schmidt, light-heavyweight; Mortimer Caplin, middleweight, and Maynard Harlow, junior middleweight.

Cramer, Harlow Are Aces.

Cramer and Caplin are veterans of two seasons, and Harlow and Schmidt made the team as sophomores last year. "The big four" of the squad has a record of only six defeats in 33 dual meet scraps. Cramer was twice cnoference champion. Harlow was a finalist last year and Schmidt was undefeated in dual conference competition.

Gregory Deane, a letter man in the featherweight division, has seen only limited competition, but is counted on as a regular starter this year.

Jack Noll, who completes his list of available letter men, advanced to the heavyweight class after a season as light-heavyweight, and will serve as an alternate for Cramer.

Roosevelt Center League.

Lack of Fights Barney Ross' Big Worry

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Barney Ross, the world's welterweight champion, wondered today what had become of his rosy financial prospects of six months ago.

Last June the personable Chicago youngster and his co-managers, Sam Pian and Art Winch, were all steamed up over a boom season built around a title battle with Jack Carroll, the Australian champion, at Sydney in December. It looked as though there might be around $100,000 worth of profit coming up.

Ross was to get $45,000 and $5,000 for expenses to meet Carroll. Also there were plans for a battle with Jimmy McLarnin, and one with Pedro Montanez, sensational Puerto Rican youngster.

Devitt Cagers Defeat Hyattsville High, 33-26

Led by Joe Hargaden, brother of Ed Hargaden, of Georgetown fame, Devitt Prep yesterday set back the Hyattsville High basketball team, 33-26, at the Bladensburg High gym. Hargaden scored more than half his team's points. Mostow, former Hyattsville player, scored 12 points for the prep school.

With five minutes to go Mostow put the game on ice to assure Devitt of its second straight win over the Marylanders. Fields, Hyattsville guard, scored 10 points. Devitt had a 14-13 lead at half time.

Steele Is Ready To Take On All Comers

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 5.—Freddie Steele, the middleweight king, breezed into town today ready to take on Babe Risko, or anyone else, for the first promoter who'll lay the money on the line.

Manager Dave Miller will open negotiations both with Madison Square Garden and the Twentieth Century Sporting Club for Steele's New York debut, probably in February.

Right now Miller's demands are far out of line with what New York promoters consider just, but James J. Johnston, Garden Maestro, thinks this week's pow wows will bring about an agreement.

For Steele to defend his title against Risko, the former champ, in the Garden, Miller wants a $25,000 guarantee, plus transporation for three from the West Coast and return and $5,000 for training expenses.

For a non-title bout, he'll take considerably less. The comparatively small seating capacity of the Hippodrome probably will preclude a title match from being staged there.

Johnston, who announced last week a Steele-Risko show was in the bag, said he spoke prematurely, but added he is certain the Garden will land the match before the end of the week.

Spider

Nugent's Webs Have Ensnared Many Baseball Magnates

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 5.—"Won't you come into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly.

The fly said "Not today, thanks," which proves he's a right smart guy—smarter than a flock of baseball magnates who year after year stroll into the parlor of the slickest "spider" in the National League.

Gerald Nugent, owner of the down but never out Philadelphia Phillies, is one of the most popular, likeable and honorable men in baseball. A patient man, too, is Mr. Nugent, who knows that all things, including ball players, come to him who waits if he doesn't wait too long.

Baseball books are jammed with deals engineered by "Spider" Nugent who long ago showed the smart magnates, including Foxy Clark Griffith, of Washington, something new by selling the same ball player twice for a good chunk of dough to the same club.

The Phillies bought Davis from St. Paul in 1931, but sold him after the 1932 season to the New York Giants for $30,000 and Outfielder Chick Fullis, who hit .328 for the Giants in 1931, but only .298 in 1932. As soon as Fullis got into a Philly uniform he went like a house afire. The St. Louis Cardinals became interested in Davis, meanwhile, and got him for George Watkins, then a holdout in a swap with the Giants. Then the Cards turned around and swapped Davis to the Phillies for Fullis. So, in time, Nugent turned right around and again sold Davis to the Giants for $20,000 in cash and Pitcher Joe Bowman.

Chuck Klein was another Nugent masterpiece in ivory. He sold Klein to the Chicago Cubs for $125,000 and players Mark Koenig, Harvey Hendrick and Ted Kleinhans in November, 1933. On May 21, 1936, he got Klein black along with some $25,000 in cash and Fabian Kowalik, a young pitcher of promise, for Pitcher Curt Davis.

You couldn't blame the Cubs if they locked and bolted the door on "Spider" Nugent and his agents. For in 1934, they made perhaps the all-time top baseball deal by giving the Cubs Don Hurst, then a broken down ball player, for Adolph Camilli, who turned out to be one of the prize first basemen in the game. Nugent can get a good piece of change for Camilli from the Giants, and some say he's already made the sale. He would have been lucky to get a good finger mitt for Hurst on the market.

Nugent sent Pinkey Whitney and Hal Lee to Boston for $50,000 and two players, Wes Schulmerich and Fritz Knothe but he got Whitney back for Mickey Haslin, now with the Giants.

One of the big reasons for Nugent's surprising success is that club owners regard the lowly Phillies as harmless. When they want to ship a player away where he can't hurt them with a comeback, they send him to Philly. The Pirates got in an argument with Dick Bartell over an expense account and practically gave him to the Phillies, who sold him to the Giants for $75,000 and four ball players.

Even the Giants were dizzy after that tail spin. It had cost them $50,000 and two players for Davis.

"As soon as a player is sold to Philadelphia," reasons Cy Peterman, the baseball scribe who rates Nugent the eighth wonder of the world, 'He makes up his mind to one thing: to get out of Philadelphia. So, he gets a good season and Nugent gets a good price for him. Then he hits another slump, comes back to Philly, and it starts all over again. It's a slick system."

Won't you come into my parlor?" said the syider.

"And now!" shout the baseball magnates.

Changes Seen In Dixie Pro Grid Loop

Future of D. C. Pros Will Be One of Problems of League Conclave.

Important changes are due in the Dixie Professional Football League setup when officials of the six-club circuit convene in Richmond the latter part of this month for their second annual winter conclave.

The future of the Washington Pro, vitally affected by George Marshall's decision to locate a National League franchise here, schedule revision, maximum salaries and expansion of the loop to eight clubs are the more pressing problems to be discussed.

Recently incorporated with a majority of stock being sold to members of the Seat Pleasant Volunteer Fire Department, original sponsor of the club, Washington definitely will be in the field again next season. The most perplexing question to be solved is where its games will be played. Some members are in favor of playing at Seat Pleasant, while others want to play two games at home and the rest on the road.

Two Teams Seek Entry.

Blair Mansley, jr., president of the Richmond Arrows, has offered the Pros the use of that team's stadium on days the Arrows are traveling. Jack Ogden, of Baltimore, also has indicated a willingness to share the Oriole Park with the Pros. Washington, meantime, is marking time and will make no decision until after the meeting.

Two Carolina teams, one being the Charlotte Bantams, are eager to affiliate with the Dixie organization, but will not be admitted without stubborn opposition by certain members who are opposed to long trips. One faction, however, believes that inclusion of this territory will be a profitable move.

D. C. Team Cards 4 Tilts.

The league is almost certain to play a split series next year, the two winners meeting in a championship game, and the ultimate winner again meeting the American Association's champion in a post-season game. Washington defeated Bay Parkway, of Brooklyn, in the first interleague game tne past New Year's Day at Richmond.

Washington already has booked four games for next September, including one with Bay Parkway. Orange and Patterson are two others on the list.

D. C. Youth to Play With Mounts Here

Another local boy making good with Mount St. Mary's will perform before an audience of home town fans tomorrow night at Tech High School when Joe Cotter, Emerson Institute alumnus, comes here with Mount St. Mary's. The Emmitsburg quintet meets George Washington's undefeated tossers.

The Mount also is undefeated, having disposed of Southeastern, Maryland State Normal and Shepherd College with a dispatch that bodes no good for the Colonials. Last year they tied the State Championship, losing to Washington College in a play-off for the title. Don Petrini, center, and Stan Kokie, forward, are the only two veterans left from that formidable combination.

Tomorrow's game will get underway at 8:30 p. m. instead of the customary 8 o'clock starting time. A preliminary game will be played at 7 p. m.

United Typewriter Girls Seeking Tuesday Games

United Typewriter girls basketball team, runners-up in the District A. A. U.-Post basketball championship last winter, wants games for Tuesday nights. The Typewriter girls have the Central High gym available. Those interested call Miss Annabelle Totten at COlumbia 4132, or MEtropolitan 9900.

Wilson High to Have '14-Man' Court Team

KNIGHT. GERARD. HURDLE. MALONEY.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Wilson's suits are a very bright green.

"We'll have a 14-man team, I think," continued the chunky coach, former forward for the University of Iowa and Lafayette College. "None of the boys is a whole lot better than any of the others. They're all inexperienced."

Despite the coach's dark outlook, Wilson is colliding with Western High in the interhigh series Friday, with an encouraging background. The "baby" school of interhigh sports has yet to lose a game to Western. Heintell's baseball team walloped Western's interhigh champions, and his football team beat one of the best Western teams in years this fall, 13-12.

All Positions Open.

That is all in the past, though, says the coach. In fact, he adds, it will only serve to whet Western's appetite for a decisive victory Friday.

Heintell considers Wilson's initial venture in interhigh circles something of an experiment. "It takes a long time to build up a basketball team," he says. "Those Western boys have been playing together a long while. I don't see how we can expect to do much."

Heintell has no "first" team. He refuses to pick out any five, or even eight men. He prefers to consider all positions open. At center he has Jimmy Gerard, Phil Russell and Marshall Garrett battling for the assignment. At forward, seven more are in hot competition, namely, George Flather, Earl Hurdle, Joe Brooks, Dave Maloney, Don Maloney, Bob Haycock and Latimer Evans.

At guard, he has half a dozen more candidates—Bill Knight, Dick Stuver, Jack Hoyt, Frank Bond, Harry Swagart and Fred Stan. Of these, ten are to be graduated in June. Some of the boys are fairly tall and the coach can put a fairly rangy team on the floor. What the boys need though, he says, is experience.

In their only game this year, they lost to Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, 17-13. Bethesda was beaten by Western, 23-20. "Western must have had an off day that day," Heintell remarked.

Having once played in the cradle of basketball, the Big Ten Conference, Heintell knows the game from pick-off to pot-shot. He uses the man-for-man defense. He is already building for the future and is organizing lightweight teams.

The coach doesn't have to do much pep talking to inspire his team for this Western game. Being an offshoot of Western, Wilson would rather topple the mother school than all the others put together. Maybe that explains why Heintell's teams have already done it in baseball and footfall.

Western will furnish its rebuttal Friday.

Bred to Run

o' War—one that is on the tip of everyone's tongue. I was still sound. And there was Mother and Miss Dorothy to run for. I wondered how Mother was faring and whether Miss Dorothy would ever return. Where are the Holbrook horses? Will Trainer Jensen ever get me back? Do I want him to get me back? Maybe he won't be the Holbrook trainer when Miss Dorothy finds out. I miss Big Ed and Nuckles—funny pair. I wonder if they are still friends?

My mind was running in circles. Marlboro Man had sent me off on a thinking spree. So I was to run in the Thanksgiving Handicap. Oh, boy—I WOULD run.

Trainer Birthwright was as smart as I had judged him. He did not baby me because the boss had ordered me "pointed," or prepared, for a stake. He put me in two sprint races the following week. I was carried out at a turn by a mare in the first race and closed "like the wind," Jockey Soltz said later. I finished third about three parts of a length from top horse.

The next time out Jockey Soltz rated me well and I came from behind to take the main money by, I'd say, a half length. I liked the rather soft Bowie track.

For the next few days I was jogged around the track each morning. Tuesday Trainer Birthwright ordered a stiff workout for me. I went a mile and must have been doing well for the trainer seemed happy when, with the others who had worked out, I was being walked around the ring by the stable.

The next afternoon, the day before my big chance, I was taken on the track between races. Our jockeys were busy and Slim, one of the stableboys, had the leg on me—I mean he was in the saddle.

Slim and I narrowly escaped injury in the workout. A tractor was pulling a harrow along the inside of the stretch when we came around. I don't believe Slim saw the machine, nor did I until we were close to it. However, I had heard the engine puffing. We might have run right into the harrow, tractor and all, had I not swerved out suddenly as it loomed in front of me.

Many in the crowd noticed the near accident and they applauded when we passed. The applause probably was for Slim. He could have the credit. I was satisfied that I was still in one piece and that I would not miss starting in the Thanksgiving Handicap the next day.

It meant so much to me.

DEAR AL: SELECTIONS AT TROPICAL PARK.

The phone rang last night. I answered and from that point on I couldn't get a word in edgewise. "So you're Bill Bennings, eh? You think you can pick horses. Why I just bet $10 that you couldn't pick the winner of the next race that Flat Tire, the "Bred to Run" horse, goes to the post in—and you've read the book." I said that I thought Flat Tire would be a good thing the next

Bernard F. Wins Thrilling Race

Officials Call Place Dead Heat

Victor Returns $29.40 Mutuel; Denemark Entry Fails.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP).—The Latania Handicap, for 3-year-olds at six furlongs, provided the tightest finish of the meeting here this afternoon. After long deliberation, the official numbers flashed showing I. J. Collins' Bernard F. the winner. J. M. Zimmer's Rainland and J. W. Parrish's Proph finished in a dead heat for the place. The three horses reached the wire with their heads bobbing virtually on the line, with Bernard F. on the outside and Proph in the middle.

Bernard F. paid $29.40. Rainland paid $5.20 place and $8.40 show in the split pool, while Proph returned There had also been a dead heat for the place in the previous race. Including the one in the feature event. Six such finishes have occurred at the meeting. The time was 1:12.

Prairie Dog, representing Mrs. Emil Denemark, and Evening Tide in the silks of E. D. Shaffer, ran coupled and drew the bulk of the play. The former was fourth, plenty of daylight behind the leaders.

Irving Anderson had Rainland out in front shortly after the break. The Zimmer gelding shook off Little Sleeper, then hooked up in a long duel with Proph. Bernard F., which had dropped back after a fast beginning, came with a rush on the outside in the final quarter. George Seabo got him up just in time, while Rainland held on gamely to split second money with Proph.

Romney Royal, a $5.50 for $2 favorite, defeated 11 other maiden 3-year-olds of the male division as the sport began here today. Frank Madeley gave the gelding a strong ride to drive him past the wire a neck better than the tired pacemaker, Loyal Son. Ubald G. was beaten two lengths for the place.

Shepherd Boy ran one of his good races to win the second dash, thus giving Jockey Frank Madeley two in a row. The 7-year-old sprinter took Sam Worthy into camp by a length and a half to return $18.30.

Good Dame Winner.

Good Dame and Regula Baddun, the two to draw most of the play in the third, obliged by running one, two in the order named. They finished two lengths apart, with Stool Pigeon just out of the place position. Good Dame finally shook off Stool Pigeon after a duel lasting to the stretch.

The fifth dead heat of the meeting materialized in the fourth race, but it did not include the winner. Muggins took the purse by a length and a half. Recovery and Speed finished in a deadlock for the place, while Wild Pigeon was fourth, a half length behind. Muggins was the third successful choice, paying $5.60. Recovery, under the split pool, returned $4.10 place and $4.90 show, while Speed's place and show prices were $3.80 and $4.50, respectively.

Star Loom, well beaten in her last start in similar company, recovered her speed with a bang to win the sixth race at the lucrative odds of $11.90 for $2. The Jacobs colorbearer lasted to beat Candlelight by a half length, thus giving Apprentice Anderson a double.

French, British Staffs to Confer On War Plans

England to Move Force to Continent if Paris Defends Pyrenees.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 5.—Franco-British general staff talks to prepare defenses against European war probably will follow the conference between the countries' war ministers, a source close to the defense ministry said tonight.

Alfred Duff Cooper, British secretary of war, conferred last night with Defense Minister Edouard Daladier during a hasty trip to Paris from London.

The main problem to be worked out, this source reported, concerned British "preparedness" to aid France in case French troops are sent to the Pyrenees, which divide France from Spain.

Shortly after the British war secretary left Paris on his return to London, Daladier caught a train for the Riviera, where Premier Leon Blum is taying.

Diplomatic sources also reported that the British war secrtary had conferred with Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister.

Military sources said Daladier and Duff Cooper were "fully satisfied" with their mutual exchange of information which, they said, showed that Britain's rearmament was proceeding at a rapid rate and that French forces were fit.

The sources said the ministers agreed it was necessary more than ever to "synchronize" the defense efforts of the two nations in face of the increasing danger that the Spanish conflict may provoke a European war.

Ambassador Called.

Paris (Wednesday), Jan. 6 (U.P.).—France, alarmed by Germany's naval "war" against the Spanish loyalists, today summoned her ambassador to Germany, Andre Francois-Poncet, to Paris for emergency consultation.

The reprisals being taken by Nazi battleships in the Bay of Biscay and Berlin's newest ultimatum to the loyalists to give up the cargo of the German steamer Palos were regarded as constituting a grave danger to French shipping.

Francois-Poncet was summoned by Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and it was said Premier Leon Blum might cut short a Riviera vacation and return to Paris.

Nazis Mowed Down.

Madrid, Wednesday), Jan. 6 (U.P.). Several hundred Germans were among 3,000 rebel troops mowed down by machine-gun fire in fierce fighting around the village of Majadahonda, northwest of Madrid. Loyalists headquarters claimed today.

The war office said Gen. Francisco Franco's "grand offensive" against Madrid had been repulsed in the rocky valley of the Guadarrama Mountains, 13 miles from the capital.

Loyalist authorities said the companies bearing the brunt of the attack on Majadajonda, only 3 miles south of Las Rozas, were composed entirely of Germans.

The rebels succeeded in taking Majadajonda, but the loyalists reorganized their forces and retook the town, only to surrender it again under heavy fire.

The rebels drove on beyond the town in great waves, but were thrown back by murderous machine gun fire.

Loyalists said they lost 200 men in the battle, which raged for 24 hours and still was in progress early today.

Fascists in New Drive.

Madrid, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Fascist insurgents drove toward Madrid tonight from the northwest, apparently in an effort to link the forces outside the city with those which already had gained a foothold within.

Youth's Bail Fixed At $2,000 in Killing

Albert B. Hunt 2d, 25, of Huntsville, Md., was held under $2,000 bond last night by a coroner's jury in Hyattsville, Md., in the death of his 82-year-old grandfather, for whom he was named.

The grand jury will be asked to indict the Washington Navy Yard worker, who is alleged to have struck the aged man on Christmas Day, for manslaughter.

According to the State, young Hunt hit the retired farmer during an argument. The blow caused death two days later, and the prisoner surrendered to police.

He has been held in Hyattsville Jail since that time, and late last night had been unable to furnish bond.

Testimony of young Hunt's 14-year-old brother, Edward, who also lived at the Huntsville residence, proved damaging to the defendant. He testified he went to an outbuilding on the Hunt estate Christmas Day and saw his grandfather lying on the ground.

"My brother was standing there, too, and there was blood on his knuckles," he said.

Alabama Board Plans New Tenancy Program

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 5 (U.P.).—The Alabama Policy Committee met here tonight to map an agenda for the second of five regional hearings tomorrow which will attack the major economic problem of the South—farm tenancy.

While congressional leaders in Washington announced plans for the first frontal attack on the economic problem which has reduced hundreds of thousands of Southerners to virtual economic serfdom, leaders here pleaded for "precision" in remedial suggestions.

President Roosevelt's Farm Tenancy Committee concluded the first of its five hearings at Dallas, Tex., today and was en route here tonight.

Workmen at Buick transmission plant, Flint, Mich., gather about bulletin boards to read statement by Alfred P. Officers Must Dig For Keys to Lock Police Call Boxes

Policemen who find it difficult to get to their pockets through the layers of winter clothing they wear suffered a severe setback yesterday.

It all happened when the superintendent of telephones for the District complained to Maj. Ernest W. Brown that police patrol boxes were being plugged with match stems, preventing them from locking.

Investigation showed the locks were plugged so that the men on the beats would not have to fight through heavy clothing to get their keys when it became time to report to their stations.

Maj. Brown ordered the practice discontinued.

Men, Too Fidgety, Replaced by Girls On SSB Machines

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 5.—Because it found men more fidgety than women, the Social Security Board's records division here has replaced them with women operators on the card-punching machines.

Officials said today the change was made after observation showed men operators appeared bored and restless, frequently leaving their seats. Women, they said, proved capable of more intensive application at the machine keyboards.

The men were assigned to larger machines in the division's building here. They seemed to like their work better after the change, taking greater interest in the more complicated machinery.

The machines are used in the Social Security Board's task to setting up permanent wage accounts for some 26,000,000 American workers, covered in the old-age benefit program of the social security act.

Richmond Applies For Airport License

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The application of the City of Richmond for a State airport license under the aviation act of 1936 was docketed by the State Corporation Commission today and set for hearing February 1.

Hitherto the city, which operates Richard E. Byrd Flying Field, the large municipal airport on the Charles City road six miles east of the corporation line, has not taken out a State license because the municipal charter specifically authorizes Richmond to operate an airport.

Decision Asked Of Italy, Reich On Spain Stand

England Demands Immediate Statement on Flow of Troops to Franco.

of Gibraltar will be honored. This statement was in reply to British protest against the halting of the English merchant vessel Etrib by insurgent trawlers.

Five German pilots were killed when their planes were shot down by government guns, the Bilbao defense committee announced—adding further cause for irritation to Berlin. One of the Germans was identified as a member of the Nazi army air corps named Adolf Hermann, a Basque spokesman said. A sixth pilot bailed out by parachute and was taken prisoner.

The Spanish note to Great Britain asked the London administration to present the Palos case before the international non-intervention committee for judgment.

Germans Accused.

It accused Germany of violating the European neutrality agreement to which it is a party, "firstly, by supplying war materials to the armed rebel forces; next, by supplying them with contingents of troops, the 'volunteer' character of which was given away by the completeness of a German regiment; and finally, by provoking incidents in the sea."

The note did not mention Italian volunteers, but reliable reports in London that more than 10,000 Italians have reached Spain during the last two weeks—just before Italy affixed its signature to a Mediterranean friendship agreement with Britain—added to the London government's embarrassment and discomfiture.

An official Italian spokesman continued to deny the landing of the troops, however, and the Italian press even said Britain tacitly approved the Italian viewpoint in favor of the Spanish Fascist government by signing the Mediterranean agreement.

Informed London sources calmly denied the Italian inference that Britain was taking sides in the Spanish war.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's ultimatum concerning the Palos fell on deaf ears in Valencia. The Spanish note given Eden set out clearly the Spanish government's intention of keeping the Palos cargo because the ship "was detained in Spanish territorial waters with a considerable quantity of cellulose prepared for cannon charges, various radio telegraphic and radio telephonic sets for field use as war material."

The Spanish Fascists' pledge not to trouble British ships around Gibraltar still left British vessels in other Spanish coastal areas without guarantees of safety from the insurgents.

Gen. Francisco Franco, head of the Fascist junta, had not replied to a British protest over the shelling of the British freighter Blackhill by insurgent craft in the Bay of Biscay, north of Spain.

British warships were ordered to remain ready to move on short notice if the admiralty decide to use them in enforcing protection of British ships in Spanish waters. Seventeen men-o'-war were stationed around the war-torn country.

The Valencia administration called Germany's confiscation "a pretense of reprisals" with the real intention of preventing Spanish government traffic on the high seas.

Friday Is Dead Line.

Berlin, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The Palos incident will be considered closed by Germany by 8 a. m., Friday no matter what the Spanish Valencia government may decide to do, highly reliable informants made known tonight.

Marshal Werner von Blomberg, the defense minister; Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, air minister; Col. Gen. Werner von Fritsch, army chief of staff, and Admiral Erich Raeder, admiralty chief, were said to have prevailed upon Chancellor Hitler to adopt this course.

Madrid Has Submarines.

Paris, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The Spanish Socialist government now is equipped with "some submarines" and two sizeable warships ready to protect merchant shipping, Paris Ambassador Luis Araquistain disclosed tonight.

German warships will be torpedoed if they attempt any new attacks along the northern Basque Coast, Araquistain predicted.

Fascist Gen. Francisco Franco's present offense never will result in capture of Madrid, the Ambassador said.

"It will take a big force of men—much larger than Franco can muster, even with his foreign units," he asserted.

"There is no doubt the government is receiving Russian assistance."

The Socialists have begun to produce their own munitions and airplanes and could win the war "on our own" if foreign assistance to both sides were curtailed, he asserted.

G. M. C. Official Agrees to Meet Workers Today

Parley Revives Hopes of Halting General Strike in Industry.

Motors, Chrysler and Ford—had conferred secretly.

General Motors policy was evolved through numerous long-distance telephone conferences between William S. Knudsen, executive vice president, and other officials here, and general offices in New York.

The crisis was entered officially today by the Federal Government, when Assistant Secretray of Labor Edward F. McGrady offered his services of mediation to Lewis in Washington and three department conciliators planned a meeting here with union representatives.

The conciliators — James F. Dewey, John E. O'Connor and Edward C. MacDonald—were to meet with John Brophy and Adolph Germer, C. I. O. representatives on the U. A. W. A. board of strategy, and Martin.

While the union gathered its forces for a Nation-wide battle, backed by Lewis' powerful C. I. O., Martin refused to divulge his definite program and repeated that he wanted to solve the problem peacefully.

"We will give General Motors as much time as they want," he said, "to answer our letter listing our demands." He referred to a comprehensive letter mailed to General Motors yesterday by the "board of strategy" in which the history of the present crisis was reviewed and a list of eight demands for national recognition and collective bargaining were repeated. The letter was mailed almost simultaneously with issuance of Sloan's statement in New York.

"We are ready to meet General Motors at any time," Martin continued, "to deal collectively. We have no desire to see the situation continue one hour longer. The responsibility for it continuing rests with General Motors."

At a press conference late today Martin issued a blast against Judge Edward D. Black, of Genesee County, who issued the injunction in Flint Saturday calling for evacuation of Fisher plants by sit-down strikers.

The statement said union attorneys had been authorized to protest to the Michigan State Bar against Judge Black's issuance of the injunction in view of his ownership of stock in General Motors Corporation.

"It is true," Judge Black said today, "that I do own stock in General Motors. I am not going to get in any argument with the (Union) men. Apparently they are irresponsible and are hunting for an argument."

Although Judge Black refused to divulge the extent of his holdings, Martin said he held 3,365 shares with a present face value of $219,000.

New York, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The good faith of East Coast maritime strike leaders was sharply challenged today by a member of the strike strategy committee, who announced his resignation and was in turn denounced by the committee's secretary.

Glenn Moore-Skogman, who said he was leaving the striking insurgents to return to the International Seamen's Union, asserted the walkout here had "collapsed."

A few hours later, Jack Lawrenson, the strike committee secretary, said Moore-Skogman was "a scab of the 1934 strike."

As this outbreak of internal dissension among the strikers developed, Lawrenson proposed that the Federal Maritime Commission intervene in the strike. Representatives of employers already had suggested the commission had "ample authority" to intervene.

Union Acts for Peace.

San Francisco, Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Union forces took today what appeared to be a long step toward settlement of the costly 68-day maritime tie-up and both sides speeded up peace negotiations in the face of further calls for governmental action.

The Masters, Mates and Pilots Union announced a membership vote instructing its spokesmen to negotiate further on the shipowners' "final" offer of increased pay, union recognition, and a nondiscrimination guarantee but not a preferential employment clause such as all striking groups had demanded.

Since the union decided to talk peace in the face of the shipowners' declaration that they never would grant union preference, observers expressed hope the negotiators soon might get around the chief stumbling block in the whole controversy.

Asked whether she would attempt to bring Lewis and Sloan together for a conference, she replied that such a move now would only be "spectacular," but might be practical later.

After conferring with the President, she said she had not urged him to take any steps "at this time."

Later, she discussed labor legislation with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which has suspended the C. I. O. unions. She said she favored legislation embracing maximum hours, minimum wages and other labor reforms on a national scale. Green, following the conference, urged creation of a Federal agency with sufficient powers to compel employers to confer with workers for the purpose of determining maximum hours and minimum wages.

At the same time it was disclosed officials of General Motors are to be called here next week for hearings by the La Follette committee investigating charges of civil liberties violations. Records of the corporation have been subpenaed, members of the committee said.

The committee will resume a study of strike-breaking, labor espionage and interference with union activity, January 14. Public hearings were expected to continue several weeks and steel, rubber and other mass production industries will be investigated.

Flexible Program Urged.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins expressed opinion last night that Federal wage and hour legislation should be sufficiently flexible to avoid any harmful effects that rigid standards might impose.

To a press conference, Miss Perkins said she now was working on a "new approach" to a wage and hour law and that President Roosevelt had told her to go ahead with her exploitations.
